The last monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held on the evening of February 26, which had been set apart as carnation night. There was an unusually large attendance of the members, who all seemed mesmerized on seeing such a display of carnations.

The prize offered by Mr. Marshall, of Katonah, for three varieties, six of each, brought forward heavy competition. First honors went to James Stuart, Mamaroneck, who put up Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and Victory in great shape. Robert Angus was second, and Thomas Aitchison and W. Jamieson each received an honorable mention.

F. R. Pierson Co. exhibited two promising seedlings, one pure white and the other pink, and both were awarded certificates. William Roberts, of Ossining, also received a certificate, for a good dark seedling. Francis Gibson received a cultural certificate for a magnificent bunch of single violets.

The evening was largely devoted to revising the schedules and fixing the dates for the June and fall shows.

W. Jamieson.

Beverly, Mass. — William Murphy, who has had charge of the greenhouse on the Hugo Johnstone estate for some time, has resigned his position.

What are you looking for?

Just a greenhouse that "answers the purpose" or one that more than answers it? Do you want a house that will produce more blooms through December, January and February than any other house constructed any other way? Then buy a U-Bar. It is the lightest house built—and if it is lightest, it is most productive. It is a house with every possible decay point fully protected.

Send for fully illustrated catalogue.

The ideal construction for private estates, parks, public institutions and florists' showrooms.

A FLORIST is not a florist if he is not in touch with the REVIEW.—JACOB KALLENBACH, Erie, Pa.

WIZARD BRAND (TRADE MARK)

MANURES

Dried, screened and packed in bags of 100 lbs. each.

PULVERIZED SHEEP MANURE
PURE - UNIFORM - RELIABLE

A strong and quick acting manure, highly recommended for carnations and chrysanthemums.

SHREDDED CATTLE MANURE
Easy to Handle and Apply

Stronger and better in every way than rough manure. Lasts much longer on the benches. Unequaled for mulching and feeding roses, liquid manuring and mixing with bench and potting soil. Used by all the largest growers.

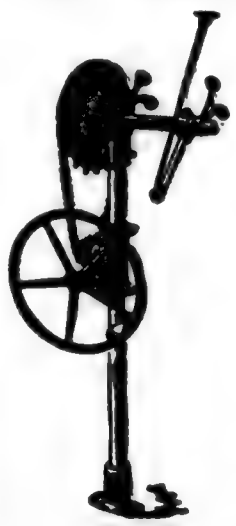
LOUISIANA RED CYPRESS

"The Wood that Won't Rot"

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve yea We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN.



Ask your dealer for Louisiana Red Cypress and if he hasn't got it, get him to write us, or write us yourself.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

ANOTHER PILLOW.

The accompanying illustration of a pillow is another of the funeral designs by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. The striking feature of this illustration is Mr. Fox's happy touch of individuality shown in the corner pieces. The pillow, made of white carnations, is relieved by four loose bunches of pale pink roses at the four corners. The lettering, demanded in the order, does not meet with Mr. Fox's approval. PHIL.

CORRECT DESIGNING.

The Commercial Side of Artistic Work.

After toiling half the night and consuming a goodly quantity of stock in planning an attractive set piece, a house or store decoration, the ambitious designer is often tempted to ask himself, "Does it all pay? Does my neighbor, Mr. Drudge, who fills his designs in mathematical rows, packs his flowers in vases like cabbages in a bin, and every morning fills his windows with samples of his entire stock, hit or miss, day after day without variation—does he make as much money, save more light bills and carry around fewer gray hairs than I?" The solution of this problem, for the average dealer, means removing one of the greatest sources of anxiety which he must confront.

Two Competitors.

Scarcely a day passes but what some phase of this question comes to the surface. One day the man who plans his work carefully and takes a pride in his attainments, which he knows are commendable and original to some degree, is able to secure some satisfactory job on the strength of his reputation, and on the next day he finds himself in the trough of the wave, while his competitor rides on the crest.

Mr. Drudge finds the days long while he fills every pillow-like cross, makes all his sprays alike, has a set rule for every decoration, and makes every window what we will call, for lack of a worse name, a stock window. The other man plans each piece individually, does not aim to repeat his decorative scheme except by request, and puts in art windows while he laments the flight of time and tears himself from work at night by main force.

Stock Windows and Artistic Windows.

Mr. Drudge, with his stock windows, exhibits everything he has and impresses the public with the fact that he has flowers and that is about all. The other man impresses the people with the fact that he has flowers, and, best of all, that he has the one kind or several kinds of flowers that he exhibits prominently and most desires to sell, together with the fact that he knows how to arrange them. But does he at the same time attract the non-flower-buyer? He has every chance to do so, by all the wiles of natural charm which he employs in his arrangements. A distinct impression is made upon the passers-by, which may be recalled months afterward, and the better a decorative idea is worked out in the window or in a design, the more distinct will be this impression.

The Beaten Path.

But somebody says, "How is it that the great majority of florists exhibit their flowers in stock windows and do their design work after the same style year in and year out?" It is most emphatically not because they have sat down and figured out that it pays in dollars and cents. They have never given it this much thought. It is because they cannot do any better, or perhaps we ought to be more considerate and say that they are too indolent to develop or improve, rather than that their wits are so short.

Leastwise, the one who follows the old, beaten path is allowing himself to be classed, not with old-fashioned, out-of-date people, but with poor designers, even though they be hopelessly in the majority. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

ANOTHER PILLOW.

The accompanying illustration of a pillow is another of the funeral designs by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. The striking feature of this illustration is Mr. Fox's happy touch of individuality shown in the corner pieces. The pillow, made of white carnations, is relieved by four loose bunches of pale pink roses at the four corners. The lettering, demanded in the order, does not meet with Mr. Fox's approval. PHIL.

CORRECT DESIGNING.

The Commercial Side of Artistic Work.

After toiling half the night and consuming a goodly quantity of stock in planning an attractive set piece, a house or store decoration, the ambitious designer is often tempted to ask himself, "Does it all pay? Does my neighbor, Mr. Drudge, who fills his designs in mathematical rows, packs his flowers in vases like cabbages in a bin, and every morning fills his windows with samples of his entire stock, hit or miss, day after day without variation—does he make as much money, save more light bills and carry around fewer gray hairs than I?" The solution of this problem, for the average dealer, means removing one of the greatest sources of anxiety which he must confront.

Two Competitors.

Scarcely a day passes but what some phase of this question comes to the surface. One day the man who plans his work carefully and takes a pride in his attainments, which he knows are commendable and original to some degree, is able to secure some satisfactory job on the strength of his reputation, and on the next day he finds himself in the trough of the wave, while his competitor rides on the crest.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Aftermath of Buffalo Meeting.

The tenth annual meeting of the society was concluded Thursday evening, March 18, with an informal dinner at the Iroquois hotel, Buffalo, tendered by the Buffalo Florists' Club.

The re-election of President Poehlmann and all other officers, except the vice-president, was by acclamation. It is the practice to take the vice-president from the locality chosen for the next meeting, so F. R. Pierson was selected as the representative of New York city, where the meeting of 1910 will be held. The executive committee consists of Wm. F. Kasting, Peter Bisset, Philip Breitmeyer, E. G. Hill, P. Welch and A. Farenwald.

Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa., were given a special award for a splendid exhibit of Rose Mrs. Jardine.

The Waban Rose Conservatories were given a special medal, as well as a certificate, for White Killarney. Their blooms were of exceptional quality.

In addition to the O. P. Bassett and Dorothy Gordon carnations, mentioned last week, Indianapolis sent its two novelties, Shasta, white, from Baur & Smith, and James Whitcomb Riley, yellow, from Bertermann Bros. Co. F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, showed No. 50, pink; No. 60, crimson; dark pink sport of Winsor and variegated sport of White Lawson. W. A. Manda showed his seedling carnation, called Pink Pearl. The carnation novelties thus were quite a feature of the rose show.

The Rose Society has at length put its foot down and set an example to other societies. The new rule is that no special premiums shall be offered until they have been deposited with the society. It doubtless applies to the considerable number of medals that were offered to the society, free, during the Buffalo meeting.

R. O. King thought that the comments on the big rose house at North Wales, made at the Chicago meeting last year, have recently been pretty effectively answered by the decision of the owners to put up another and still larger house on the same lines, 172x700 feet.

The public attended in goodly numbers and much interest was manifested. The exhibit of the F. R. Pierson Co. was the center of attraction, indicating that attention to artistic staging might well be given whenever the public is catered to at flower shows. The White Killarney in glass vases, the new nephrolepises and the mirrors made an effective combination, especially attractive because the competitive exhibits were in the regulation indurated fiber vases.

F. R. Pierson says the exhibition was one of the finest the society ever has had. The material in his own exhibit was worth $500. It was not a competitive display, so there was absolutely no other offset than the advertising value of so notable a group. Mr. Pierson never does anything by halves.

The more people looked at the show the more they were impressed by the high quality of the stock. While many classes did not fill, there was strong competition in others, particularly Beauties and Killarney.

THE BOSTON EXHIBITION.

Show of the Co-operative Market.

The first annual prize exhibition of the Boston Coöperative Flower Market, held in the Music Hall market March 20, proved a grand success, and a splendid lot of plants, cut flowers and floral designs were staged. The executive committee, on whose shoulders fell the burden of the show, were John McFarland, North Easton; John Barr, South Natick; Robert Montgomery, Natick; Albert Roper, Tewksbury, and Albert Batley, Maynard. They deserve much credit for the excellent exhibition.

The judges, who performed their duties promptly and satisfactorily, were: Roses, A. R. Hutson, William Malloy and A. Cartwright; carnations, L. J. Reuter, D. Carmichael and T. Capers; miscellaneous exhibits, William Walke, Daniel Whyte, Thomas Greaves and Samuel Neil; floral designs, F. H. Houghton, Albert Scott, F. Roberts.

The Roses.

Roses made a fine display, decidedly better than the Park Street market had three weeks earlier. Robert Montgomery captured firsts for twenty-five Killarney, twenty-five Richmond and twenty-five Bride, and was second for twenty-five Bridesmaid. W. R. Morris was first for twenty-five Bridesmaid and second for twenty-five Bride. Mr. Montgomery captured the Braman-Dow special for Killarney and Julius Zinn's cup for Richmond. F. R. and P. N. Pierson took the salesman's cup for fifty American Beauties with splendid flowers. For fifty Killarney, W. H. Elliott took first with magnificent flowers, much finer than he staged in Buffalo, according to visitors at the show there. They were the feature among the rose exhibits. For fifty Bride, Montrose Greenhouses were first; W. R. Morris, second. For fifty Bridesmaid, W. R. Morris, first; Montrose Greenhouses, second. The Schlegel & Fottler cup for the best new rose introduced in 1909 went to the Waban Rose Conservatories for a fine vase of White Killarney. S. J. Reuter & Son had good vases of My Maryland and Mrs. Jardine, and W. H. Elliott of the old Safrano.

Carnations.

There was a large display of carnations, some very good blooms being staged. For fifty white, Patten & Co. led with White Perfection; Elijah Cartwright, second, with Lady Bountiful. H. L. Shedd won for scarlet with Beacon; John Barr, second, with the same variety. For fifty light pink, out of ten entries, John Barr was in the lead with excellent Winsor; Littlefield & Wyman, second, with Enchantress. The last named exhibitors had the best fifty dark pink, showing Lawson with splendid stems and flowers; John Barr, second, with Lawson. Wilfrid Wheeler, with Fenn, had the best crimsons; B. P. Winch, second, with the same variety. John Barr and Patten & Co. had the finest variegated, each showing Variegated Lawson.

The T. J. Grey cup, for 100 flowers of an undisseminated seedling, went to A. Roper, for Bay State. Patten & Co. had the best fifty flowers of a seedling white, with a fine vase of Genevieve. L. E. Small won for seedling red, showing an unnamed crimson. Peter Fisher had the best fifty dark pink seedlings, with his No. 505, a full double flower. John Barr led in the light pink class, with an unnamed variety. A. Roper captured the prize for fifty scarlet, also for fifty variegated, the latter with Bay State. The Breck special, for 100 carnations, any color, went to John Barr, for a fine vase of Beacon. The special of the A. T. Stearns Co., for 100 carnations, mixed in six varieties, was taken by S. J. Goddard, who showed Priscilla, Lady Bountiful, Victory, Enchantress, Winsor and Fenn. There were several other excellent entries in this class. The Roper special, for 100 Fair Maid, went to L. E. Small, while the Barr special, for 100 Queen, was taken by Thomas Capers.

William Nicholson had a fine vase of Toreador. Backer & Co., E. Cartwright and Littlefield & Wyman all had fine white seedlings. S. J. Reuter had Ruby. Nelson & Johnson had a promising dark pink. A. Roper had two pleasing light pink varieties.

Violets and Peas.

Violets made a fine showing, the quality being excellent. Lewis Smith was first, for 100 Campbell; Lewis Small, second. N. F. Comley won for 100 Marie Louise and 100 any other double, with Neapolitan. J. H. Newman led for 100 Princess of Wales, with superb flowers, with H. F. Woods a close second. N. F. Comley took the Fiske Seed Co. special for a collection of violets, being the only competitor; his varieties were La France, Princess of Wales, California, Marie Louise, Campbell and Neapolitan. F. W. Fletcher showed Baronne Rothschild in good shape. William Sim had splendid vases, not for competition, of Boston and Princess of Wales.

For twenty-five snapdragons there were seven good entries, F. L. Hardy being first and S. J. Goddard, second. C. J. Harvey had the best twenty-five wallflower. John McFarland won for 100 lily of the valley; A. N. Pierson, second. For 100 white sweet peas, N. F. Comley took first with Mont Blanc; L. E. Small, second, with Florence Denzer. N. F. Comley was first and second for 100 pink, with Christmas Pink and Reselected Blanche Ferry, and first for 100 any other color, with a seedling, Violet Comley. William Sim made a grand display of eighteen named sweet peas, not for competition. E. J. Hearn and N. A. Hudson had the best fifty marguerites.

For 100 pansies, W. C. Ward was first; N. F. Comley, second. John McFarland received the novelty prize for an excellent vase of gardenias. E. Cummings took the Hall & Cole cup for display of vegetables grown under glass.

Plants.

Thomas Roland won the A. H. Hews & Co. special cup for the best commercial group of foliage and flowering plants. Acacias, genistas, boronias and Rose Tausendschon and Baby Rambler were extra good. William Walke had a well arranged group of plants, for which he was given the Boston Plate & Window Glass Co. special, offered but not competed for in one of the rose classes. In his group were some fine amaryllis, Begonia President Carnot, lilies and genistas. W. W. Edgar Co. had a good group of palms and other foliage plants, azaleas, genistas, etc., and included was a big specimen of Adiantum Edgari. John Striefert, of East Braintree, had a splendid table of genistas, also dracænas and geraniums, and J. Lister had nicely flowered ericas. M. B. Dallachie had English primroses. Mr. Coolidge, of Cambridge, had a nice group of azaleas, geraniums, etc. John Barr had fifty beautifully grown and bloomed cyclamens in 6-inch pots, taking first for twenty-five pots. These were splendid commercial plants, and were greatly admired.

Retail Exhibits.

The design work was an attractive feature, and brought out a splendid entry. Sidney Hoffman had the best arranged basket, using white carnations. Julius Zinn led ten competitors for a wreath, using croton and other colored leaves, Cocos Weddelliana leaves, freesia and antirrhinum with adiantum. Penn Bros. had the best of four shower bouquets of valley and green. The H. M. Robinson special, for table centerpiece, went to H. R. Comley, who used Narcissus Victoria and Adiantum Farleyense. The strong competition in the design classes would seem to warrant offering even more prizes for retailers another year.

In the way of miscellaneous exhibits, J. Tailby & Son had Formosa lilies, Asparagus plumosus variegatus and Asparagus elongatus; Thomas Stock, nice blue cornflowers; A. S. McDonald, a stand containing fine samples of leucothoe, galax leaves and hardy ferns; R. E. Lassman had excellent ranunculi; Daniel Iliffe, greenhouse fittings.

The sweepstakes, a cut glass bowl, value $50, offered to the winner of the most first prizes in money, went to N. F. Comley. The attendance of members of the trade and the public was large during the whole time the exhibition was open.

LIST OF SWEET PEAS.

A new catalogue of sweet pea names will soon be issued by the National Sweet Pea Society (England) and every new member of the society will receive a copy free. Old members, who had a catalogue in the "Sweet Pea Annual" of 1908, and non-members, may purchase copies for 12 cents, post free, on application to the secretary, C. H. Curtis, Adelaide road, Brentford, Middlesex, England. It is an interesting list, compiled by Miss Jessie Cuthbertson, and it is now no secret that this young lady is to receive a gold medal from the N. S. P. S. in recognition of her work on the catalogue.

SPRINGFIELD'S ROSE INDUSTRY.

[A synopsis of a paper by George D. Leedle, of Springfield, O., read before the American Rose Society at Buffalo March 18, 1909.]

In Springfield and its suburbs, the annual crop of small rose plants considerably exceeds 4,000,000, and in a season of liberal planting and favorable conditions for propagating, the aggregate would probably approximate 5,000,000. Quite a large percentage of this product is consumed by the concerns issuing mail order catalogues which go to the homes of the people, the remainder going to florists and nurserymen for the various purposes of retailing as pot plants, benching for cut blooms, bedding for ornamental purposes and landscape gardening, and for lining out in the nursery row to become field-grown bushes.

Propagation.

To accomplish this result 400,000 or more young plants from 1½-inch to 2½-inch pots are planted on the benches in rows five to six inches apart during the period from January to April, depending upon the ability of the sales department to make room by early shipments of stock. Pretty high temperatures are then maintained, the sunshine being largely depended upon for daytime heat, and from perhaps May to August, the wood is cut as it happens to come into just the proper state of ripeness, according to the judgment of the grower in charge, the number of successive growths and cuts varying from one to three according to the variety, season and demand for each particular sort. Occasionally, a belated lot of stock plants remains on the benches and propagation in the opposite season is resorted to, but this is only an emergency measure, the preference being to adhere closely to summer propagation.

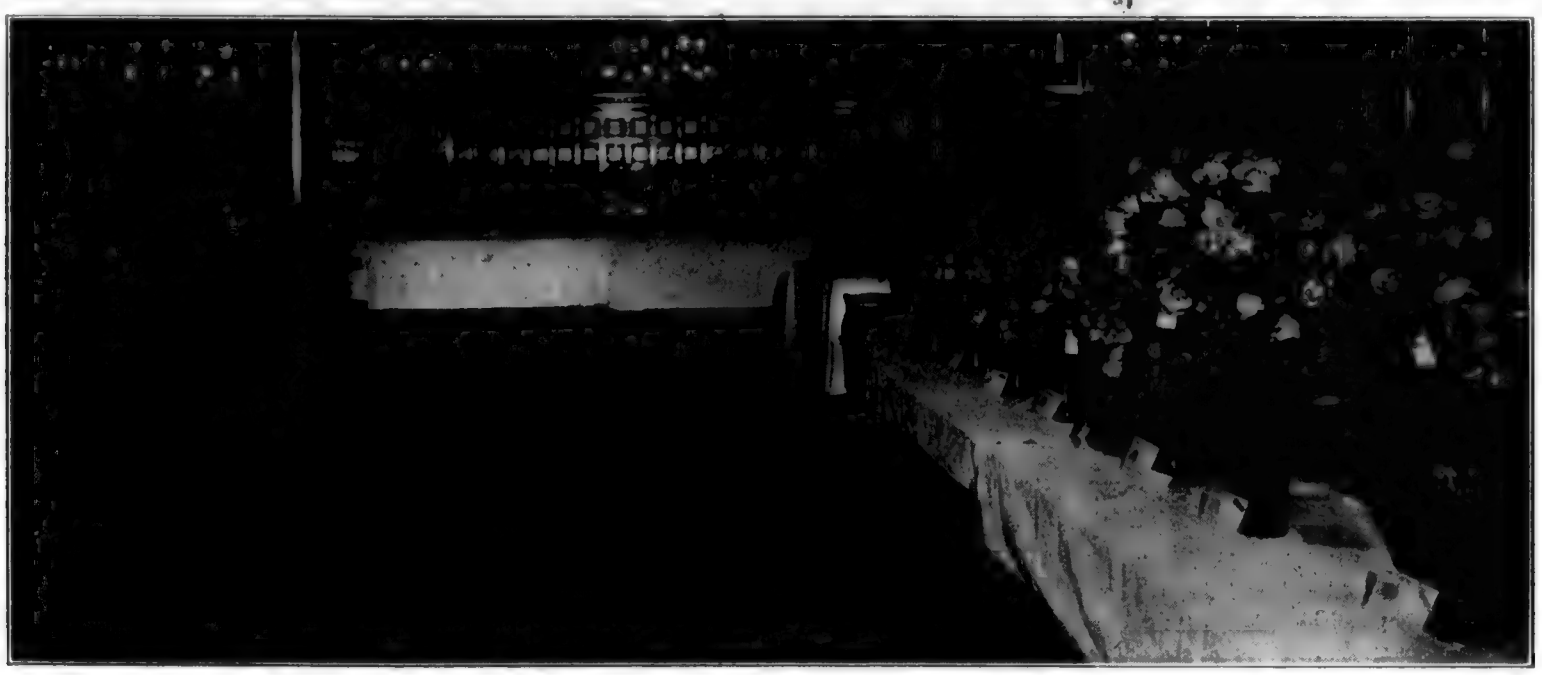
The wood is made up into cuttings of from one to six eyes, according to variety, rarity, condition, abundance, demand, season and various other governing circumstances, usually in the summer months, but occasionally the work is prolonged into the fall. The rooting is accomplished in hotbeds and requires from two to six or more weeks, according to variety and weather conditions, the percentage of the strike depending largely upon the skill and experience of the grower and his ability to master adverse weather and other conditions; but some percentage of loss is inevitable under the most favorable circumstances.

In the Pots.

Potting of the rooted cuttings is the next step, these going into 1½-inch or 2-inch pots, then set down on the benches, watered and carefully shaded for some days, until strong enough to endure the direct rays of the sun. During the autumn sunshine, substantial roots and tops are made, until the nutriment in the potful of soil is practically exhausted; then a shift is made to a 2-inch or 2½-inch pot, as the case may be, and occasionally to a 3-inch pot, by special order.

During the winter, the rose houses are run at a quite low temperature, approaching the freezing point for some sorts, and in fact some of the hardier sorts are allowed to sustain a genuine freeze occasionally. By this method the plants are given a rest during the winter season, and are permitted to take a fresh start at the approach of spring.

Herein, as held by the rose-growing fraternity in this particular locality, lies the value of the summer-grown, winter-rested idea, namely, that summer is the natural season for all things to grow and winter is the natural season for all growing things to rest. Consequently, by following this method, we are working in harmony with and not contrary to nature herself, and nature is proverbially kind to all who obey her laws.



Own Roots Used Exclusively.

The own-root method is likewise believed to be in line with nature, being followed exclusively here, and is found in the long run, and with the far greater majority of final purchasers, to produce the most satisfactory results for all concerned. For a retail catalogue mail order concern, the perplexities which would arise from the sending out of grafted or budded rose plants by the millions to amateurs all over the earth would be such as to make the life of the correspondent a burden. As to the comparative advantages of grafted stock for certain cut flower sorts, I would not be qualified to speak. While quicker results may be obtained, the observation of the most experienced members of the Springfield Florists' Club through many years leads them to claim with confidence that in the long run, all things considered, the own-root rose plant will outstrip its grafted competitor in the production of cut flowers, and is superior for all other purposes. They argue that being "on its own legs," it must necessarily run longer and faster than when tampered with by any artificial process.

In this particular market, the summer propagation idea has also the advantage of bringing the crops into shipping size, strength and condition at just the right times for supplying the various demands. Beginning in January, rose plants are wanted for sending by mail and express to the southern states for early planting, and this demand works gradually northward to northernmost Canada; about February the retail florists begin to secure a supply to grow on to proper size for market and wagon sales; in March the spring trade in general starts in and continues for some months; the nurseryman follows soon after, with his order for young plants for lining out about April; and the late planting and straggling orders continue into May and June. The method and season of propagation herein described provide in due course for all of the various wants mentioned.

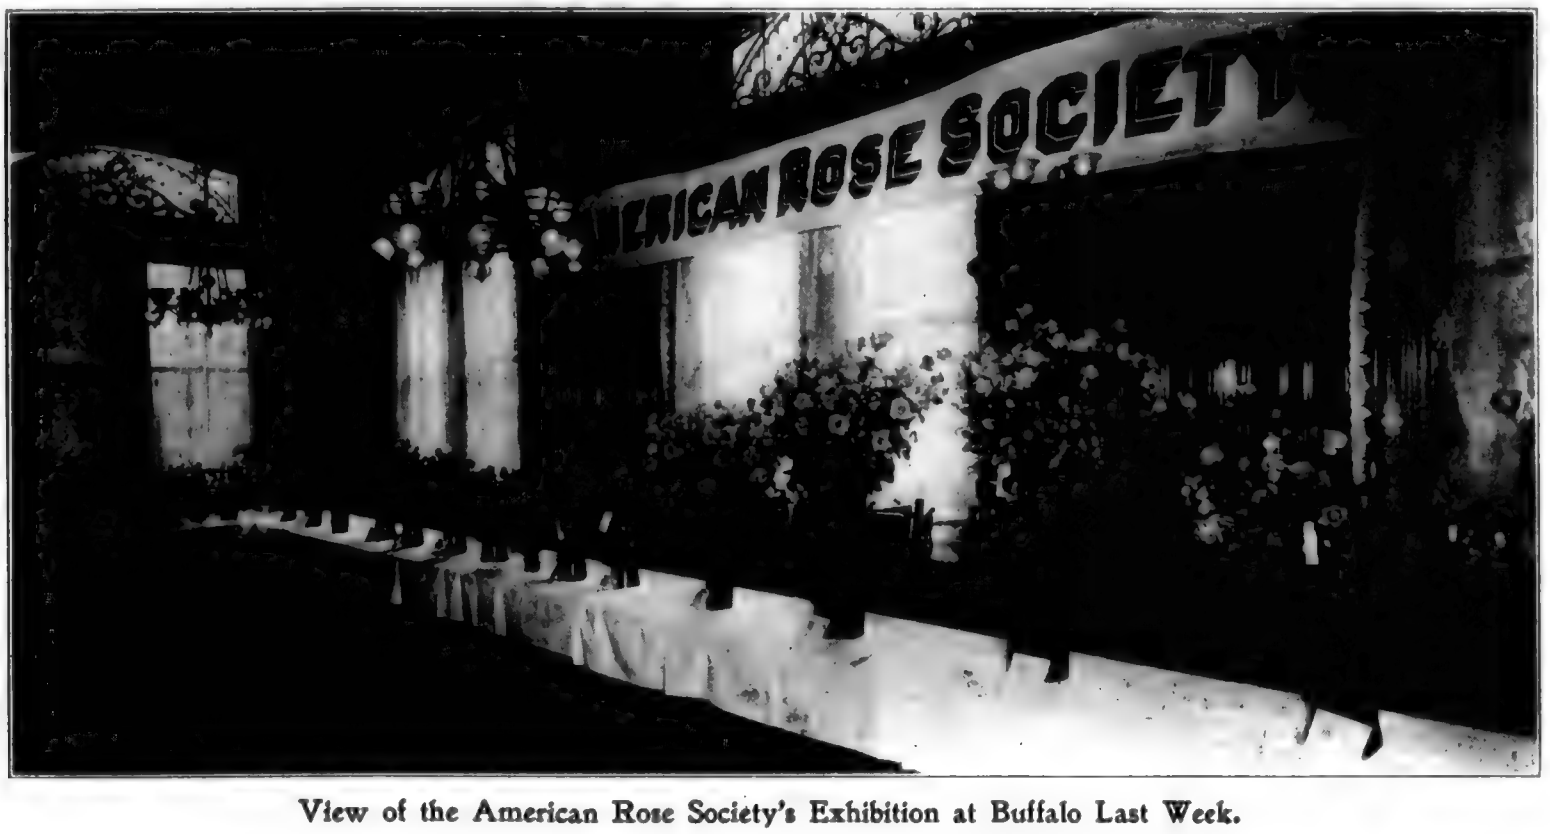
Co-operation Helps.

It is obvious that the best results may be obtained by growing roses exclusively in houses containing nothing in the way of soft or miscellaneous stock, such as may require different temperatures, and it is also generally conceded that the grower who is expected to know the habits of a hundred or two different sorts of roses on a commercial scale should have little else to occupy his attention. Hence the advantages of concentrating the undivided energies of the working organization to the growing of one particular line as a specialty.

In our community, containing a number of concerns all of which grow roses to a greater or less extent, the number of varieties being about 450, it will always be inevitable that at times there will be a short crop and a long demand, or vice versa, as to some particular varieties, this being affected by the variations in amount planted, the favorableness of the season for propagating and fluctuations in the demand from year to year. But frequently one grower is long on a variety of which another is short, and in a commendable spirit there is a disposition among the fraternity to be mutually accommodating in the interchange of stock, which makes possible the more complete filling of orders and assists in a practically general clean-up of stocks by or before the close of the season.

When and How to Order.



The buyer of rose plants wishing to secure the best of stock and certain varieties in particular should by all means place his order with a dependable grower several months in advance of the time for shipping; in fact, early winter is the best time, if not earlier, to engage roses for spring delivery. The plants can then be selected, shifted, set aside in cool houses, and brought to the requisite size, strength and condition for delivery at any specified time. Postponement in placing an order is frequently likely to cause disappointment by reason of certain desired varieties having been sold out and no further supply available until the following season.

In ordering rose plants, it is advisable always to state for what particular purpose they are wanted, and briefly the kind of stock expected. The intelligent grower or order clerk will then have a clue to guide the selection of plants in just the condition to make them best adapted to the desired end.

The substitution of a different variety under the label of a variety definitely ordered is a practice not to be tolerated in this present day of enlightenment, and it is entirely proper for the buyer to insist upon getting every item true to label, the shipper to notify him to such effect if unable to supply the true variety. On orders requiring quick shipment, it is well for the buyer to mention a second or third choice in case of varieties which he may not absolutely require, and this will facilitate the filling of many an order in the rush season.

At such a time, correspondence with a legion of customers would be an absolute impossibility, the catalogue being presumed to contain all necessary informa-

SPRINGFIELD'S ROSE INDUSTRY.

[A synopsis of a paper by George D. Leedle, of Springfield, O., read before the American Rose Society at Buffalo March 18, 1909.]

In Springfield and its suburbs, the annual crop of small rose plants considerably exceeds 4,000,000, and in a season of liberal planting and favorable conditions for propagating, the aggregate would probably approximate 5,000,000. Quite a large percentage of this product is consumed by the concerns issuing mail order catalogues which go to the homes of the people, the remainder going to florists and nurserymen for the various purposes of retailing as pot plants, benching for cut blooms, bedding for ornamental purposes and landscape gardening, and for lining out in the nursery row to become field-grown bushes.

Propagation.

To accomplish this result 400,000 or more young plants from 1½-inch to 2½-inch pots are planted on the benches in rows five to six inches apart during the period from January to April, depending upon the ability of the sales department to make room by early shipments of stock. CHRYSANTHEMUMS

MUMS IN 6-INCH POTS.

What results can be obtained from chrysanthemum plants grown in, say, 6-inch pots, sunk in a solid bed? Also what treatment, shading, fertilizing and watering do they require to grow for show purposes? F. P. F. C.

Chrysanthemums will carry fine flowers in 6-inch pots, and these are attractive features at many of the fall exhibitions. Cuttings should be rooted any time from now until the end of April. For very fine flowers, they should go in at once. Select varieties which are not tall growing. When rooted, place in 2½-inch pots and later in 4-inch, before shifting them into their flowering pots.

For the final potting use well rotted, turfy loam, dried cow manure and a little bone meal as compost. Press the soil firmly in the pots. Attend to disbudding carefully. When the pots are well filled with roots, and especially when the buds are set, feed alternately with liquid manure and top-dressings of a well concentrated fertilizer, like Clay's or Bon Arbor. Discontinue feeding when the flowers show color. No shading will be required until the flowers are expanding, when some will be necessary. If you can plunge your pots in the solid bed or stand them over it so that their roots can penetrate into it, all the better. Better and heavier flowers can be grown in pots than in beds or benches. Watch the chrysanthemum cultural notes in the Review for further practical information. C. W.

MUMS IN POTS.

Will you please give information through your columns about the best varieties of chrysanthemums to grow and sell as pot plants in New Jersey, and the best method of growing them, indoors or out? J. R. W.

I would say that in our section, as in his, New Jersey, pot mums are better if grown inside after July 1; in fact, they must be grown inside if the foliage is to be kept in good condition. They may be grown outside if planted out in the garden and carefully lifted and potted September 1, but it means too much work for the money realized if they are kept in pots outside. Some growers plant them out on the carnation benches inside from about June 1 to the time the carnations are housed, but as this latter operation is being done earlier every year there are not so many mums handled that way as formerly.

Keep the plants closely pinched down till July 1, if you want dwarf, neat stock. Some of the kinds that are naturally dwarf, like Polly Rose and Beatrice May, need not be stopped so late. I give here what I consider a good list to select from and which cover all the flowering season:

White.—Polly Rose, Beatrice May, Alice Byron, White Coombes, Nellie Pockett, Merza.

Pink.—Pacific, W. Duckham, Grace Whitney, Dr. Enguehard, Winter Cheer.

Yellow.—Golden Glow, Monrovia, Cheltoni, Old Gold, Mrs. W. Duckham, Bonnaffon.

Bronze.—Brutus, Glenview, Mrs. W. Wells, Harrison Dick.

Red.—Amateur Conseul, Mrs. Partridge.

In addition to the large flowered section, pompons and singles are being grown in increasingly large numbers as pot plants, the latter especially having been very popular in New York for the last two seasons. A list of twelve fine singles for pots would be about as follows:

White.—Irene Cragg, Rob Roy, M. J. Carlisle.

Pink.—Ladysmith, Grace Lambert, Nellie Coppard.

Yellow.—Pretoria, Golden Glow, Miss A. Holden.

Bronze and red.—Lily Valentine, Hilda, Mary Richardson.

A dozen good pompons for pots are the following: Baby, Delicatissima, Diana, Lulu, Jas. Boone, Sunshine, St. Illoria, J. Lagravere, Elsie Walker, Grace Darling, Eynsford Gem, Joppa.

In addition there is a type of early flowering kinds ably described by W. N. Craig in the Review of March 11, accompanied by some good illustrations, and J. R. W. might include those in his list. C. H. Totty.

Chrysanthemum Patty.

DORNER'S NEW MUMS.

The reputation of F. Dorner & Sons Co. does not rest solely upon the many excellent new carnations which have been distributed from its establishment at La Fayette, Ind. Chrysanthemums have had no small share of the attention of the Dorners, father and son, and from time to time a number of first-class commercial sorts have been distributed. This season they are sending out a set of three new sorts, a straw yellow, an Enchantress pink and a bright yellow with lighter reverse. As with most of the Dorner chrysanthemums, these are all incurved sorts. Dolly Dimple is the straw yellow. It is a seedling from Eaton, a large flower on a strong stem, the center petals incurving and the outer petals reflexed. It is a Thanksgiving variety. Patty is Enchantress pink and comes in early in November. It is a low grower, suitable for side benches. Merry Jane is an October sort, running over to the first days of November. In this set of new ones the Dorners think they have some especially good things.

EARLY FLOWERING POT PLANTS.

I notice in the Review of March 11 an excellent article by W. N. Craig on early flowering pot plants, in which he says that so far as he knows no commercial grower lists these varieties. I would say that I am listing in my catalog this year some ten varieties, including all the varieties he sends pictures of, so there is no longer need of sending to England for them. I was certainly impressed by them as I saw them in England last September; so much so that I am importing a large number of kinds for experiment here this year.

Many of the older kinds have been tried before, but I begin to think that one of the reasons of our previous poor success was that we disbudded to one or two shoots to a plant and one flower to a shoot. The plants simply refused to conform to our standard, whereas had we grown them in the way suggested by Mr. Craig we would have had a different showing.

A correspondent in northern New York mentions the splendid success he is having with this early flowering type and I feel convinced that we now know how to handle these varieties.

While they are generally called "English" early-nowering, it is as a matter of fact to the French raisers that we are indebted for some of the best kinds. I will not quickly forget the sight presented at the great Shrewsbury show in the last week in August, by a tent filled with great masses of these early-flowering varieties. One of the managers at that time told me that they did not encourage the mums, as they had so many other flowers, sweet peas, dahlias, carnations and everything in flower at that season, but he said they could fill a space equivalent to the entire exhibition, if they wished, with early flowering mums, so general has become their cultivation there. C. H. TOTTY.

AN ANNEX FOR VIOLETS.

I am building a greenhouse, 14x56, running north and south, and at its north end I am building a violet house, 8x22. The larger house will contain eight runs of 1½-inch hot water pipes, and I wish to know if this amount of pipe will heat the violet house sufficiently by simply opening the door between the two houses, without any pipe in the violet house. The eight runs of pipe will be on both sides of the larger house. J. G. G.

While such an arrangement as you suggest might possibly keep frost from your violet house, it is a poor way to heat it. Violets, to be grown successfully, must have an even winter temperature at night. This is impossible under your present plan. If you want to grow good violets, run at least a flow and return pipe through it. Better put in sufficient piping to maintain a minimum temperature of 40 degrees in the most severe weather. It is useless to attempt violet culture unless you can give them a non-fluctuating temperature. Hold it as near 40 degrees at night as possible, and they will do well. Run them a little lower rather than higher. C. W.

Chrysanthemum Dolly Dimple.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Show Pelargoniums.

With the pressure on bench space at present, it will be difficult to give show pelargoniums a proper amount of space. No more pinching should be done, unless it is desired to have the flowers quite late. Already some of the earliest plants are showing flower, but will hardly be in a salable condition for Easter. It is better to have them nicely in flower for Memorial day and the first half of June, when their rich colorings and attractive blooms prove a magnet for many plant connoisseurs. It is of no use bedding these out, for the flowers will not stand any strong sun, but for house decoration and piazza use they are fine.

As the pots are now getting well rootbound, afford some liquid manure once in four or five days. Although these plants do not as a rule require any staking, it is a good plan to use three or four short stakes in each pot to hold the leading stems intact. This prevents them from snapping off, as will sometimes occur when in flower. A cool, airy house, full sun and an abundant water supply are requisites for successful culture of these plants. Never allow green aphis to get a foothold, or your stock will be speedily ruined.

Easter Bulbous Stock.

So far March has not been specially genial, and the temperature has averaged but little higher than that of February. Bulbous stock, however, is well advanced, and should not require any forcing for Easter. You will secure much stockier plants of tulips, narcissi and hyacinths by keeping them in a coldframe, rather than moving them into a heated greenhouse. You can readily tell a week or so in advance of Easter whether your plants will be ready in season or not, and if they seem backward, place them for a day or two on a sunny bench in a greenhouse, but do not try any forcing tactics. This will bring them into bloom, but will give you lanky, spindling plants. Stake the hyacinths neatly. The other bulbous plants are, or should be, self-supporting. Remember that the double tulips, like the Murillo and Couronne d'Or, take a few days longer than the singles to get fully expanded. Keep the tulips all out of the sun once they start to expand, even if you have to lay sheets of paper over them.

Calceolarias.

May is the month when calceolarias are at their best. They will well repay any little special attention you can give them now. Put a few neat stakes in each pot as the flower stems start to push. You may have to use some a little longer later, but use the short ones to spread out the plants a little. If you are pushed for greenhouse space, stand your calceolarias on a bed of cinders in a coldframe. Shade the glass and protect with mats on frosty nights. The cooler calceolarias can be grown, short of freezing, the better they appear to do. A light spraying overhead on bright afternoons seems to suit them. Do not feed until you are sure the pots are full of roots and, after applying, if the plants show a tendency to wilt, discontinue feeding until they stiffen up again. Calceolarias should be shaded from bright sunshine, and want plenty of pure air at all stages of their growth.

Stevia.

Have you remembered to start up a few pots of stevia? If so, they now will be giving you a plentiful crop of cuttings, which can be gotten into a cool

It is of no use bedding these out, for the flowers will not stand any strong sun, but for house decoration and piazza use they are fine.

As the pots are now getting well rootbound, afford some liquid manure once in four or five days. Although these plants do not as a rule require any staking, it is a good plan to use three or four short stakes in each pot to hold the leading stems intact. This prevents them from snapping off, as will sometimes occur when in flower. A cool, airy house, full sun and an abundant water supply are requisites for successful culture of these plants. Never allow green aphis to get a foothold, or your stock will be speedily ruined.

Easter Bulbous Stock.

So far March has not been specially genial, and the temperature has averaged but little higher than that of February. Bulbous stock, however, is well advanced, and should not require any forcing for Easter. You will secure much stockier plants of tulips, narcissi and hyacinths by keeping them in a coldframe, rather than moving them into a heated greenhouse. You can readily tell a week or so in advance of Easter whether your plants will be ready in season or not, for a day or two on a sunny bench in a greenhouse, but do not try any forcing tactics. This will bring them into bloom, but will give you lanky, spindling plants. Stake the hyacinths neatly. The other bulbous plants are, or should be, self-supporting. Remember that the double tulips, like the Murillo and Couronne d'Or, take a few days longer than the singles to get fully expanded. Keep the tulips all out of the sun once they start to expand, even if you have to lay sheets of paper over them.

Calceolarias.

May is the month when calceolarias are at their best. They will well repay any little special attention you can give them now. Put a few neat stakes in each pot as the flower stems start to push. You may have to use some a little longer later, but use the short ones to spread out the plants a little. If you are pushed for greenhouse space, stand your calceolarias on a bed of cinders in a coldframe. Shade the glass and protect with mats on frosty nights. The cooler calceolarias can be grown, short of freezing, the better they appear to do. A light spraying overhead on bright afternoons seems to suit them. Do not feed until you are sure the pots are full of roots and, after applying, if the plants show a tendency to wilt, discontinue feeding until they stiffen up again. Calceolarias should be shaded from bright sunshine, and want plenty of pure air at all stages of their growth.

Stevia.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION CUT.

Edgar Bourne, grower for S. J. Ryan, Methuen, Mass., furnishes these additional figures of carnations cut from October 5 to December 31 last:

No. of plants.		No. of blooms.
2,688	Enchantress	12,100
960	Pink Lawson	7,870
936	Mrs. Patten	3,830
480	White Lawson	2,725
296	Red Lawson	1,150

ANOTHER RECORD.

Being quite interested in the figures as to cuts of carnations that have appeared in the Review, we were induced to look up our cut for the months of November, December, January and February. This includes only those recorded in our books as sold, but not those sold for cash from the greenhouse. We estimate the latter at about 1,000, which is a low estimate. The following, then, is our total cut:

Recorded in our books	11,320
Sold from greenhouse	1,000
Total	12,320

These were cut from 1,500 plants of the varieties Lawson, Enchantress, Lady Bountiful, White Perfection and some of the newer kinds. This would show an average cut of eight blooms per plant in four months.

We would like to hear from any one that cut a larger average per plant.

For the two weeks preceding March 15 we cut 2,967 blooms.

E. Friederichsen & Sons.

[The Review will be glad to hear from any other growers. The figures will be most interesting if the number of plants of each variety is stated, with the number of blooms cut of that variety.]

IT IS THRIPS.

I am sending some buds of Rose-pink Enchantress and hope you can tell me what the trouble is. We have fourteen varieties on the place, and all are badly affected, except Lady Bountiful, Winsor and Beacon. I am only a section man, but have had charge of these houses the last ten days. The plants are strong and otherwise healthy. The stems are extra long and the foliage all that could be wished for. I cannot find any thrips.

J. D. B.

The specimens forwarded showed plainly the ravages of thrips. Examination of the buds did not reveal any of the insects, but their work could be seen readily enough.

You will likely have a large task on your hands to rid the plants of this pest, and the sooner you begin the better. By this time you are having springlike weather and the critters will multiply at an enormous rate. The warmer it gets the faster they multiply, and the harder it is to eradicate them.

Nicotine is the most effective destroyer of this insect. Spraying is the least harmful to the blooms, and if a fair percentage of the blooms are good, let the bulk of your operations consist of this method. If, however, nearly all the blooms come specked, you might as well employ other methods as well. Dust the plants heavily with tobacco dust and fumigate every night for a week. A tablespoonful of cayenne pepper added to each pan of fumigating tobacco dust is supposed to make it more effective. Try it. I am surprised that Beacon and Winsor are not also affected. Both are favorites of this pest. A. F. J. B.

CARNATIONS IN GERMANY.

The Neptune carnation, of which I now have a good stock, is behaving finely. Its blooms are almost as big as those of Enchantress, and have a fine color.

I would advise you to put a note in the Review telling the American carnation raiser that in Germany, especially, all fancy colors are wanted. For instance, Mrs. Patten, though a slow bloomer, is grown here in quantities and sells always at a high price.

Of all new varieties, besides Neptune, we have found only Afterglow and Andrew Carnegie worth growing largely in this vicinity. Carnegie is really a good thing. We grow it very cool—about 48 degrees at night or lower. It bears only first-class blooms, which easily bring top price always.

The Review is much liked with us, and we are always looking forward eagerly for the latest issue. Arthur Moll.

NEW STOCK DISEASED.

I have been growing Joost for over ten years and they are entirely free from disease and getting better rather than running out, but when I get new varieties I find them all diseased. How can I treat them the first year to check disease? G. O. K.

Mrs. Frances Joost was a splendid variety in its day and would no doubt be grown now, but for its lack of size. It was a great favorite here until Mrs. Lawson and other larger varieties forced it out. No grower could grow it today and compete successfully with the top grades of modern varieties in any first-class flower center.

As for the newer introductions being diseased, we beg to differ with you. We do not pretend to say that none are diseased, but we do say, and most emphatically, that on an average the varieties introduced in recent years have been healthier by far, and the cuttings sent out stronger, than was the case at the time Mrs. Joost was disseminated. Any extensive purchaser of new varieties will corroborate this statement, I feel sure. You will also find that carnation growers in general have their stock freer from disease than was the case at that time. One sees little rust these days and little leaf-spot disease where carnations are the principal crop raised. Stigmonose, formerly called bacteriosis, still baffles the growers somewhat, but is no more prevalent than in the days of Silver Spray, Daybreak, Grace Wilder, etc.

Carnation Conquest.

Carnation Conquest.

Stem-rot, I believe, is causing far less damage, inside at least, than it did ten years ago—partly due to better methods in propagating.

As to treating young carnations to check disease, no cure-all has ever been discovered, that we know of. When you discover disease, treat according to the nature of the disease. Some time ago we recommended spraying the young stock once in two weeks with Bordeaux, as a preventive of the leaf-spot disease, as well as stem-rot. We also advised spraying during the alternate weeks with nicotine extract, to prevent aphis and thrips from puncturing and introducing the bacteria which cause stigmonose. We believe that neglect of the young stock, of course coupled with improper selection of cuttings, is the cause of ninety per cent of the stigmonose existing. Too often the young stock is neglected in one way or another until disease attacks. The plants are supposed to outgrow it in the field, but frequently do not. A. F. J. B.

CARNATION NOVELTIES.

Never content unless engaged in the distribution of some novelty, the management of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., anticipates a most enjoyable season next year, having arranged for the simultaneous dissemination of three new varieties. One of these is their seedling, Conquest, which was shown at Indianapolis for practically the first time. Another also was a center of interest at the national exhibition, Sangamo, shown by A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill. The third variety in the list is Mary Tolman, being grown by Hunt Bros., Norwood Park, Chicago. Messrs. Hunt Bros. and Brown will participate in the distribution of these varieties. The first is variegated, the second deep pink and one light pink, so that everyone can find something to his taste in the list.

The Rose Show.

The rose show was the principal feature in flower circles last week. All interest was centered there, and everybody joined to help the good cause. The show was largely attended by the public, principally from the fact of its being free. The tickets were distributed by the respective florists to their customers, and the press notices added to the attendance.

The banquet was the principal attraction of the week. It was held in the large rooms of the hotel, and was well attended. Wm. F. Kasting was chosen as toastmaster, and ably filled the bill. After the usual introductory remarks the following speakers were called on in the order named: August Poehlmann, Alex. Montgomery, Philip Breitmeyer, J. A. Valentine, F. R. Pierson, Benj. Hammond, H. O. May, J. W. Duncan, Frank Traendly, L. Cotter, W. J. Palmer, J. F. Cowell, A. Farenwald. The last on the program was a talk by Leonard Barron. Accompanied by the pictures, the lecture was most interesting, and held the audience every minute of the time. He was loudly applauded at the finish, for everybody truly enjoyed it.

After the show was over the flowers were distributed among the florists, who decorated their windows with them.

St. Patrick's day added quite a bit to the business, as many carnations were used for coloring. The windows were decorated in elegant shape, principally with oxalis. R. A. S.

PLANT GROWERS ON TOUR.

March 15 the members of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers visited the establishments of their members on Long Island to inspect the Easter crops. There were eighteen in the party and they traveled over the entire Long Island section in W. H. Siebrecht's touring car.

One of the objects for which the association was incorporated is to diffuse information as to pot plant growing. With this object in view the party called at almost every member's place on Long Island, and examined the plants in stock for the Easter trade. It was an instructive day for the members, and the information which was gathered made it well worth the time which was lost during their absence from their own establishments. The association has followed this practice for two years and has found it so profitable that it intends to continue the same indefinitely.

The party started at the place of Herman Dreyer, at Elmhurst, and from there proceeded to College Point and visited Anton Schultheis, and after seeing all the houses in that establishment they passed to Whitestone and visited Louis Dupuy, Pankok & Schumacher and the Hinode Florist Co. From there a long run was made to Jamaica, L. I., where they visited A. L. Miller's greenhouses, and from there the party proceeded to Brooklyn, where, at Piel Bros., a bounteous course dinner, with liquid refreshments, was awaiting them. After dinner they proceeded to the establishment of John Scott in Flatbush, thence to Peter Wagner's, Charles Zeller & Sons on Clarkson street, and also on Lefferts street, Brooklyn, thence to the houses of Louis Schmutz and Frank Manker. It took considerable time to go through each establishment, and when the rounds had been made it was after six o'clock and the party had enjoyed sufficient fresh air in the automobile to gather up a good appetite for the supper which was served to them in the Consumers' park.

The following members were in the party: Julius Roehrs, Sr., Herman Dreyer, Louis Dupuy, Frederick H. Dressel, Frank Manker, Herman Manner, A. L. Miller, John Miesem, Pankok & Schumacher, Herman C. Steinhoff, Herman Schoelzel, Anton Schultheis, John Scott, Louis Schmutz, Peter Wagner, Alfred L. Zeller and William H. Siebrecht, Jr., the secretary of the association. H. H. Lorenz had charge of the automobile.

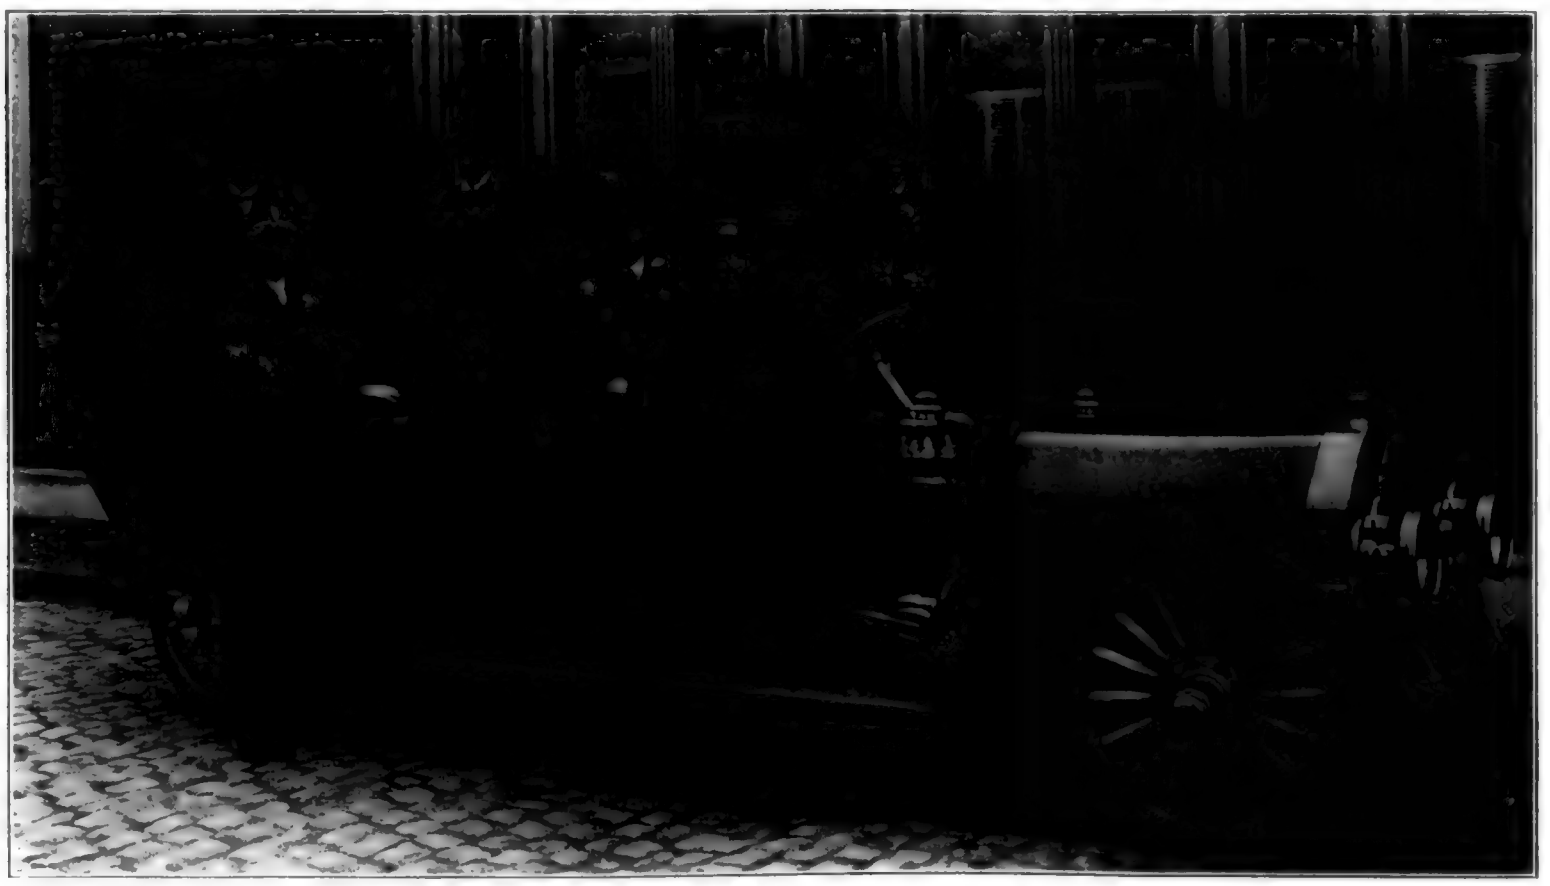
OBITUARY.

Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth.

Marie C. Hauswirth, wife of the late P. J. Hauswirth, of Chicago, died at the German hospital, in that city, Friday evening, March 19, failing to rally from the shock of a severe surgical operation performed two days before. Coming so soon after the tragic death of her husband, who died December 4, 1907, and after only a week's swift illness, the announcement of her death was particularly saddening, and to the son and daughter thus orphaned within a little more than a year the sympathy of the entire trade goes out.



Mrs. Hauswirth was without doubt the most widely known woman in the trade, as her husband was one of its most widely known men. Her maiden name was Marie C. Collnot and, at 20 years of age, in 1882, she married Mr. Hauswirth, then himself only 21, and employed in the flower store of Charles Reisig, one of the pioneers of the trade in Chicago. The store was then at 175 Wabash avenue. At a little later date Mr. Reisig removed to the Auditorium, then far south of the center of trade, occupying a part of the drug store on the Wabash avenue side. This was not at first profitable, and in July, 1892, Mr. Reisig, being well along in years, turned his business over to Mr. Hauswirth, dying within the year. Mr. Hauswirth later moved into a store on the Michigan avenue side of the Auditorium Annex, and in 1907 moved again to a new store in the latest addition to the Annex. From the day Mr. Hauswirth took up the business for himself, his wife was his working as well as his home companion. Never were two lives lived closer together. She spent a large part of her time in the store, was with her husband constantly on convention and other trips. Each was of that disposition that makes friends rapidly, and their warm friends are to be found by scores wherever florists, Redmen, or Elks foregather, from one end of the land to the other.

The funeral was held at the family home, 146 Clybourn avenue, Monday afternoon, March 22. There were many flowers and a larger gathering of members of the trade than has been seen in Chicago since that last sad duty at the same spot. The pallbearers were H. N. Bruns, Joe Curran, George Asmus, E. F. Winterson, Alex. Henderson and a Mr. Baine. Interment was beside the body of her husband at Rosehill.

Ernest Weber.

Ernest Weber, one of the well known growers for the Chicago market, died at 4:30 on the afternoon of Tuesday, March 23, after only forty-eight hours' illness with erysipelas.

Mr. Weber was born at Wurtemberg, Germany, forty-eight years ago. He came to this country while a young man and has been a familiar figure in the trade in Chicago for many years. For a long time he was in partnership with his brother, Fred, the firm being known as Weber Bros. Their first business venture for themselves was in what is known as the Grossman place, on Lincoln avenue, which they rented and operated with notable success for a number of years. As growers of Beauties, tea roses and lilies the brothers had no superiors and not many equals. A few years ago it was found that larger glass area was necessary to provide scope for the abilities of two such good growers and the partnership was dissolved, Fred Weber building some Beauty houses for himself, not far away, and Ernest Weber continuing to operate the Grossman place, growing teas and lilies. Not many growers for the Chicago market have been so uniformly successful as he in forcing longiflorums for the Easter demand. Mr. Weber is survived by an invalid wife. They had no children.

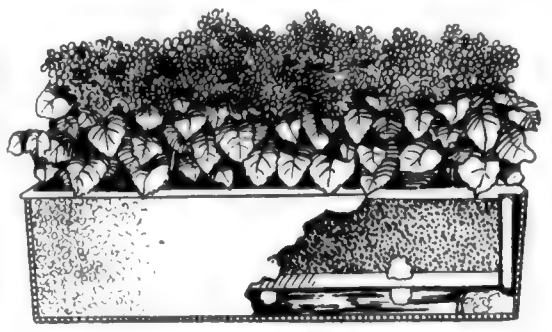
The funeral is to be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence at 2386 Lincoln avenue, adjoining the greenhouse establishment. Mr. Weber was well liked in the great greenhouse community in which he lived and worked, and there will be a large attendance at the funeral.



A SALABLE WINDOW BOX.

A few years ago a Chicago specialty house put on the market what it styled a self-watering flower box, which has proven a good seller in flower stores and with those who do spring bedding. The box is of the style of the well known reservoir vases used in cemeteries. As shown in the accompanying illustration, the water is in a space in the bottom of the box and is drawn up to the soil through sponges. The manufacturer says "retail florists all over the country have found the box a good seller, because plants in it do better in the hands of an inexperienced person than they do in any other kind of box; an expert grower might not find a reservoir an advantage, but to the plants of the person who waters them today and forgets them tomorrow, it is a life-saver. The reservoir holds sufficient water to supply plants for several days and the soil on the top does not bake and harden, giving the plants a good lease of life in spite of the neglect which falls to the lot of much of the stock florists sell for house decoration or to plant in window or piazza boxes."

The manufacturer of this box is the Illinois Heater & Mfg. Co., and since putting the box on the market it has three times been compelled to move to larger quarters, the factory now being in its own building at Downers Grove, with a city office at 31 Dearborn street, Chicago. The firm takes a broad view of the business and says not many florists appreciate the extent of the business which may be done in filling window and porch boxes, where provision is made to insure the satisfaction of the customer. They say that every city in America is increasing its use of this sort of embellishment, and that the wise florist will not fail to profit by the increase which they believe is sure to come in future years, until the outdoor flower decorations in this country will rival those of European cities.

A VISIT TO ASCHMANN.

Godfrey Aschmann's greenhouses on Ontario street, Philadelphia, are crowded to overflowing with all the popular varieties of Easter plants; crowded from roof to cellar. You may think that this is a domestic rather than a floricultural expression, but if you saw the greenhouses at Godfrey Aschmann's you would understand perfectly, as the less valuable plants are relegated to the cellar for the time being, while the smaller sizes coming on for spring use are arranged in tiers, until their more fortunate Easter brothers and sisters have departed.

Godfrey Aschmann has learned what the American people want, and caters to them through the florists, offering them the most popular varieties and sizes. Lilies are there in abundance, with an average, Mr. Aschmann said, of from four to five flowers. Lilies are looked upon with favor; they are always in demand; in fact, the demand has so grown that buyers who want lilies only are courteously urged to offer their customers other varieties of Easter plants also. When the popular price question was brought up on lilies Mr. Aschmann said 10 cents, just as they come, has been maintained for many Easters, never failing to sweep the benches. Azaleas are present in great quantities, Vander Cruyssen and Vervæneana being reinforced by a number of other fancy sorts well set with buds. Cinerarias are in great profusion, with large heads of bloom. Tulips, hyacinths and the double daffodil, Narcissus Von Sion, were just coming in from the frames in immense quantities. The greenery is represented by palms, ferns and araucarias. Most noticeable among the ferns are a pretty lot of Nephrolepis Amerpohlii, christened the Philadelphia lace fern.

An immense pile of packing boxes reaching skyward bears silent testimony to the heavy business that will be done during the next two weeks.

EASTER LILIES FOR SHIPPING.

Kindly explain how to pack safely for shipping a dozen pots of blooming Easter lilies. The distance is only twenty-five miles, with no change of cars. S. K.

To send the plants this short distance no special packing will be required. Be sure you work plenty of excelsior, or other packing, between the pots, and stake up each plant securely. Also, remove all pollen from the flowers, to prevent their becoming discolored. Securely nail uprights from the corners of the box as high as the plants and fasten two rows of light laths on the sides and two or three over the tops of the plants. To prevent any possibility of flowers becoming bruised, roll tissue paper around them. As a rule, when lilies are sent short distances they are sent entirely unprotected, provided weather is mild. Expressmen use more care in handling them when not crated, at least for short distances. If weather is cold, you will require to lay some soft paper over the flowers and tack some of a heavier nature over the framework of the crate.

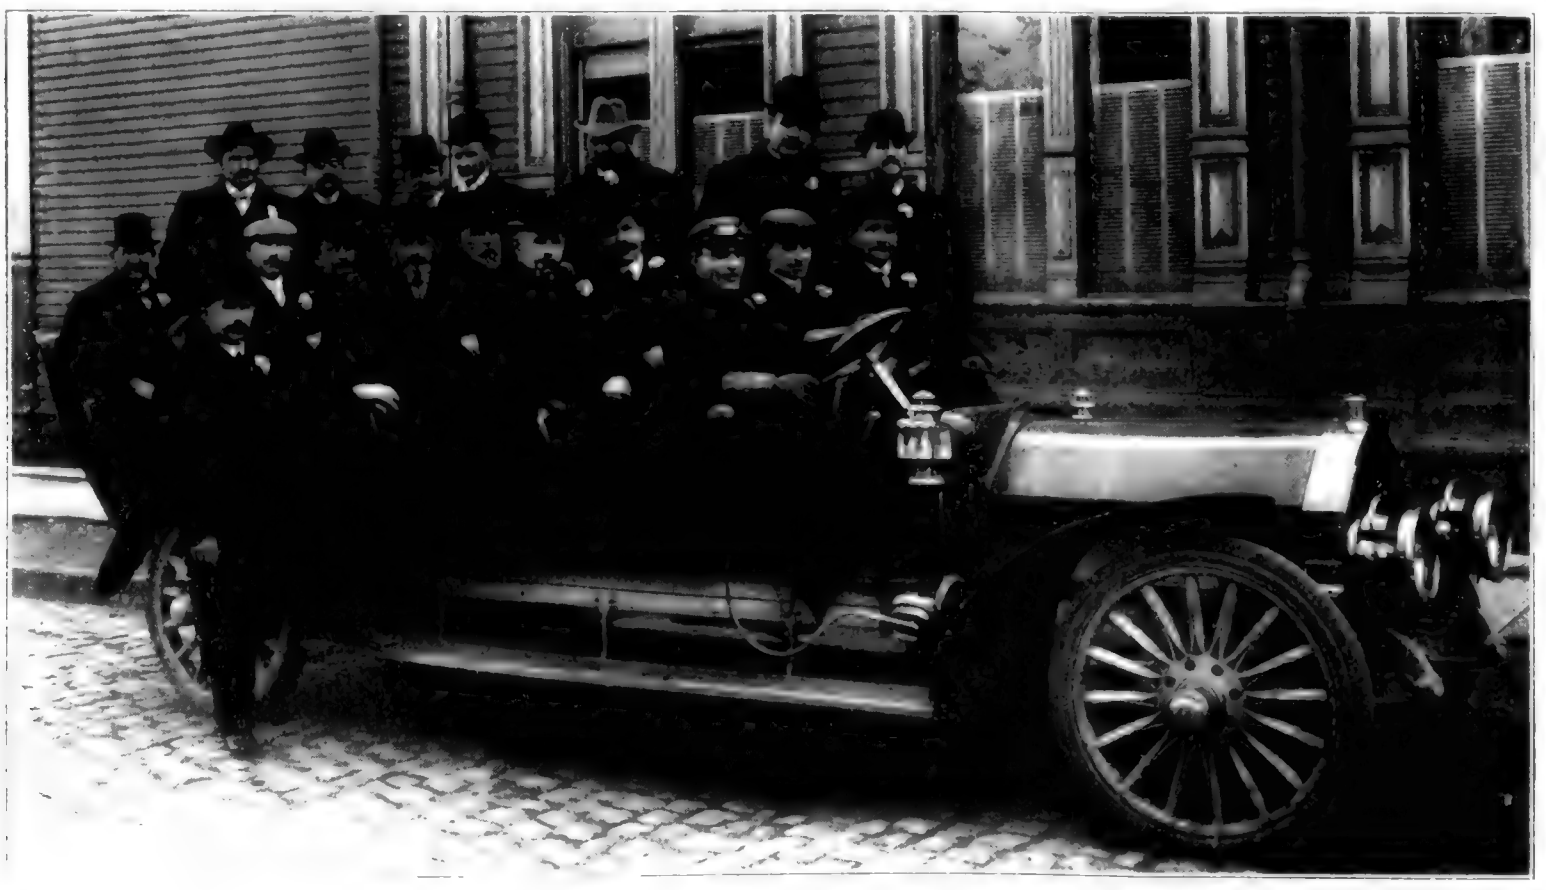
Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth.

Marie C. Hauswirth, wife of the late P. J. Hauswirth, of Chicago, died at the German hospital, in that city, Friday evening, March 19, failing to rally from the shock of a severe surgical operation performed two days before. Coming so soon after the tragic death of her husband, who died December 4, 1907, and after only a week's swift illness, the announcement of her death was particularly saddening, and to the son and daughter thus orphaned within a little more than a year the sympathy of the entire trade goes out.



Mrs. Hauswirth was without doubt the most widely known woman in the trade, as her husband was one of its most widely known men. Her maiden name was Marie C. Collnot and, at 20 years of age, in 1882, she married Mr. Hauswirth, then himself only 21, and employed in the flower store of Charles Reisig, one of the pioneers of the trade in Chicago. The store was then at 175 Wabash avenue. At a little later date Mr. Reisig removed to the Auditorium, then far south of the center of trade, occupying a part of the drug store on the Wabash avenue side. This was not at first profitable, and in July, 1892, Mr. Reisig, being well along in years, turned his business over to Mr. Hauswirth, dying within the year. Mr. Hauswirth later moved into a store on the Michigan avenue side of the Auditorium Annex, and in 1907 moved again to a new store in the latest addition to the Annex. From the day Mr. Hauswirth took up the business for himself, his wife was his working as well as his home companion. Never were two lives lived closer together. She spent a large part of her time in the store, was with her husband constantly on convention and other trips. Each was of that disposition that makes friends rapidly, and their warm friends are to be found by scores wherever florists, Red men, or Elks foregather, from one end of the land to the other.

The funeral was held at the family home, 146 Clybourn avenue, Monday afternoon, March 22. There were many flowers and a larger gathering of members of the trade than has been seen in Chicago since that last sad duty at the same spot. The pallbearers were H. N. Bruns, Joe Curran, George Asmus, E. F. Winterson, Alex. Henderson and a Mr. Baine. Interment was beside the body of her husband at Rosehill.

Ernest Weber.

Ernest Weber, one of the well known growers for the Chicago market, died at 4:30 on the afternoon of Tuesday, March 23, after only forty-eight hours' illness with erysipelas.

Mr. Weber was born at Wurtemberg, Germany, forty eight years ago. He came to this country while a young man and has been a familiar figure in the trade in Chicago for many years. For a long time he was in partnership with his brother, Fred, the firm being known as Weber Bros. Their first business venture for themselves was in what is known as the Grossman place, on Lincoln avenue, which they rented and operated with notable success for a number of years. As growers of Beauties, tea roses and lilies the brothers had no superiors and not many equals. A few years ago it was found that larger glass area was necessary to provide scope for the abilities of two such good growers and the partnership was dissolved, Fred Weber building some Beauty houses for himself, not far away, and Ernest Weber continuing to operate the Grossman place, growing teas and lilies. Not many growers for the Chicago market have been so uniformly successful as he in forcing longiflorums for the Easter demand. Mr. Weber is survived by an invalid wife. They had no children.

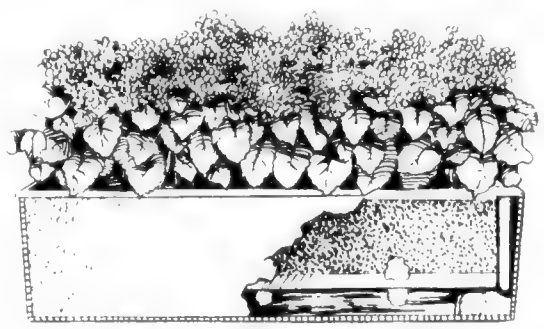
The funeral is to be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence at 2386 Lincoln avenue, adjoining the greenhouse establishment. Mr. Weber was well liked in the great greenhouse community in which he lived and worked, and there will be a large attendance at the funeral.



A SALABLE WINDOW BOX.

A few years ago a Chicago specialty house put on the market what it styled a self-watering flower box, which has proven a good seller in flower stores and with those who do spring bedding. The box is of the style of the well known reservoir vases used in cemeteries. As shown in the accompanying illustration, the water is in a space in the bottom of the box and is drawn up to the soil through sponges. The manufacturer says "retail florists all over the country have found the box a good seller, because plants in it do better in the hands of an inexperienced person than they do in any other kind of box; an expert grower might not find a reservoir an advantage, but to the plants of the person who waters them today and forgets them tomorrow, it is a life-saver. The reservoir holds sufficient water to supply plants for several days and the soil on the top does not bake and harden, giving the plants a good lease of life in spite of the neglect which falls to the lot of much of the stock florists sell for house decoration or to plant in window or piazza boxes."

The manufacturer of this box is the Illinois Heater & Mfg. Co., and since putting the box on the market it has three times been compelled to move to larger quarters, the factory now being in its own building at Downers Grove, with a city office at 31 Dearborn street, Chicago. The firm takes a broad view of the business and says not many florists appreciate the extent of the business which may be done in filling window and porch boxes, where provision is made to insure the satisfaction of the customer. They say that every city in America is increasing its use of this sort of embellishment, and that the wise florist will not fail to profit by the increase which they believe is sure to come in future years, until the outdoor flower decorations in this country will rival those of European cities.

A VISIT TO ASCHMANN.

Godfrey Aschmann's greenhouses on Ontario street, Philadelphia, are crowded to overflowing with all the popular varieties of Easter plants; crowded from roof to cellar. You may think that this is a domestic rather than a floricultural expression, but if you saw the greenhouses at Godfrey Aschmann's you would understand perfectly, as the less valuable plants are relegated to the cellar for the time being, while the smaller sizes coming on for spring use are arranged in tiers, until their more fortunate Easter brothers and sisters have departed.

Godfrey Aschmann has learned what the American people want, and caters to them through the florists, offering them the most popular varieties and sizes. Lilies are there in abundance, with an average, Mr. Aschmann said, of from four to five flowers. Lilies are looked upon with favor; they are always in demand; in fact, the demand has so grown that buyers who want lilies only are courteously urged to offer their customers other varieties of Easter plants also. When the popular price question was brought up on lilies Mr. Aschmann said 10 cents, just as they come, has been maintained for many Easters, never failing to sweep the benches. Azaleas are present in great quantities, Vander Cruyssen and Vervæneana being reinforced by a number of other fancy sorts well set with buds. Cinerarias are in great profusion, with large heads of bloom. Tulips, hyacinths and the double daffodil, Narcissus Von Sion, were just coming in from the frames in immense quantities. The greenery is represented by palms, ferns and araucarias. Most noticeable among the ferns are a pretty lot of Nephrolepis Amerpohlii, christened the Philadelphia lace fern.

An immense pile of packing boxes reaching skyward bears silent testimony to the heavy business that will be done during the next two weeks.

EASTER LILIES FOR SHIPPING.

Kindly explain how to pack safely for shipping a dozen pots of blooming Easter lilies. The distance is only twenty five miles, with no change of cars. S. K.

To send the plants this short distance no special packing will be required. Be sure you work plenty of excelsior, or other packing, between the pots, and stake up each plant securely. Also, remove all pollen from the flowers, to prevent their becoming discolored. Securely nail uprights from the corners of the box as high as the plants and fasten two rows of light laths on the sides and two or three over the tops of the plants. To prevent any possibility of flowers becoming bruised, roll tissue paper around them. As a rule, when lilies are sent short distances they are sent entirely unprotected, provided weather is mild. Expressmen use more care in handling them when not crated, at least for short distances. If weather is cold, you will require to lay some soft paper over the flowers and tack some of a heavier nature over the framework of the crate.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 17 to 20, 1909.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THE Ladies' Home Journal for April contains six halftone reproductions of brides' bouquets made by W. J. Palmer, Buffalo.

IT is surprising how many florists still write letters ordering stock and use plain paper. They forget that "the apparel oft proclaims the man."

J. A. VALENTINE thinks that if there ever has been exhibited a vase of roses more notable than the Killarney staged at Chicago last year by Wm. H. Elliott, it was A. Farenwald's Richmond, shown at Buffalo.

IT was a false alarm in the matter of the duty on greenhouse glass being changed. Large sizes of window glass are to be admitted at a lower rate if the new tariff bill is not amended, but greenhouse sizes remain the same. What the bill provides for horticultural imports is shown on page 41 of this issue.

THE Gardeners' Chronicle, London, has been following the lead set by the REVIEW in 1905 by publishing in serial form an alphabetical list of "The Pronunciation of Plant Names." The list has now been reprinted in book form, for sale at 1 shilling, or 28 cents if by post.

LETTER FROM MRS. SCOTT.

Ever since the movement was started to erect a monument to my beloved husband, I wanted to thank you for your thoughts. The idea, starting as it did in the minds of a few, soon spread into many. And later, at Niagara Falls, when in so short a time a sufficient sum was raised for the placing of the stone, I felt that it was true and sincere appreciation of that which he had given you. Whatever he did for the profession of floriculture and for the florists themselves, he did with all the willingness he could put forth. Shakespeare said, "The evil that men do lives after them; the good is oft interred with their bones." Although true in cases, it was not so with my dear husband, for no greater tribute could be paid to the dead than that which you have erected to his memory. When, as in this case, one dear in memory to you, we stand and read what you have said, which is all that could be said of any man, however great in the hall of fame, the massive stone and coldness of the situation disappear and only that remains which means so much to us.

I wish I could thank you, one and all, for myself and family, but I will resort to the press, which has been so kind in this case.

MRS. WM. SCOTT AND FAMILY.

THE REVIEW DID IT.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

We have had a nice trade this season on pansies—the Review did it.

The Great Central Market.

The feature of the market for the last ten days has been the active demand for carnations and the consequent good prices. White carnations have been in special demand. This was expected to be the case at St. Patrick's day, when the stock was wanted for dyeing, but it has been a surprise that the special call for white has continued uninterruptedly ever since, and white stock has commanded a premium. Where white has been in special demand and selling above the general run of varieties, Enchantress has been in most abundant supply and selling lower than the dark pinks or reds. All carnations have, however, been in much less supply than a year ago at this time, and prices have been averaging well above those of this date last year.

When one of the principal items of supply is in light crop, it nearly always means a good general business and increased demand for the more abundant flowers. This has been the case in the last week. Because carnations were held at so much stiffer prices than at the beginning of the month, the demand has in part turned to roses, which are in larger supply, and to bulbous stock and other flowers, which were in such large supply that a better sale did not affect prices.

The general report is that the week from March 15 to 21 was one of the best this market has experienced in years. The current week started off with good business, but with increased supply, especially of roses, and a tendency toward somewhat weaker prices.

A few consecutive days of bright sun have done much to bring out the stock. Even Beauties, the one item which has been in short supply for some time, have come on freely and the quality also has been improved. Killarney is abundant, but with many growers the color is pale; otherwise the stock is fine. The market never has had better Maid and Bride than at the present time, and they are selling well, as good stock almost always does. Richmond also is in fine shape, though not now as abundant as the other varieties.

Sweet peas of first-class quality have enjoyed an active demand. Supply fell off last week, but is again larger, because of continued good weather, and the finest stock is offered at moderate prices. Violets are not in so large supply as has been the case. The shipments from Rhinebeck have fallen off, but there still are large supplies of the locally grown singles. A large business is being done in violets, but at cheap prices.

Bulbous stock is moving slowly. Tulips command little attention and daffodils and the outdoor jonquils hang fire until Friday evening and Saturday morning, when they are cleaned up at low rates by the street salesmen and the small stores that do the bulk of their week's business Saturday afternoon and Sunday.

Green goods have passed to the short side. The decorations for spring openings have called for many strings of smilax and asparagus, which are not being cut in quantity at present; the strings are short in length, as well as in quantity. Smilax has gone up sharply. Asparagus bunches never are in oversupply. The price of ferns has been advanced, but galax still is sold at the old rates.

Easter Prospects.

The prospects for Easter now form the staple subject of conversation in the market. There is no question as to the demand; it certainly will be large. The majority incline to the opinion that stock will be in abundant supply, but there are one or two dissenting voices. It is conceded roses are likely to be in good crop, but some houses think Beauties will be scarce; others say they will be in full crop. Carnations have been selling above last year, because of short supply, and some wholesalers cannot see where a crop is to be made before Easter, but others are figuring on having enough to go around, although practically all the houses expect prices will be above those of last Easter, when they were unusually low. There will be the usual quantities of lilies, but there will be much difference in the quality of the stock. Most of the plants will give good flowers, but the stems will be anywhere from one foot to four feet long, and there will be more of the shorts than of the long stock. Bulbous flowers will not be in as large supply as last year and this is expected to do something toward strengthening the market for other stock.

Various Notes.

Ernest Weber died March 23, after only two days' illness. Details are in the obituary column.

The trade heard with keen regret of the death of Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth. The only word of her illness which had reached the market was in this column of the Review last week, and her death followed within thirty-six hours. The obituary column contains further particulars.

Shamrocks in small pots were offered in large quantities for St. Patrick's day. Most of the retail stores bought liberally and a good many were stuck. The green carnations sold much better, but it was found that Enchantress dyed green was not acceptable in place of white, even for the Greek trade.

A. L. Randall Co. reports a good crop of Beauties again on and says Killarney is better than at any time previously this season. Emil Buettner has no bulb stock on his place this year, except lilies.

George Reinberg says that Beauties will be in good crop at Easter, as well as other roses, and that in his neighborhood the growers will get good cuts of carnations, the bright days making stock very fast at this season.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., is one of those who believe carnations will be in large supply by Easter.

Fred Lautenschlager was taken ill at Geneva, March 20, and has spent the days since then at the Colonial hospital in that town.

Joseph Ziska is reported to have renewed the lease of the Chicago Rose Co., at 56 Wabash avenue.

Philip, the mail man who has served the wholesalers in the Atlas block for many years, handed out the mail to their messengers at the post-office Sunday, March 21, and was dead Monday morning.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has a nice crop of Bon Silene roses, something not often seen in this market. They also now are cutting a large crop of forced white lilac.

W. E. Wadsworth, formerly with Lange and Muir and later with Wittbold, is now a partner in the Columbia Novelty Mfg. Co.

Wietor Bros. say that the Mrs. Jar-

EASTER Longiflorum Giganteums

Our reputation as to these flowers for Easter has been established for years. Grown by the most critical grower, from the most expensive bulbs. Packed at the greenhouse and shipped in original packages direct to the consumer. No bruised or inferior flowers. You can't afford anything but the best in this line at Easter time. Get our prices. They are no more than you will pay other places for an inferior article.

Killarney

A fine crop in all length stems. The heads are exceptionally long and large—with color. In saying they are the finest stock in Chicago, we voice the opinions of the most careful and critical buyers on the market. We want your Killarney orders for Easter.

Maids

Something choice. They are their own best salesman. A trial convinces.

Carnations

White Perfection, White Enchantress, White Lawson, Lady Bountiful. The best white on the market. Our Victory, a red, has not been out-classed yet. Lawson and Enchantress—Winsor—well grown and fancy stock. All other varieties on the market.

White Lilac

$1.00 per bunch. This crop of lilac, now ready, is of the larger variety, and very fine stock. This price is one-third lower than we ever sold it before and we know it will meet with large demand, as it is the high-class spring flower of the market.

Violets

Eastern and Home-grown—single and double. Our wide experience in handling Violets—our choice selection of the best growers of fancy stock—the fact that we can always fill your orders with stock that is fresh—are reasons why everybody wants Randall's Violets.

dine rose has been lost sight of by the growers who last fall were so anxious to get orders accepted for My Maryland, but that Jardine will yet be heard from in this market.

Bassett & Washburn are well pleased with their success at the rose show at Buffalo last week. They were first on Beauties in a class with seven entries and second on Killarney in a class of five entries. Andrew Benson says he never saw better quality than at Buffalo.

Scheiden & Schoos say that while they have broken no records in the dissemination of the W. H. Taft carnation, they have sold enough to make its introduction profitable and expect a considerably larger sale next season. Brant & Noe have quite a quantity of the Taft this year in a good deal heavier soil than Scheiden & Schoos use and say they get stiffer stems and like it well.

Vaughan & Sperry say the violet season promises to be pretty well over by Easter.

M. Weiland, of Evanston, has opened a well equipped city branch, at the corner of Belmont and Clark streets, conducting it under the name of the Belmont Floral Co.

A. C. Spencer, at Peter Reinberg's, reports Easter shipping orders already coming in.

Nicholas Schmitz has bought the Hubert Hansen greenhouses, at 4016 North Clark street, and will take possession April 1. Mr. Schmitz was for years assistant gardener at St. Boniface cemetery.

E. C. Amling says he is advising his customers that they can go ahead on the basis of a large supply of stock in all lines for Easter.

The E. F. Winterson Co. opened a car of imported nursery stock March 22 in fine shape.

Benthey-Coatsworth Co. figures that the Rhea Reid rose will be found a first-class thing for summer trade.

Percy Jones says Rose-pink Enchantress is a poor seller, because a poor keeper at this season and therefore not a good shipper. At the same time it is a prolific bloomer and therefore in large supply.

The George Wittbold Co. reports an unusually strong demand, for so early in the season, for Dracæna indivisa. Some sizes already are sold out.

W. E. Lynch, at E. H. Hunt's, says there will be a great deal of difference in the lilies this year—some as fine as ever were, some short, and some that won't get in.

Weiland & Risch say it is too bad it wasn't Lent all winter.

J. A. Budlong estate will try both My Maryland and White Killarney for next season.

urday and said the Chicago Carnation Co. has had a big season on cuttings. Next winter they will disseminate three new ones: Sangamo, A. C. Brown's pink; Mary Tolman, the flesh pink of Hunt Bros., and their own Conquest, variegated. E. H. Hunt will assist in the distribution.

C. W. McKellar's Mrs. Gilman violet is still in good shape.

Zech & Mann think that Easter lilies will be abundant, but say a good many will be short.

Kruchten & Co. report that a number of growers northwest of town will be off on carnations for several weeks yet.

The Market.

There is no great change in market conditions from a week ago. Business generally has been satisfactory, and there have been no heavy supplies of any flowers. It is now getting so near Easter that there is little likelihood of any slump before that festival arrives. Roses are of decidedly better quality and rather more plentiful, but are selling well. Beauties are extra fine, and so are Killarney. Of Richmond we have seen better samples than are now coming in. Bride, Maid and Chatenay are all good. Carnations are off crop with many growers, and are moving nicely. Violets are abundant, but sell quite well. Sweet peas are the finest they have been this season, and are especially popular.

Quite a varied assortment of bulbous stock is coming in, but trade in this class of flowers is fairly good. Lilies and callas are sufficient for the market needs. Valley is good, the foliage being better than it was. Gardenias are more abundant, but cattleyas are in small supply, C. Trianæ being about over. Dendrobiums are the orchids most in evidence at present, while quite a few cœlogynes are used in a cut state. Of asparagus, smilax and adiantum, supplies and prices vary little. Hardy dagger ferns of good quality are rather scarce.

Horticultural Hall.

The spring show, which opened March 24, and which will close March 28, is a splendid one, and it is doubtful if Boston has ever held a better all-around one, all classes of exhibits being of a uniformly high quality. R. & J. Farquhar's Japanese garden, which covers a large portion of the main exhibition hall, is the piece de resistance of the show, and will prove a big drawing card. James Farquhar has put an immense amount of time, patience and forethought into the execution of this feature, and he has certainly done his work well. The planting is tastefully done, and visitors are delighted with it.

Walsh's ramblers are, as usual, fine. Bulbous and hard-wooded plants are excellent. Robert Cameron has a big and imposing group in the main hall. Thomas Roland, Mrs. Frederick Ayer, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, William Whitman and many other prominent exhibitors of plants are on hand again, while the rose, carnation and violet men are out in force. Sweet peas are excellent. Orchids are abundant, mantel decorations good and the whole show tastefully arranged. A more detailed account will appear in next week's REVIEW.

Club attended a meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society, March 19, and enjoyed a pleasant evening. Had the invitation been received a little earlier, so that proper notice could have been given to members, many more would have attended.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club members and friends intending to go on the field day to the W. W. Edgar Co., April 3, are asked to take Waverley car, leaving Park Street station at 1 o'clock. The establishments of Edgar Bros. and Peirce Bros. will also be visited.

John Barr, of South Natick, has a magnificent lot of cyclamens for Easter, which are all sold. Mr. Barr's exhibits of cyclamens were for years a feature at the Boston show, while he was head gardener on the Cheney estate.

A. S. McDonald, of Temple place, carries an extra fine line of leucothoe, galax and dagger ferns. He personally oversees the packing of the bulk of his ferns, which accounts for their extreme freshness.

John McFarland is marketing fine lots of Brunner roses at present, in addition to his other specialties, gardenias and valley.

H. M. Robinson & Co. have a fine consignment of southern smilax for Easter. They will also make a feature of shipping crates of pot lilies this year. They report trade as good, with excellent Easter prospects.

William T. Walke, of Salem, has, among other Easter flowering stock, an extra fine lot of amaryllis.

H. H. Bartsch, of the W. W. Edgar Co., spent a few days the last week looking over plant growing establishments, including among others such noted ones as those of Anton Schultheis, Keller, Dupuy, Dreer and Bobbink & Atkins.

Thomas Roland has his houses, as usual, overflowing with a magnificent lot of acacias, ramblers, genistas, bougainvilleas and other Easter stock.

William Miller, the veteran and genial West Lynn florist, is taking his customary winter trip, which this season is to Bermuda.

Now that Boston has demonstrated its ability to hold two big commercial shows within three weeks of each other, it is to be hoped that another year an amalgamated show may be arranged, which thousands of the general public can enjoy.

J. B. Velie, local representative of the Lord & Burnham Co., reports business as showing a distinct improvement.

Superintendent Pettigrew, of the park system, rightly condemns California privet as a hedge plant for this section. It is quick growing and cheap, but utterly unreliable, every severe winter cutting it to the ground. It succeeds in Newport, R. I., where the climate is milder, but as a hedge plant in Massachusetts it is almost worthless.

Present indications are that the amount of winter killing among trees and shrubs will this season be unusually small. The greatest damage done is to perennials which were unmulched. Losses in these promise to be quite severe.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Conditions have improved somewhat in the cut flower market since the report of one week ago. The rather wintry March weather has retarded crops, benefiting prices. This is notably true in the case of sweet peas, carnations, and, in a less degree, violets. Roses have been rather dull. Beauties continue to maintain their high price through shortage in supply. Other roses are not in especial demand, white being preferred to colors by the buyers. White has also the preference over colored blooms in other varieties of stock, indicating funeral work. The northern grown daffodils of quality in varieties like Golden Spur continue to maintain an excellent price, despite the southern grown stock offered here. These Virginia flowers are chiefly Princeps so far. Greens are rather scarce. Good

Easter Plants at Craig's.

I spent an hour with great pleasure going carefully over the immense stock of Easter plants of the Robert Craig Co. I do not believe a larger and finer collection of plants has ever been grown here. The impression created by this stock is that we must depend today on the standard varieties of plants of ten years ago for our principal supply of Easter plants, using the novelties and recent introductions simply to add variety to our collection. It surprised me that in so large a stock the timing should be so well done. There were a few early birds, a few laggards, but the great army gathered at Forty-ninth and Market streets seemed as though it would be in good time for Easter without any hurry. I was especially impressed by the great quantities of evenly grown, evenly budded plants of the standard varieties, lilies, azaleas, hydrangeas, roses and spiræas. There were few poor plants among them. The lilies were clean and of good height, with a moderate supply of buds, not too large and not too small. Some specimens, three plants in a pot, looked well on pedestals. The azaleas were in fine shape, scarcely a bud showing color, but all in that stage when they are easily brought forward as required. The roses were a superb lot. I shall not go into varieties or styles of growth, simply saying they were a pleasure to see. The hydrangeas and spiræas were both full of buds that will easily make Easter.

Of the other plants, Bougainvillea glabra Sanderiana pleased me especially. Robert A. Craig has described his methods of flowering these plants, methods that set aside all the old traditions, proving him to be a grower of the first rank. A house of these bougainvilleas, with Bostons and genistas, made a pretty color picture. The genistas, by the way, are grown largely in small pots for basket work, as well as in medium sizes. Among the foliage plants Ficus pandurata and fancy crotons were most in evidence outside of the ferns. These two specialties on this place are exceptionally well done. The stocks, while evidently greatly reduced by the heavy demand of the past few months, were still imposing. I have neglected to mention the rhododendrons, which were well budded, Pink Pearl having the place of honor.

The Spring Show.

The spring show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was opened in Horticultural hall Tuesday, March 23. The exhibition, though not so large as some of the spring shows have been, is full of interest, the private gardeners and a few commercial growers bringing together a really fine lot of flowering plants, bulbs, and cut flowers.

The flowering plant section comprised some specimen azaleas in tubs, Cineraria hybrida and stellata, spiræas in variety, including Gladstone and Queen Alexandra; Primula obconica, and roses. The bulbs comprised some fine lilies, the old Harrisii being conspicuous; tulips, narcissi and hyacinths. The most pleasing varieties of tulip shown were Murillo, Raphael and La Grandes, double pink; Pink Beauty, single pink; Salvator Rosa, double rose pink; Couronne d'Or, double orange; Toreador, double scarlet; Tournesol, double red and yellow; Cochenella, semi-double scarlet; Joost Van Vondel, single white, and Flamingo, single, indescribable—possibly rose-pink will answer. The narcissi comprised the leading well-known varieties, such as Von Sion, Emperor, Empress, Golden Spur, and the newer favorite, Glory of Leyden. There were some interesting singles of the small-flowered class, including Netherlands and Lord Channing. The narcissi were, as a rule, well grown. The hyacinths included Grand Maitre, blue; King of the Blues, deep blue or purple; Queen of the Blues, pale blue; Innocence, white; Kohinoor, rose-pink; La Grandesse, white, and King of the Yellows, notable for variety rather than beauty.

The center of the hall was decorated with made-up effects in foliage surrounded by combinations of flowering plants. There were no hydrangeas exhibited. A well-grown specimen of Mme. Lemoine lilac was shown. The Henry A. Dreer Co. had a table filled with interesting exhibits. In the center were a variety of wallflowers in pots, in bloom, among them Charanthus Kewensis and many other plants rarely seen on the exhibition table. The Henry A. Dreer Co. also made a handsome exhibit of Nephrolepis Scholzeli on a table by itself. W. H. Ritter had an interesting exhibit of tiny cacti in 1-inch pots or thereabouts.

The rose exhibit included My Maryland from Edward Towill, Mrs. Jardine from Robt. Scott & Son and J. Stephenson, and My Maryland and Radiance from John Cook, Baltimore. Radiance is a pink rose of good size and substance, round rather than pointed buds, color a lively La France pink, good stem and foliage, evidently a hybrid tea.

The feature of the carnation exhibit was Dorothy Gordon, from the Joseph Heacock Co. T. J. McCormick, Baltimore, sent a variegated seedling, with pronounced stripes, pleasing in appearance. S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. exhibited J. D. Cockcroft's Georgia in fine form, while M. Thaw & Co., of Govanstown, Md., sent seedling No. 36, deep crimson, fragrant.

Last, but by no means least, it being in fact a feature of the show, was the exhibit of William Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass. He sent eighteen vases of superb sweet peas, in all shades of color, and with them four splendidly grown vases of violets, Kaiser Wilhelm, Boston, Princess of Wales and Baroness Rothschild.

Medium Sizes Will Be Plentiful.

It is always a pleasure to visit Charles D. Ball's place at Holmesburg. A cordial reception, excellent stock and progressive ideas are the magnets. Charles D. Ball, Charles D. Ball, Jr., and Fred Vith were all hard at work, though it was late Saturday afternoon, on some cypress purlins which had just replaced short-lived steel supports. Mr. Ball and his son made time to show as pretty a lot of palms and decorative plants as one could wish to see. Kentias in both the leading varieties, singly and made up, were in fine form. Clean and vigorous, the medium and smaller sizes, which have been scarce during the past few years, promise to be plentiful. Mr. Ball said that he had now enough fours, fives and sixes to meet all emergencies. There was a fine house of Areca lutescens, more of Latania Borbonica and a thrifty block of Cocos Weddelliana, grown rather wet, and green as grass, with an excellent warming pan under their feet; Ardisia crenulata, both green and variegated; pandanus, and last but by no means least of the interesting varieties noted was a fine batch of Livistona rotundifolia. The appearance of the houses fully justifies the claim that the stock has never been in better shape.

double rose pink; Couronne d'Or, double orange; Toreador, double scarlet; Tournesol, double red and yellow; Cochenella, semi-double scarlet; Joost Van Vondel, single white, and Flamingo, single, indescribable—possibly rose-pink will answer. The narcissi comprised the leading well-known varieties, such as Von Sion, Emperor, Empress, Golden Spur, and the newer favorite, Glory of Leyden. There were some interesting singles of the small-flowered class, including Netherlands and Lord Channing. The narcissi were, as a rule, well grown. The hyacinths included Grand Maitre, blue; King of the Blues, deep blue or purple; Queen of the Blues, pale blue; Innocence, white; Kohinoor, rose pink; La Grandesse, white, and King of the Yellows, notable for variety rather than beauty.

The center of the hall was decorated with made-up effects in foliage surrounded by combinations of flowering plants. There were no hydrangeas exhibited. A well grown specimen of Mme. Lemoine lilac was shown. The Henry A. Dreer Co. had a table filled with interesting exhibits. In the center were a variety of wallflowers in pots, in bloom, among them Charanthus Kewensis and many other plants rarely seen on the exhibition table. The Henry A. Dreer Co. also made a handsome exhibit of Nephrolepis Scholzeli on a table by itself. W. H. Ritter had an interesting exhibit of tiny cacti in 1-inch pots or thereabouts.

The rose exhibit included My Maryland from Edward Towill, Mrs. Jardine from Robt. Scott & Son and J. Stephenson, and My Maryland and Radiance from John Cook, Baltimore. Radiance is a pink rose of good size and substance, round rather than pointed buds, color a lively La France pink, good stem and foliage, evidently a hybrid tea.

The feature of the carnation exhibit was Dorothy Gordon, from the Joseph Heacock Co. T. J. McCormick, Baltimore, sent a variegated seedling, with pronounced stripes, pleasing in appearance. S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. exhibited J. D. Cockcroft's Georgia in fine form, while M. Thaw & Co., of Govanstown, Md., sent seedling No. 36, deep crimson, fragrant.

Last, but by no means least, it being in fact a feature of the show, was the exhibit of William Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass. He sent eighteen vases of superb sweet peas, in all shades of color, and with them four splendidly grown vases of violets, Kaiser Wilhelm, Boston, Princess of Wales and Baroness Rothschild.

Medium Sizes Will Be Plentiful.

It is always a pleasure to visit Charles D. Ball's place at Holmesburg. A cordial reception, excellent stock and progressive ideas are the magnets. Charles D. Ball, Charles D. Ball, Jr., and Fred Vith were all hard at work, though it was late Saturday afternoon, on some cypress purlins which had just replaced short-lived steel supports. Mr. Ball and his son made time to show as pretty a lot of palms and decorative plants as one could wish to see. Kentias in both the leading varieties, singly and made up, were in fine form. Clean and vigorous, the medium and smaller sizes, which have been scarce during the past few years, promise to be plentiful. Mr. Ball said that he had now enough fours, fives and sixes to meet all emergencies. There was a fine house of Areca lutescens, more of Latania Borbonica and a thrifty block of Cocos Weddelliana, grown rather wet, and green as grass, with an excellent warming pan under their feet; Ardisia crenulata, both green and variegated; pandanus, and last but by no means least of the interesting varieties noted was a fine batch of Livistona rotundifolia. The appearance of the houses fully justifies the claim that the stock has never been in better shape.

tional rose show held at Buffalo last week say they felt proud of the splendid showing made by our growers, who put up American Beauty, Killarney and Richmond that were superior in culture and finish to anything shown by the celebrated eastern and western growers. The fruits of this victory may be found in the many firsts and specials brought home by our exhibitors.

Correction: The dimensions of the new Florex Gardens house, mentioned last week as about 150x800, will be 172x700.

David Joyce, an old-time gardener of this city, died at his home in Germantown last week. Mr. Joyce was in charge of the Carpenter place, Phil-ellena, for thirty-eight years. Later he laid out and took charge of Willow Grove park, where his effects in Japanese hydrangeas and scarlet sage attracted attention.

The greenhouses purchased by George Samtman are at Orvilla, near Lansdale, formerly operated by Fred Roos.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have a pleasing novelty in their hammered brass handle baskets; effective for sweet peas and violets.

Julius Kohler & Sons, Bridge street, Frankford, have a large stock of Easter plants. Their spiræas are especially well done.

A. Farenwald and E. Towill went from Buffalo to Brampton, Ontario, to see the greenhouses of the Dale estate. The electrical delivery of flowers in baskets from one end of the long greenhouses to the other, or from cutter to sorter, impressed them mightily.

The Century Flower Shop held a sweet pea special. These flowers have been more in demand than ever before.

The Joseph Heacock Co. will add 7,000 feet of glass this season. A small house and a driveway are being turned into a large house. This makes practically their entire establishment under one roof, with partitions.

Charles P. Poryzees says that Lent has been better than usual this season. The demand has certainly kept up pretty well during what is usually the worst part of Lent.

P. A. B. Widener always wears a flower of the new carnation, Dorothy Gordon, in his buttonhole.

Elmer Joliff, for four years with J. B. Murdoch & Co., Pittsburg, has accepted a position with W. E. McKissick & Bros.

Mr. Graham and Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, of Baltimore, were in this city a few days ago.

The sad news was received in this city March 22 of the death of Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth, of Chicago.

John Walker, Youngstown, O., was here a few days ago.

The junior partner of the firm of Mann & Brown, Richmond, Va., was here March 22.

M. Rice & Co. received Easter importations by the steamer Bierawa.

Walter P. Stokes has a fine lot of hydrangeas, tub grown, at Moorestown, N. J.

Adolph Farenwald won the Michell cup with fifty Killarney at Buffalo last week.

Alexander B. Scott returned from Summerville, S. C., March 17.

Louis Berger, son of William Berger, will open a flower store at the corner of Germantown avenue and Herman street, Saturday, March 27.

Fred J. Michell, Jr., says that people are flocking to 518 with the advent of spring.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

A sunny Sunday, with higher temperature, enabled the sidewalk merchants to completely clean up the wholesale market, but Monday was again down to freezing, and there was little life in the street. Prices did not advance, and supplies are steadily increasing. A year ago the break in values materialized at about this date, and roses especially were far under the present quotations.

White carnations last week were in great demand, the daily shipments being far below requirements up to St. Patrick's day. Green roses and valley and other abnormalities appeared in the retail windows in honor of the Irishman's patron saint.

The rose supply is now abundant, and the quality equal to anything the market has seen this season. Beauties do well to hold at 40 cents for top, and this price is only for the selected. We look for quite a break before Easter in these and all varieties of roses. In fact, already complete slips of Brides and Maids are taken quite below quotations.

Carnations are holding their values encouragingly, especially the high grade stock, which is always in demand. The carnation novelties and the new varieties of roses find an immediate market always, and no authoritative rate can be safely quoted for these limited arrivals.

Violets are coming in shoals, and the street sellers are their salvation. The retail stores cannot utilize a tenth of the shipments. Great quantities were disposed of last week as low as $1 a thousand. All bulbous stock is flooding the market. The southern supplies are limitless. Now come lilac and trailing arbutus.

The demand for gardenias and orchids is steady and encouraging to the growers.

Fancy ferns are increasing in price and growing scarce. There is not an overabundance of smilax.

Gardeners' Convention.

The National Association of Gardeners, which convened March 17 and 18 at Sheffel's hall, was an encouraging success. The president, John Shore, conducted the deliberations. On the opening day 160 gardeners and florists attended the sessions and ninety remained to the banquet in the evening. J. T. Withers delivered an interesting lecture, with stereopticon slides, on "Tree Preservation," and James Bell read a paper on carnations. The exhibits completely filled the large room devoted to them. Will C. Rickards acted as manager and W. E. Maynard, the secretary of the society, was a busy organizer and worker in its behalf. Over 1,000 members are now on the secretary's books, and over 200 of these beyond the Rockies.

Jos. A. Manda made a fine exhibit of orchids; Rickards Bros., their plants of the selected strain of Primula obconica grandiflora; Mr. Wynne, sweet peas, and Mr. Stewart, three magnificent plants of cyclamen, all of which received special certificates.

Carl Shafer's carnation exhibit was especially good. W. Turner won the bronze cup for muskmelons. The U-Bar cup for the winner of the most prizes was taken by Wm. Kleinheinz, of Ogontz, Pa., with an average of one-half point over Mr. Bell. Messrs. Lyons, Wynne and Shaeffer were among the winners also.

O. V. Zangen exhibited his sprinkler and E. R. Thieler his flower vases and jardiniere.

The next meeting will be held in Philadelphia in 1910.

The banquet was well attended, President Shore in the chair. To the toast of "The President," led by Al Rickards, the gathering joined in the national anthem. The toast to "The National Association of Gardeners" was responded to by Messrs. Kleinheinz, Bell and Stewart; "The Horticultural Achievements of New Jersey," by C. H. Totty; "The Commercial Drummer," by W. H. Marshall, and "The Horticultural Press," by W. H. Maynard and A. F. Faulkner. Earl Rapp, of College Point, and Andrew Wilson, of Summit, entertained with song and story, and Mr. Marshall led at 1 a. m. in "Auld Lang Syne."

Brooklyn Retailers' Dinner.

The Retail Florists' Association of Brooklyn was much encouraged by the success of its first annual dinner and theater party, March 16, briefly reported last week. The affair was creditable in every way, the best element of the retail trade of the City of Churches being there, with many invited guests. May Irwin was presented with a great basket of flowers, as heavy as herself, by the society. The dinner was first-class, and the program of music excellent. The management was perfect, Messrs. Jahn, Phillips, Wilson and Crawbuck making special efforts, in conjunction with several of the leading lady florists of the city, in making the affair a brilliant success. All this tends to harmony and mutual benefit.

Various Notes.

April 12, the day after Easter, will be the date of the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club. The outing committee has been busy, and announces the date of the club's annual holiday, Thursday, July 1, and the place, Duer's pavilion and handsome grounds, at Whitestone Landing.

All the auctions are in full blast, and prices are ahead of expectations. W. J. Elliott says the opening sales were a surprise in the attendance and interest, and the demand for roses especially warm. Ambrose Cleary made a complete clearing up of the big roomful March 19. Both these houses sell every Tuesday and Friday through the season. Over at the Fruit Auction Co., on Franklin street, J. P. Cleary sells every morning, but Mondays, at 10:30, the stock he selected in Europe, and so suburbanites and retail florists have greater facilities for stocking up than ever before in their experience.

George Hildenbrandt is convalescing rapidly.

Lyman B. Craw underwent successfully last week an operation at the hospital, and at this writing good hopes are entertained for his recovery.

his daughter to Albert Vreeland, of Greenville, N. J., March 25.

F. H. Traendly and Eugene Daille-douze have returned from Cincinnati and Buffalo with glowing accounts of the prospects for a good convention in August, while the landing of the rose convention for 1910 in New York gives the trade the warmest satisfaction.

Charles Krombach's reception in honor of his twenty-fifth anniversary, March 19, was largely attended, and the silver mementos were many and beautiful. Mr. Krombach was born in 1857, and has been in business as a grower and retailer since 1876. He was the pioneer florist of Coney Island, and the first to plant flowers there when there was only a sandy waste and where now a half million gather every Sunday of the summer season. One son and two daughters constitute this happy family.

Louis Dupuy, of Whitestone, has rebuilt his sheds and houses, destroyed by fire, and everything is in ship-shape for Easter. The loss was about $10,000, and a serious one at this time of the year, but fortunately the home and a large part of the range were saved, and it will not be long before no trace of the misfortune will remain.

Anton Schultheis reports stock being rapidly selected and set aside for the Easter deliveries. He grows a big variety, but the roses are a strong feature.

B. Rosens reports a steady call for wild smilax. At the Yale dinner last week a large quantity was used.

Easter lilies, for delivery April 8 to 10, are quoted at $12.

James McManus says the Easter demand, for orchids especially, promises to break all records.

The Flatbush Bowling Club will play against the strong Astoria Club, Tuesday evening, March 30, on the Astoria alleys.

The New York Bowling Club members will begin a series of fifteen games Monday evening, April 19, to determine the team that will represent this city at the Cincinnati tournament. None but regular members can compete for the honor.

J. Austin Shaw.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market keeps firm as to prices, stock and demand. There is no overstock nor scarcity in anything. The wholesalers say that last week the demand for all kinds of stock was good, and that, judging from the demand, the retailers throughout the city must have had a fairly busy week. The work was chiefly for funerals, as social work during Lent is somewhat slack among the uptown florists, who do most of this kind of work. By noon on Monday, March 22, all of them were sold out.

Roses are coming in well in all varieties. The best quality of these clean up almost daily. The same can be said of carnations, which are in still better demand. White and Enchantress bring top prices, and Beacon sells clean. These have not been any too plentiful of late—not half enough for the demand.

Violets are becoming pale, and a great many of our Kirkwood growers are pulling out the plants. The chances for these for Easter are not bright. Lilies, both calla and Harrisii, are plentiful. Romans and Paper Whites were scarce last week. There are enough sweet peas and good valley for all demands. Few tulips are seen in the market just now. There is enough green goods of all kinds to be had.

Various Notes.

Governor Hadley has issued a proclamation designating April 9 as Arbor day, and says that the day should be devoted to the planting of trees, shrubs and plants.

J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Ia., is consigning an extra fine lot of Beauties to Smith & Co.

Charles Young, Jr., has given up his position in the wholesale dry goods business, and is again with the firm of C. Young & Sons Co. His father, James Young, is president of the company.

A. Jablonsky, of Central, is sending to H. G. Berning a nice lot of roses and carnations.

A. Y. Ellison, of the Ellison Floral Co., spent a few days in Chicago the latter part of last week, arranging for Easter stock for his firm.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Weber and their daughter have made all arrangements for a trip to Europe this summer, the trip to extend into fall.

The Riessen Floral Co. has had a busy week with large funeral designs and decorations.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, was a caller Saturday, March 20, and visited several of the local growers while in the city.

Fred H. Weber is making an extra fine showing of spring blooming plants. Mr. Weber says that so far during Lent the business has been good.

C. C. Sanders and his family are now safely housed at the old residence on Delmar boulevard. Their new residence, which was completely destroyed by fire last week, will be rebuilt at once. Walter Sanders, who is managing his father's place, will be married to a well-known west end belle soon after Easter.

C. A. Kuehn is receiving large consignments of extra fine carnations from Henry Baer, of Peoria, and Swan Peterson, of Gibson City, Ill. These are much looked after by the local buyers.

The executive committee of the St. Louis Horticultural Society has been hard at work arranging the Masonic Temple hall for the spring flower show, SWEET POTATOES IN ILLINOIS.

Can sweet potatoes be grown successfully near Chicago, or along the southern borders of Lake Michigan, and are they as good as the eastern grown?

E. C. L.

There is no reason why sweet potatoes cannot be grown in the locality named, as in that section of country there are many places where the soil would be particularly adapted to them. Illinois grown sweet potatoes are in all ways as good as the eastern product. Sweet potatoes are not grown in the vicinity of Chicago to any extent, for the reason that other crops of a more paying nature are grown, but, except on the heavy clay ground that forms quite a proportion of our gardening district, they could be grown successfully. J. M. C.

LETTUCE SOIL TOO RICH.

I am trying to grow head lettuce (Rawson's Forcing). My soil is two-thirds rotted sod and one-third rotted manure, sweetened by lime and helped out in plant food by bone flour and dried fish, all well worked over. But my lettuce grows very slowly. I run the temperature at 42 to 45 degrees at night and 60 to 65 degrees in the daytime. Now, after the plants get well rooted, say one week after setting in the bed, can I run a higher temperature without danger, until the lettuce commences to head? If so, how high, both day and night?

I am troubled with a scald when the lettuce is heading. Bailey claims it is caused by too high a temperature after a cloudy spell, but I am careful not to go higher than 55 degrees, with plenty of air at these times, so that does not seem to me to be the right explanation. What causes it? Would it be a good plan to wet the paths and syringe the lettuce lightly at these times?

What is the best variety of lettuce for coldframes in spring, putting it into frames March 1? What is the best variety for coldframes in the fall, to mature about the middle of November?

F. H. L.

The variety of lettuce you are growing is a good one and, under suitable conditions, should prove successful. The whole trouble is caused by your compost being too rich. Two-thirds rotted sod and one-third rotted manure is in itself a rich compost for lettuce, but with the addition of bone flour and dried fish you have a mixture strong enough to grow champion pumpkins for the county fair. Lettuce, being a soft growing subject and not a heavy feeder at any stage of its growth, does not take kindly to artificial manures, so these should not be used unless the soil is very deficient in plant food.

Your temperature is all right. Do not run it any higher, or you will only increase the trouble by causing softness of growth. Damping can only be obviated by keeping the growth of your plants as firm as possible, to enable them to resist unsuitable atmospheric conditions, when such occur through the vicissitudes of the climate. Hence the necessity of having a soil that will supply enough nourishment to the plants without forcing growth, and the necessity also of maintaining a dry atmosphere. Do not sprinkle the paths or syringe the plants overhead, but water early, on bright days only, and give enough air to dry up all surplus moisture. Have the plants perfectly dry before closing down the house.

Big Boston lettuce is a first-class variety for coldframes in spring. For fall we find Deacon the most suitable of several varieties we have tried.

William Scott.

ONIONS FROM SEED.

I intend to plant a large batch of onions. Should I first sow seed in flats and transplant in spring? If so, when? I am located in central Minnesota.

A. C. L.

Onions for transplanting can be sowed in rows in seed flats, or it may be better to sow them in a coldframe outdoors, but if in a coldframe they will require more attention. Give them ventilation each day on which there is no frost, and cover them carefully at night so that they will not freeze. They require a cool temperature to make them healthy and strong, but it is pretty sure to spoil them if they freeze hard.

I should think that there would be time to plant them yet in your latitude. They should be ready to transplant by the time the ground is ready outside. If they are grown as cool as you do your cabbage plants they will stand about as much cool weather, so you can plant almost as early, but if you have to run them warmer to hurry them along they will not stand nearly as much cold.

If you want to grow transplanted onions, get seed of the Prize Taker variety. They are the most satisfactory. If you sow the seed directly in the garden, however, Red Wethersfield and Yellow Globe Danvers will be more satisfactory.

The transplanted onions make the very finest product and when well done are a profitable crop, but it is considerably more work than to drill them in the field like radishes. Why not try some each way? H. G.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

We are having all sorts of weather, sometimes several kinds on the same day, as is characteristic of March, but with it all there is some bright sunshine, and its vivifying influence is improving the quality and increasing the quantity of the cut flower supply. Indeed, some kinds of stock, such as roses, sweet peas, carnations and violets, are in excess of daily requirements. About the only item of which there is a scarcity is good Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri. The consequence is a cut in price, and while the volume of business done is large, the aggregate in money is far less than it ought to be. Violets are also coming in large shipments, and are largely handled by the street fakers.

Various Notes.

The Exchange is steadily advancing each month in the amount of business done. J. J. Perry, the manager, deserves a great deal of credit for the way he handles the enormous stock which comes to the Exchange.

Harry Ekas is bringing some fine carnations to the market, which would be a credit to any grower. He is one of the growers who know how to do it.

Monday night, March 22, was geranium night at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club. Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. exhibited 100 varieties of blooms of their novelties.

Baltimore is besieged with bulb salesmen, who are offering bulbs at tempting prices, but few of the growers are interested as yet, as bulb stock has sold badly so far.

The Agricultural College, at College Park, Md., is offering fine nut trees to anyone who will take them and report on their progress in different soils.

The Murillo tulips seem to be a failure so far around Baltimore.

E. A. Seidewitz had a fine window display of spring flowers Saturday. Q.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Trade Conditions.

The market was quiet last week, the only activity being on funeral work, which was especially plentiful, and a great many large designs were worked up by the leading retailers. Carnations and roses are in fair supply, but are cleaned up close every day. Whites were particularly short the early part of the week, on account of the exceptional demand for green carnations. So great was the call for whites for dyeing purposes that hundreds of Enchantress were used, with satisfactory results. Violets are plentiful, excellent and in good demand. There will be a fine lot of azaleas here for Easter and other stock looks promising.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island held its regular monthly meeting March 15, with a good attendance. It was voted to ask why the Rhode Island College of Agriculture at Kingston is selling the product of the greenhouses in this city notwithstanding Prof. Wheeler's assurances that such would not be the case.

When the attention of President Edwards of the College was called to this matter the day following the club's meeting, he stated that he was unaware of any such promise on Prof. Wheeler's part and that the latter knew nothing concerning the sale of the product, as it was arranged entirely by other parties. The sales were made, not with any intention of competition, but merely for educational purposes in instructing the students in the entire methods in raising, cutting and selling the product. President Edwards at once directed the cessation of the sale of the carnations.

Various Notes.

The monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was combined with a three nights' evening school in horticulture, agriculture and pomology, with the Rhode Island Agricultural College and the State Board of Agriculture. The lectures were attended by an average of nearly 400 persons. J. K. M. L. Farquahar, of Boston, was the lecturer on landscape gardening.

Louis Reuter, of Westerly, was in New York last week on business.

James A. Budlong 2nd has just purchased a forty horse-power Oldsmobile runabout.

W. Roach, with F. Danker, of the Maiden Lane Florist Co., Albany, was in the city last week to attend the funeral of his brother.

Arthur Zirkman, with M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, was in town last week.

J. H. Cushing, of the Quidnick Greenhouses, who has been on the sick list, is able to be about once more.

Mr. Slattery, representing Galvin & Co., of Boston, was a visitor last week.

Many large funeral pieces were furnished by Johnston Bros. for E. L. Collins, a student at Brown University. This was the first funeral ever held at one of the college chapter houses.

Joseph Kopelman has purchased a farm of 100 acres in Oaklawn, where he intends to make his home after a few years. There are two acres of Concord grapes, 5 years old, on the farm.

Miss Sellew, with Thomas J. Johnston Co., has the sympathy of the trade in the death of her mother last week.

PLUMOSUS AND SPRENGERI.

I have a bed of plumosus, one-year-old plants, which are running up to fair strings, and I should like to know what care to give it during the coming summer. Must it be rested, like smilax?

I also have Sprengeri, on a raised bench, which is growing rampantly, giving sprays two to three feet long. I should like to have a little for use during the summer. Will it be all right to keep it growing steadily throughout the year? Shorter sprays would be more useful to me. Can it be made to grow that way? And plumosus sprays, instead of strings, would also suit my work better. How can I get them instead of strings? E. C. B.

We keep our plumosus right on growing, never giving it a rest. As to getting sprays of it, you would have to pinch the shoots until they are weakened enough to run into sprays.

Sprengeri, also, is kept right on growing. We always make it a practice to grow the sprays as long as possible, but would suggest that you keep the plants on the dry side if you wish to shorten them. Albert F. Amling.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

Enclosed please find my check for $1.40 in payment for my half-inch card one month in the department for Leading Retail Florists in the Review. This has been a good investment for me ever since I made the yearly contract, and is getting better right along.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

March came in like a lion, and has been rather lion-like ever since. Last week brought several days of continuous sunshine, so that Easter stock has been greatly improved in quality, and the chances of its being in bloom are much better now than ten days ago.

Trade has been good and stock plentiful. White carnations and smilax seem to be the short articles.

St. Patrick's day brought an increased demand for green carnations, but shamrock was not in much demand, the artificial article taking its place to a great extent.

State Florists' Association.

The monthly meeting of the State Association was held Tuesday evening, March 16, at the hall, 510 Snelling avenue.

Mr. Olson, of the flower show committee, reported prospects favorable for assistance from the St. Paul Institute of Arts and Sciences in holding a fall flower show this year. Two additional members from Minneapolis were added to the committee.

Conflicting reports by Messrs. Nagel and Swanson, of the state fair committee, led to a heated discussion. Messrs. Underwood and Cosgrove, of the board of managers of the state fair, were present and indicated a willingness to cooperate with the florists and give them better space for exhibits and larger premiums, but stated that it was impossible to do so without assistance from the state, and that it was up to the florists, as tax payers and as an association, to interest the members of the legislature in making appropriations for buildings and improvements.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24, 1909.

THE insecticide bill did not become a law during the regular session of congress. It was favorably reported by the committee of the senate.

L. B. MCCAUSLAND, of Ross Bros., seedsmen, Wichita, Kan., says the horticulturists of that section want an insecticide factory to locate there and will offer inducements.

IT is reported that the Ratekin Seed Co., of Shenandoah, Ia., will erect a large seed house. Construction will begin at once on the building, which, it is said, will cost $40,000 or $50,000.

The market for canned goods is dull and packers declare prices on some lines are below cost of production, so there is talk of curtailing production if prices do not advance before planting time.

THE imports of seeds in January, 1909, were valued at $693,062, against $1,046,865 in January, 1908. The exports of seeds for the month were $604,992, against $1,106,682 in January, 1908.

WHERE dealers have found themselves branded as selling adulterated Kentucky blue grass seed, it usually is because they bought only "blue grass," and did not pay to have "Kentucky" on the label.

CHARLES A. HEATH, of the Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, says that few people appear to realize that the bean has become the national vegetable of America, and fewer still appreciate the tremendous quantities in which it is grown.

IN France the seed trade association, which bears the imposing title "Commission Administrative de l'Union Commerciale des Horticulteurs et Marchands Grainiers de France," presided over by Mons. A. Truffaut, is protesting against proposed increase of duties on importations of plants, seeds, fruits, flowers and vegetables.

THE D. Landreth Seed Co., Bristol, Pa., has prepared a circular setting forth in graphic style the many interesting features of its 125 years in business, as, for instance, the names of six customers whose families have bought Landreth seeds for over 100 years, and the names of 92 employees who have served the firm for periods of from 22 to 52 years, sixteen being still on the pay roll, with terms of service from 22 to 47 years.

WE are informed that the French government has lately bestowed the high distinction of the Cross du Merite Agricole upon Mr. Samson, the senior partner of the well-known firm, Samson & Filloy, seed growers, at Angers (France), as a reward of the high services he has rendered to the cause of agriculture. Mr. Samson is well known in this country, and under his management the firm of Samson & Filloy reached a high rank among the best seed growing firms in Europe.

THE NEW TARIFF BILL.

Ignores Recommendations by Trade.

The net result of the efforts of the three great trade bodies to shape tariff legislation is to get one insignificant change. The new bill, as reported back to congress by the Ways and Means committee March 19, is a distinct disappointment to all florists, seedsmen and nurserymen. The only change from the present law relates to stocks, cuttings or seedlings of Myrobolan plum and Mahaleb or Mazzard cherry, which are put at $1 per thousand, having formerly been 50 cents per thousand and fifteen per centum ad valorem. Mustard is dropped from the free list of seeds and is made dutiable at thirty per centum ad valorem.

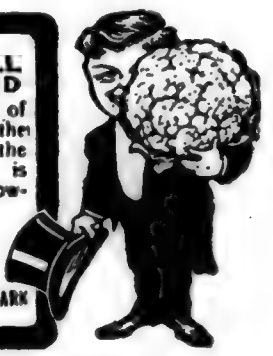
The old, objectionable ad valorem duties are unchanged; there is not even a change in phraseology of the Dingley law, except the few words necessary to cover the one change in rate noted above. The recommendations of the legislative committees of the American Seed Trade Association, the American Association of Nurserymen and the S. A. F., all of which urged the adoption of specific duties instead of ad valorem, are absolutely ignored. The paragraphs covering horticultural imports are as follows:

Section 1—Dutiable.

245. Beans, 45 cents per bushel of sixty pounds.

258. Seed peas, 40 cents per bushel of sixty pounds.

259. Orchids, palms, dracænas, crotons and azaleas, tulips, hyacinths, narcissi, jonquils, lilies, lilies of the valley, and all other bulbs, bulbous roots, or corms, which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage, and natural flowers of all kinds, preserved or fresh, suitable for decorative purposes, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.



260. Stocks, cuttings or seedlings of Myrobolan plum, Mahaleb or Mazzard cherry, three years old or less, $1 per thousand plants (formerly 50 cents per thousand and fifteen per centum ad valorem); stocks, cuttings or seedlings of pear, apple, quince and the Saint Julien plum, three years old or less, and evergreen seedlings, $1 per thousand plants and fifteen per centum ad valorem; rose plants, budded, grafted, or grown on their own roots, 2½ cents each; stocks, cuttings and seedlings of all fruit and ornamental trees, deciduous and evergreen, shrubs and vines, Manetti, multi-flora, and brier rose, and all trees, shrubs, plants and vines, commonly known as nursery or greenhouse stock, not specially provided for in sections one or two of this Act, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

262. Seeds: Castor beans or seeds, 25 cents per bushel of fifty pounds; flaxseed or linseed and other oil seeds not specially provided for in sections one or two of this Act, 25 cents per bushel of fifty-six pounds; poppy seed, 15 cents per bushel; but no drawbacks shall be allowed upon oil cake made from imported seed, nor shall any allowance be made for dirt or other impurities in any seed; seeds of all kinds not specially provided for in sections one or two of this Act, thirty per centum ad valorem.

Section 2—The Free List.

567. Fruit plants, tropical and semi-tropical, for the purpose of propagation or cultivation.

664. Seeds: Anise, caraway, cardamom, cauliflower, coriander, cotton, cummin, fennel, fenugreek, hemp, hoarhound, mangelwurzel (in the Dingley law the word mustard appeared here), rape, Saint John's bread or bean, sugar beet, sorghum or sugar cane for seed; bulbs and bulbous roots, not edible and not otherwise provided for in sections one or two of this Act; all flower and grass seeds; all the foregoing not specially provided for in sections one or two of this Act.

Meeting of Joint Committees.

A meeting of the legislative committees of the three national trade bodies was held at Buffalo March 18. The American Seed Trade Association was represented by J. C. Vaughan, chairman of the tariff committee, and seedsmen were further represented by Kirby H. White, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit. The American Association of Nurserymen was represented by its president, C. J. Brown, by Irving Rouse, chairman of the tariff committee, by W. C. Barry and Wm. Pitkin, all of Rochester, and J. H. Dayton, of Painesville, O. The Society of American Florists was represented by its full legislative committee, F. R. Pierson, chairman; J. D. Eisele and Benj. Hammond. During a session of three hours several other well-known members of the trade, present to attend the meeting of the American Rose Society, dropped in on the committee, and full discussion was had. It was not then known just what the Ways and Means committee of Congress would do, but effort was made to arrive at some common ground, in order that all three bodies might work to the same end and not at cross purposes, as in a measure has been done in the past. The result of the meeting was the adoption of the following resolutions:

"We, the members of the American Seed Trade Association, the American Association of Nurserymen, and the Socicy of American Florists, as represented by our duly authorized committees, and speaking for these three great industries (practically all of the commercial horticultural interests of the United States), unanimously agree upon the following resolution:

"Whereas, There is now pending in the National Congress a tariff measure, known as the Payne Bill; and

"Whereas, This bill may, without prejudice to the welfare of the public, but, on the contrary, to the great economy of customs administrations, be so framed as to relieve all horticultural importers, government officials, etc., of the insuperable difficulties in the way of a fair and equitable administration of any excise, upon this class, of the ad valorem principle; now therefore, be it

Resolved, That collectively and individually we appeal to the Congress to make all duties upon seeds, nursery stock, bulbs, etc., whatever revenue they may be intended to produce, or whatever interests they may protect, upon a specific basis, and not according to value."

There is, of course, a possibility of securing changes in the bill before it becomes a law, but the contests over other sections are so much more important in the eyes of congressmen that it is feared the horticultural trades will find it difficult to attract the attention the justice of their plea deserves.

At the meeting it was mutually agreed that the seedsmen, nurserymen and florists should each keep hands off the others' special interests, so that a united front would be put up in the effort to be made to secure changes in the House and by the finance committee of the Senate.

March 19, 1909.

Executive Committee Meeting.

Secretary W. N. Rudd supplies an official report of the meeting of the executive board, at Cincinnati, March 13 to 16, covering routine work, from which the following points not touched upon in the Review's report last week are noted:

A protest against the charges for space at the trade exhibition at Niagara Falls was received and after careful consideration it was decided that for the next exhibition the charges for space would be largely reduced, and in consideration of that reduction the exhibitors would be required to furnish their own tables and cloth covering for them.

A recommendation from the society for the election of an honorary member was considered and it was decided that as there was no specific provision for the election of an honorary member in the by-laws, it was inexpedient to authorize such action.

It being considered that the presidential addresses in the past have not been properly acted upon and that many important recommendations have failed of attention, the president was requested to appoint a committee in advance of the convention and to submit to the members of this committee copies of his address, and that the committee be instructed to make a special report on the address and its recommendations and some time to be specifically set aside in the program for a general discussion of the address and its report.

A proposed amendment increasing the fee for life membership from $25 to $50 was received and ordered printed in the program for action at the next convention.

A request from the Cincinnati Florists' Club that they be allowed to issue tickets and collect admission from the general public on Thursday in place of receiving any portion of the proceeds of the trade exhibition otherwise, was granted.

It was decided that all interest on the society's funds, both general and permanent, collected during the year 1908 should be transferred to the permanent fund.

The treasurer's report showed that the permanent fund now amounted to over $6,000 and it was deemed that steps looking to the permanent investment of the same should be taken, and a committee consisting of Treasurer Beatty and Messrs. Vesey and Dailledouze was appointed to make such investment.

A resolution was adopted that no goods should be sold at retail at the trade exhibition. It was also decided that an advisory committee of three should be appointed for the trade exhibition. E. F. Winterson was appointed chairman of the sports committee.

Resolutions in memory of E. V. Hallock were adopted and final resolutions expressed the appreciation of the committee of the many hospitalities extended during its stay.

St. Thomas, Ont.—Ralph Crocker is contemplating opening a branch at Aylmer, Ont.

Hackensack, N. J.—S. Hornibrook has succeeded Edgar Knight as gardener for Clement Moore.

I feel that I cannot get along and be up to date without the Review.—W. H. H. Riddle, Butler, Pa.

You Need These Seeds

They are the right kinds for Florists, produced in the right way by the world's best growers. To have choicest cut flowers during the summer, sow now:—

PLUMED CELOSIA Reid's Perfection, a dazzling scarlet of great beauty. Each "plume" produced is a small bouquet itself, and 3 or 4 will make a large, brilliant bunch. Trade packet, 25c; per oz., $1.50.

ASTER, EARLIEST SNOWDRIFT The best for early cutting; very free flowering. This sort will grow money for the florist who plants it. Trade packet, 25c; ¼ oz., 75c.

SWEET PEAS New Orchid-flowering Sorts, Mixed. Should be planted largely for critical trade. Your customers will like those lovely, wavy, gigantic flowers much more than the smaller ones of the older sorts. 15c per oz., 80c per pound.

You'll Want SOME of These BULBS

They sell readily in your store, and the customer who buys them will be reminded of you throughout the growing season.

CALADIUM ESCULENTUM (Elephant Ear). Extra fine, sound bulbs for high class, retail city trade:

Small	doz., $0.60; 100, $4.00		Very large	doz., $2.50; 100, $12.00
Medium	" 1.50 " 8.00		Monsters (average 4½ in. diam.)	" 3.60 " 25.00

GLADIOLI The best bulbs that expert care and suitable soil can produce. My Floracroft Mixture No. 1 contains the choicest sorts, not usually found in mixtures. $1.50 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Everything offered comes up to the STOKES STANDARD of quality.

The Market.

Business has taken a decidedly good turn, and now is moving along at a first-class clip. Something has stirred the flower buying public, for a healthy demand has developed. All of the retail stores report good business, and their only difficulty is to get the proper stock with which to fill orders. While funeral work constitutes a large part of the business, there is still a healthy demand for entertainments of various kinds.

An unusual circumstance is the fact that flowers of all kinds are scarce, without a single exception. Everything is cleaned out at the wholesale houses as fast as the stock arrives, and all orders received in the afternoon have to be turned down. If we could just get enough flowers to take care of the demand, we would be doing a great business, but the cuts from all the growers are below normal. Usually at this time of the year there is a surplus, and though we expect a good business, there is so much stock coming in that prices are held very low. Now, with a scarcity, prices are high, and if these conditions continue they will go higher. We are having some fine weather, and this ought to increase the cut, but it does not appear to do so as much as one would think. Everything considered, we are well satisfied with the way things are going, and if the present conditions continue we ought to have a fine Easter this year. There ought to be a good cut of stock, and it ought to bring good prices.

From the present outlook, it would seem that Easter lilies will not be so plentiful this year, and that they will sell at higher prices. Other varieties of bulbous flowers will also bring better prices, as there are not so many of them being forced this year. The losses which growers of this class of flowers have suffered in the last few years have made them careful as to how heavily they go into it, and as a consequence there will hardly be more than enough to fill all orders. The fine, bright weather we are having, if it continues, may bring in a good crop of carnations, and they ought to be of first-class quality.

More dyed carnations than ever were sold on St. Patrick's day, and the demand for the green carnations seems to be a settled thing. Along with them, all other varieties of flowers sold well.

Various Notes.

A visit to George Corbett's range, located at College Hill, found everyone busy getting bedding plants in shape for the spring demand. Mr. Corbett makes a specialty of this class of stock, and he grows the most popular varieties by the thousands. The quality of the stock is of the best, too, and many things can be learned from a trip through his houses. For one thing, Mr. Corbett believes in making every inch of space pay something, and many of our florists could study his methods to their own advantage in dollars and cents. Besides bedding plants, carnations, roses, violets and lilies are grown for the wholesale cut flower trade, and the quality of the stock is excellent. In the fall mums are extensively grown, and their places are taken later by the bedding plants. Mr. Corbett's place is well worth a visit. He is one of our most successful florists, and the reasons for it are evident.

Max Rudolph's place, also at College Hill, is a model. Everything is in the best possible shape, and the entire place is clean and neat. He grows a general line of stock, but is more inclined to the cut flower end of the business. His roses are fine. A glance at his carnations will show that he will be right in it with a heavy crop for Easter, and the quality of the stock will be the best. Mr. Rudolph handles his own stock at his retail store, located on Twelfth street, but he also has a thriving wholesale business.

Wm. Speck, who has been on the sick list for some time, is slowly improving, and hopes to be out before very long.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., stopped to see us for a few minutes on their way home from a visit at Atlanta, Ga. They expect to be in Cincinnati for the convention, and will probably make the trip in their motor car.

Ben Eschner was a caller, and reports business as being fine. C. J. Ohmer.

Burlington, Vt.—William Stuart, professor of horticulture at the University of Vermont, has received an appointment in the Bureau of Plant Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, and will take up his new work at the close of the present college year.

Fort Collins, Colo.—F. C. Grable has given W. G. Sutherland, of Boulder, a commission to execute landscape work on his property at Valley View. The plans call for the construction of several miles of driveways, thirty feet in width, all surfaced with gravel; the setting out of 3,000 ornamental trees and shrubs, including pine, spruce and other evergreen trees, and the transforming of the place into one of the most beautiful spots in Colorado.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

propagating bench at once. It is rather early to root the main batch of these for next winter, but you can get plenty of additional tops from these cuttings in a few weeks. These, if propagated as late as the end of May, will develop into fine, bushy plants.

Cinerarias.

Probably you are trying to hold a number of cinerarias for Easter. They will stand a low temperature at any stage of their growth. One year we kept a batch in frames without fire heat all winter, and they came in useful for Easter, which came late that year. Of course, they will not stand a breath of frost, but it does no harm to let the temperature fall to 34 to 36 degrees where they are grown. As we are liable to get some quite warm days between now and Easter, it may be necessary to move them to a cold, well shaded house, or place them on a cellar floor for a time. Be sure not to let them suffer from want of water. The foliage will speedily show ill effects from dry conditions at the root.

Spiraeas.

If the earliest spikes of spiræas are becoming white, they will be in nice season for Easter. These plants stand forcing, or will do in quite a cool house. Wherever you have them, be sure that they have an ample water supply. One thorough drying out will destroy all the flower heads when they are expanded. It is a safe plan to put a saucer under the plants in flower; there is then a small likelihood of their suffering from the neglect of any careless employee. If your plants are backward, they can stand 70 degrees at night, but try to move them into cooler quarters at least a week before Easter, or they will wilt badly when exposed to a low temperature, such as the outside of the store.

Rambler Roses.

Rambler roses for Easter should now be coming into flower. Unless your plants are decidedly backward, it is better not to subject them to hard forcing. The flowers are of a much richer hue when opened in a comparatively cool house. Plants becoming well opened will require a cool, shaded house. As all the rose pots are now a mass of roots, be sure they get abundant supplies of water. We look this season for a continued advance in the popularity of the pink rambler class over the older Crimson Rambler. The new Tausendschon also promises to be in great favor.

Now is a good time to secure canes from plants which are to be sold at Easter, and cut them up for propagating purposes. Cuttings with a couple of eyes we prefer. These will soon root in their present half ripened condition, and can be grown along into nice little stock before fall. A cutting bench, such as you are in the habit of using for carnations, will root the rambler roses satisfactorily.

Pruning Hardy Climbers.

While we get so much alternate freezing and thawing, it is unwise to remove much of the winter mulch from perennials and bulbous plants. Pansies, daisies, hollyhocks and other stock of a somewhat doubtfully hardy nature will also suffer if their coverings are removed too hurriedly. Remove any which may seem a little heavy, but leave a scattering over all until the weather becomes more settled.

It is now a suitable time to complete the pruning of any climbers, such as begonias, wistarias, clematis, aristolochia, celastrus, actinidia and others. Any of the ornamental vitis, or grapes, should be gone over without delay, or they will bleed badly. In the case of Clematis paniculata, it is better to cut the plants fairly close to the ground each season. The climbing roses have wintered remarkably well, and show but little dead wood. Their pruning can be delayed a little longer yet, but any protection in the way of straw or evergreens can now be removed.

Propagation.

With bedding plants there is still ample time to root quantities of stock in the way of coleus, alternanthera, lobelia, ageratums, acalyphas, heliotropes and other quick growing subjects. Get in cuttings also of any crotons, dracænas and other colored-leaved plants. Better cut down old, leggy plants and consign them to the rubbish heap in favor of young stock, unless they are wanted for sub-tropical bedding. All cuttings want abundant water supplies until rooted; then reduce the amount. Never let cuttings remain in the sand any longer than can be helped, once they are rooted.

Poinsettias.

A reader asks, "How soon shall I start up my poinsettias?" Let them remain where they are for some weeks yet. May is sufficiently early to start them. They make cuttings quickly after being shaken out, potted and placed in a warm house. If started now, you would have tall, lanky plants of no value for Christmas, unless planted in a bench where they can have abundant head room, and poinsettias in pans, twelve to eighteen inches in height, are of better value than stems five to six feet long in a bench, even if the latter do carry bracts eighteen inches in diameter.

PACIFIC COAST.

San Gabriel, Cal.—Wm. J. Bodger is planting several thousand young chrysanthemum plants in the open field, for flowering, with four or five stems to the plant.

S. M., Berkeley, Cal., is advised to write fully to any of the firms advertising greenhouse material in the Review—but he will have to sign his full name and address to receive a reply.

Bellingham, Wash.—Henry Klopfer, of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, and for the last two years propagator at the Plant Introduction Garden at Chico, Cal., has been transferred to the new Bulb Propagating Garden, located in this city. Mr. Klopfer is a young man of wide experience and is well known in the vicinity of Chicago. The Bulb Garden is a new acquisition by the Department of Agriculture.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather, except for a few days of drying north winds, has rather favored the dealers during the last week. Flowers are plentiful, and for the first time this year we can say that there are plenty of roses to fill all requirements. Fancy Beauties sell well at $2.50 per dozen, with a tendency to a slight rise as we near Easter. Carnations are about stationary in price, with a good demand for the lighter colors. Reds and the deeper pink shades have not moved so well as the growers would like to see them. Violets are showing some signs of getting in less supply, and the quality is also somewhat on the wane.

Valley is in good supply, and moves slowly, and the same can be said of Easter lilies. Daffodils have proven to be among the most seasonable flowers handled by the dealers this year, and although the prices have been rather low throughout, they have been good sellers. Tulips are daily getting more plentiful, but there has been up to this time only a fair demand for them. All the white varieties of narcissi are practically out of market, as are also freesias and hyacinths. Green stuff of all kinds moves well, and fruit blossoms and wild flowers are being used lavishly in decorations of various kinds.

From inquiries among the growers and shippers, it appears that there will be plenty of shipping trade for Easter from interior towns. Calla lilies are overplentiful and will bring but low prices for Easter decorating. Good smilax is scarce and in demand. Maidenhair fern, except of the wild varieties, is also a quiet article at present, and but little good long-stemmed stock is shown.

Various Notes.

The Art Floral Co. has removed to 239 Post street.

J. Heatherington has opened a plant sales yard in San Rafael, Cal.

John Martin, of Ross, Cal., has finished a carnation house, 25x75 feet.

C. E. Lilley, the green goods man, is now located at Capitola, Cal.

The Wickstrom Floral Co. has given up its Van Ness avenue store.

John L. Burns, of Los Angeles, is in town on a few days' vacation. G.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Business has been rather quiet for the last month, though not any worse than usual during the Lenten season. There has been plenty of funeral work to keep the stock from accumulating. There does not seem to be a surplus of anything, and the outlook for Easter business was never better on the coast.

Various Notes.

C. E. Morton, of the Redondo Floral Co., has returned home from a trip to Chicago and other points in the east. He reports that he had a splendid time.

Dr. Houghton, vice-president of the Los Angeles Florists' Club, has been nominated by the Good Government League for mayor of this city, and no doubt will receive the heartiest support of every florist in the city.

Mrs. Pryor, formerly of Chicago, mother of Mrs. Edward H. Rust, died March 16. The funeral was held from the family residence, Friday, March 19. Mr. and Mrs. Rust have the sympathy of the craft in their bereavement.

PALMS AS SIDEWALK TREES.

Along the Pacific coast, considerable inquiry is always indulged in by the planting public at this season of the year in reference to the advisability of planting hardy palms for sidewalk trees, and unless the dealer is well informed on this subject, his advice may not have much value to the planter.

To begin with, if it is the intention to plant a wide avenue where there is plenty of room on the sidewalks for the trees to spread, by all means set out Phœnix Canariensis, as this is certainly the king of all the palm family. They are easily transplanted, root deeply when once established, and at any age or height are the most decorative of the family.

Next in order, where the sidewalks are narrower and there is not much space to spare, we have the choice of three varieties of the brahea family and one or two chamærops. Of the quickest growing of these, B. filamentosa takes the lead, closely followed by B. robusta (Washingtonia robusta). The former grows faster than the other and spreads out a trifle more. It is slightly more difficult to transplant than any of the other varieties, but when once started and given a sufficient supply of water it makes a splendid showing in a short time.

When the space is much limited the Chamærops excelsa is our most valued tree. It is of the easiest culture and, when once established, reaches upward with a considerable degree of quickness.

The great trouble with palms upon the sidewalks is their uneven growth. This is easily remedied by digging away from the slow growing trees and giving them a few thorough waterings during the dry season, meanwhile keeping the moisture away from the larger trees. If this is judiciously done, the trees can be made to keep the same rapidity of growth with little trouble. G.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus

Last year, owing to the almost total failure of the Asparagus Plumosus to seed, I was unable to fill my orders, but this season I am to the front with about 2,000,000 seed.

The plants, after a year's rest, blossomed freely and matured a heavy crop of what I believe will be the strongest seed ever sent out of California. The Asparagus Plumosus grown here needs no introduction to you, however, as you are already fully acquainted with its merits. You can get seed promptly, as they are being harvested now, and can be delivered upon receipt of your order.

Seeds will be sold by count, with the usual guarantee as to germination, and I will again sell at my usual low, cash-with-order prices as per following list:

1,000 seeds	$ 2.00	13,000 seeds	$20.00
6,000 seeds	10.00	25,000 seeds	35.00

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

THE nurseries are just about as busy as they can be, with spring shipments, and there is no complaint of dull business anywhere.

THE sale for ornamental trees and shrubs is on the rapid increase all over the country and prospects are that only the surface of the market has as yet been scratched.

PETERSON NURSERY, Chicago, says this is the busiest season to date in its landscape department. It is no longer a question of getting business, but of taking the usual care of it all.

HARRY KALLEN, of Kallen & Lunnemann, Boskoop, Holland, has arrived in New York for a tour of the trade. Besides his own firm, he represents R. H. Bath, Julius Hansen and A. Aloncius.

THE importations of Holland-grown nursery stock this year are large, and may even make a new record, in spite of some uncertainty as to future business conditions at the time the Holland salesmen were here last year.

How ineffectual has been the agitation for changes in the tariff law is shown on page 41 of this issue. The new bill proposes only one change, on Myrobolan plum and Mahaleb or Mazzard cherry stocks or seedlings, from 50 cents per thousand and fifteen per centum ad valorem to a straight $1 per thousand.

GEORGE T. CRANE, of Spokane, has purchased the nurseries of W. J. Doust, at Brewster, Wash., for $50,000. Three years ago this piece of property was sold for $12,000, A. L. Smith and W. J. Doust, both of Spokane, being the purchasers. Smith later sold his interest to Doust. The piece contains about 120 acres.

A BILL in the New York legislature amends the present nursery inspection law, detailing a method whereby claims may be made for nursery stock destroyed in the suppression of disease. The law provides in the first instance that the value of the infested or diseased stock shall be determined by the commissioner of agriculture. If the owner of the stock be not satisfied with the value fixed in such appraisal, two arbitrators shall be appointed, one by the owner and the other by the commissioner of agriculture, and the value fixed by such arbitrators shall be final when duly approved by the commissioner. But if the arbitrators fail to agree, then each arbitrator shall make a report to the commissioner, setting forth the values as determined by him, and the commissioner shall thereafter fix a value which shall be final. The bill, as heretofore, appropriates $25,000 for the expenses of nursery inspection.

JAMESIA AMERICANA.

Although introduced to cultivation between forty and fifty years ago, that charming deciduous shrub, Jamesia Americana, is so seldom seen beyond the boundaries of botanic gardens that it appears desirable planters should have their attention drawn to its merits. Jamesia Americana is not showy, and that may, perhaps, have militated against its becoming popular; but, if not showy, it is extremely beautiful, and it strongly appeals to those who appreciate elegance of growth and quiet coloring at their true value. It belongs to a monotypic genus, and is a native of the Rocky Mountains, whence it was introduced to cultivation in 1865. The growth is light and elegant, and attains a height of between two and three feet; the leaves are oval, serrated at the edges, bright green on the upper surface, and grayish white on the undersides; the flowers are pure white, about half an inch in diameter, and borne in paniculate clusters at the points of the shoots. There is a fine bed of it at the Royal Gardens, Kew, England, which makes so fine a showing each June that the Gardeners' Magazine recently made it the subject of a half-page illustration. It is quite hardy and will thrive in any soil that is fairly friable and well drained. On cold, wet soils the wood might not become fully matured, and the flower production be less than would be the case under favorable conditions. Propagation is readily effected by means of cuttings of well-ripened shoots. The cuttings should be taken early in the autumn, be prepared in accordance with the orthodox practice, and inserted in pots, pans, or boxes filled with sandy soil, and be placed in an unheated frame. It is necessary, as in the case of the cuttings of other shrubs, to keep the frame rather close until they have calloused, when the ventilation can be gradually increased.

PARK SUPERINTENDENTS.

The executive committee of the American Association of Park Superintendents met at Buffalo March 17. The secretary-treasurer read a report which showed there were three honorary members and ninety-nine active members. The treasurer's report showed $294.10 collected, $402.23 expended, and a balance of $60.92 on hand. The annual report and bulletin No. 5 have been printed and distributed. Nearly 150 copies were sent to other superintendents, in the hope of interesting them in the association.

The date for the annual meeting in Seattle, Wash., was set for August 9 to 11, and August 12 in Tacoma. J. W. Thompson, of Seattle; Theo. Wirth, of Minneapolis; President John W. Duncan, of Boston, and Secretary-Treasurer F. L. Mulford were appointed as a committee of arrangements.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The Lenten season is moving along nicely, and while trade is not increasing, it seems to hold its own.

Tulips and other bulb flowers, as well as lilies, are not much in evidence, while Beauties and roses get more plentiful. Carnations are also shorter, but enough to supply all demands.

Various Notes.

The public conservatories have fine shows, and are attracting many lovers of flowers.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. is making heavy cuts of Killarney, Richmond and Bride roses, all of which are fine enough for show stock. They expect their Easter cut to be the largest and finest they ever had. Hoo-Hoo.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.

John A. Winton, of Knightstown, Ind., brother-in-law and former partner of B. F. Hensley, has purchased a half interest, from Dr. Edward Reiss, in the Terre Haute Rose & Carnation Co., of this city, assuming charge March 10. This plant consists of 50,000 square feet of glass, all built since 1906.

John G. Heinl, the pioneer florist of this city, has been made a member, with the rank of secretary, of Terre Haute's newly created park board. By act of the last legislature, Terre Haute was placed among the cities of the second class, one result of which was the creation of a park board, appointed by the mayor. Mr. Heinl's appointment meets with universal favor, as the community knows he is particularly well suited to act on this board.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal; closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Immediate delivery.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50 00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Trade has been active all the week. A steady demand for funeral work has kept stock of every description continually on the move. The supply has been about equal to the demand, except in the case of white roses and carnations. White Enchantress is the principal white variety grown hereabouts, and the fact that these are off crop with most of the growers about the same time accounts for the scarcity of white carnations.

Various Notes.

Mrs. J. F. Sullivan suffered a severe attack of blood poisoning last week, and for several days was in a critical condition. Monday, March 22, she appeared to be resting more easily, and the attending physicians were well pleased with the prospects for her recovery.

The home of E. A. Fetters was the scene of a rather disastrous fire early Tuesday evening, March 16. Among other things, a number of valuable paintings were destroyed.

George Browne, of Greenfield, came very close to having pneumonia, but fortune favored him at the last minute, letting him off with a severe cold.

Openings were in order in many of our leading stores last week, calling for many palms, baskets, etc. B. Schroeter's staff were kept on the jump all the week.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange is handling extra fine fancy ferns.

The Detroit Landscape Gardening Co., with headquarters at 947 Baldwin avenue, is the new concern of which Henry C. Fruck is manager.

The Lorraine Flower Shop reports trade as being very gratifying. The balance of the business in which the firm was interested has changed hands, but this will in no way affect the Flower Shop. H. S.

Fitzgerald, Ga.—Business is fair and there are excellent prospects ahead, because the cold nights during the big freeze killed practically all the plants outdoors. Joel Thomas says this ought to lead to a big increase in the business this spring.

NEW ROSE
WHITE KILLARNEY

Come and see White Killarney growing at our Scarborough houses, and you will say at once, as every one does who has seen it, it is they have ever seen. You need it if you want to be up to the times, and it will pay you better than any other white rose that you can plant. You will regret it if you do not plant it this year, and you will not regret it if you do. Big lots are being booked. Get your order in early. Send us order at once, while you think of it. Get early stock. It will not cost you any more to order today, while you think of it, than it will two months from now. Be the early bird that catches the worm.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Market conditions, for mid-Lent, are more than satisfactory. Work for funerals has been plentiful. This, combined with wedding decorations and department store openings, is keeping the retailers busy.

Stock has not been too plentiful. Roses and carnations are plentiful, but the big demand cleans them up daily. Violets, peas, orchids and valley are not coming in quantity. Good Beauties are scarce. Bulbous stuff is more than enough to go around. Pot plants, especially bulbous stock, are selling well. The indications are that lilies will be scarce for Easter.

Various Notes.

A. F. J. Baur spent Saturday and Sunday in Richmond.

Bertermann Bros. Co. reports business good last week, with a number of good wedding decorations and plenty of funeral work. They expect to add to their range this year.

T. B. Pritchard, formerly with A. Wiegand & Sons, and recently with J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, has taken a position with Clarke Bros., in Portland, Ore. His many friends here wish him success.

Baur & Smith report a heavy demand for geraniums this year.

E. J. Fancourt, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., is here this week.

Chas. Pahud is the proud father of a new ten-pound boy.

A. Wiegand & Sons are putting in a motorcycle for light delivery, and have purchased an automobile for pleasure. This firm had three department store openings last week, using more than 900 palms and ferns. H. L. W.

ELBERON, N. J.

The Elberon Horticultural Society held its regular meeting March 15. A large number of the members were on hand, to hear a paper read by Peter Murray on "Fumigating with Hydrocyanic Acid Gas." Mr. Murray has great success with this method of fumigating, and explained its use very thoroughly.

Henry Wood, former president of the society, is rapidly recovering from a severe illness. W. B.

SANGAMO

Is the new, brilliant, glistening pink carnation shown at Indianapolis and awarded the A. C. S. Certificate of Merit, attracting the attention of every carnation grower on account of its very pleasing color, long, stiff stem, and well formed flowers, measuring 3 to 3½ inches. The calyx is strong, and as a producer, it cannot be excelled.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Business is good, especially funeral work. The Lenten season does not seem to have much effect, so far as the buying of flowers is concerned. Stock has been scarce, especially roses and carnations, and prices have kept up well. The weather is fine and getting warmer, so an increase in stock is looked for.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel has bought several acres of land adjoining his greenhouses. It is a valuable piece of property, and he is fortunate in getting it.

Austin Wallace, formerly with W. W. Coles, at Kokomo and other places, will build a house 42 by 100 feet, this spring. He expects to grow roses.

Ben Kramer reports good business. Mrs. Kramer is visiting friends in Chicago.

Royston & Fenton are receiving nice carnations, sweet peas and violets from W. J. Ritterskamp, of Princeton, Ind.

John Elspermann finds it difficult to get enough stock to supply the demand.

E. L. T.

Moline, Ill.—A deed transferring between eleven and twelve acres of land in the village of Watertown from Eunice Warren to John and Henry Staack has been filed for record. The realty consideration was $3,000. The Staacks will erect probably four large greenhouses on the tract, to cover three or four acres of ground.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business last week was fine all around, and stock, which is of good quality, is just equal to demand. All the week, however, white carnations and Beauties were scarce. Bulbous stock does not arrive in such large quantities any more, and Easter lilies are not plentiful. The green goods market is well supplied, with the exception of smilax.

Various Notes.

Walter Mass, for several years buyer for the M. A. McKenney Co., has resigned and contemplates going into business with his father.

The Baumgarten Floral Co. finds business so brisk as to necessitate adding more help at the store.

Will Zimmerman says that green carnations sold well on St. Patrick's day—better than was expected.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. reports a lively call for folding cut flower boxes for the Easter trade.

The news of the death of Mrs. Phil Hauswirth, of Chicago, was a surprise to all of us. Although it was known that she was sick, still it was not thought to be quite so serious. C. C. Pollworth left to attend the funeral, Monday morning, March 22.

W. Helwig is about to open a retail store on Mitchell street.

Louis Turner, of Kenosha, was a visitor.

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

The weather is very favorable, and business is fair. Roses and carnations are good and plentiful, and meet with ready sales. Bulbous stock is good and finds a good demand. Some freesias of fairly good quality are on the market. Funeral work is keeping up well and cleans out quantities of flowers. Plants, such as bulbous stock in pots and pans, have a good demand. All the florists are well supplied with geraniums and other spring stock.

Various Notes.

J. Ferdinand Keller, manager of the J. A. Keller estate, is busy these days with Easter and spring stock.

Jas. P. Keller had a very pretty window of bulbous stock at the downtown store last week.

O. C. Heberling, of the Georgetown Floral Co., Georgetown, Ky., has been sending in some good carnations and roses.

Mr. Nichols, superintendent of the City cemetery, and his force of assistants, are busy at that place, getting things in shape for spring.

DENVER.

The Market.

Business last week was good—in fact, the best since the commencement of Lent. There was a good run of funeral work, and St. Patrick's day created quite a demand for white and green carnations. As there was apparently a good supply on hand, there was no shortage, but the price kept firm. Other carnations are in good supply, and some low prices are quoted, but first-class stock remains at the same figure.

Roses are in good supply also, with the exception of Beauties. None of the houses are able as yet to report any increase in the cut of these. The quality has improved a little, and the demand has been such that all Beauties sell at good prices.

The plant trade has been good, with any quantity of bulbous flowers.

Various Notes.

J. A. Valentine, president of the S. A. F., has returned from the meeting of the executive committee at Cincinnati.

August Schenkel, of 3514 West Twenty-ninth avenue, attempted suicide by shooting himself through the head last week. His aim was unsteady, and instead of sending the bullet through his head, he simply suffered a flesh wound in the left cheek. He was taken to the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Elitch-Long, of the Elitch-Long Greenhouses, have returned from the east. E. S. K.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

Business is fair. Flowers are not so plentiful.

The Krueger Bros. Co. reports business as good. They have the glass on their farm for an addition of three houses, 30x250, which they intend to put up this coming season.

W. G. Haebich, who has been the florist in charge at the Northwestern State Hospital for the Insane, is about to take charge of the greenhouses of the Henry Salzer Co., at La Crosse, Wis. Mr. Haebich, having many years' experience in the business, ought to be the right man for the place. He has a number of friends in the trade in this city who are very sorry to see him leave. E. A. K.

Scranton, Pa.—G. R. Clark and Thomas McClintock, members of the Scranton Florists' Club, are making preparations for the annual show, which will be held in St. Luke's parish house March 25 and 26.

New Dahlias

Plants for Delivery April 1

JACK ROSE (Decorative). Rich, velvety crimson, early and free blooming, on long stems. An ideal cut flower.

VIRGINIA MAULE (Decorative). Delicate tint of shell pink. It certainly is the coming commercial Pink Dahlia.

PRINCESS VICTORIA (Show). Pure creamy yellow, without shade or blemish from bud until old age.

ETHEL SCHMIDT (Show). Pure white, flushed delicate pink, dotted and penciled crimson.

SENSATION. A new double Century, vivid vermilion, heavily tipped white.

BIG CHIEF. A new double Century, brilliant cherry red, margined rich velvety maroon.

GLADYS (Century.) Each petal has a brilliant rose crimson center, divided from the broad, rosy pink edge by a white penciling.

FRINGED 20th CENTURY. Similar to 20th Century in color; the petals are deeply cleft, giving it a fringed appearance.

ROSE-PINK CENTURY. Clear rose-pink, immense size, perfect form, and suffused, soft rosy lake.

FRINGED BEAUTY. Another fringed Century, large white overlaid suffused soft rosy lake.

50c each, $5.00 per dozen, $35.00 per 100, except Princess Victoria, which is $1.00 each, $10.00 per dozen.

NEW ORLEANS.

Club Meeting.

This is a time of the year when every florist is busy disposing of his spring stock in filling orders. On that account, no doubt, the last meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society was poorly attended, although it was quite interesting. After the general routine business J. A. Newsham passed a few remarks on different orchids collected and raised by him. M. E. Baker read an interesting paper on "The Advantage of Teaching School Children How to Raise Plants and Sow Seeds." P. Chopin and C. R. Panter made several propositions to induce the public in general to take the advice of the society in regard to planting trees in the city, a movement which is in great favor now.

Various Notes.

M. Cook's Sons have a fine lot of hydrangeas coming in time for Easter. Their tuberous-rooted begonias and gloxinias are also blooming nicely. M. Cook, Sr., has purchased a piece of ground, known as the "Home of Flowers" and formerly occupied by R. Metre, the veteran florist of the south. He is remodeling the place as a first-class florists' establishment, to start his son, R. Cook, in business.

PREPARE FOR EASTER

FROM WHOM WILL WE PURCHASE OUR EASTER SUPPLY?

From our old friend, Godfrey Aschmann, of Philadelphia, of course. He was our man of the past and he shall be our man this Easter, and, as long as he ships us good plants, he shall be our man in the future. He always treated us right before and we can rely upon him. What he advertises is true and is no bluff.

If you would know the fairest sight your eyes can ever see,
Where the most perfect plants are grown, to Aschmann's come with me.
Why! Ne'er since flowers began to bloom was such a glorious show
Of all the best that florists need found in one place to grow.
The lilies are the very best yet seen on Easter day,
Azaleas are whole sheets of flowers, perfect in every way.
The Araucarias matchless are, so are the ferns all green,
With bulbs, and plumed Spiræa, the best you've ever seen.
And Aschmann gives a challenge, let every florist hear,
For flowers or prices, either, no rival does he fear.
If you wish to gather dollars like violets in the spring,
Then send your largest order, his plants the cash will bring.

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week, or earlier, if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come yourself or mail your order direct to headquarters.

Our reputation in growing Easter plants for the wholesale market, to which we ship all over the entire country, Canada and Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans, for many years past, is sufficient guarantee to prove our ability.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have three houses full of the choicest. Only best, well-known American varieties are imported, and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Van der Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tip-top condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade. 6 to 7-in. pots, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Deutsche Perle. This is the best pure double white, 6-in. pots, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50. Outside the Deutsche Perle we have no white to offer in small sizes, because the other varieties, Niobe and Bernard Andrea alba, of which we had a large stock, during transportation across the sea and during winter lost all their buds and have to be carried over for another year. This first variety the year imported does not do well, but makes fine plants the next year. All the varieties, except these two whites, are in fine condition, full of buds and flowers and A-1 stock.

Bernard Andrea alba (white). We have mostly big plants, $1.50, $2.00, $3.00 to $3.50 each; a few smaller sizes, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. Niobe, also white, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Vervaeneana. De Schryveriana (double variegated), 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Dr. Moore and Memoire de L. Van Houtte (double pink), $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Professeur Wolters, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Empress of India, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Apollo (red), 50c, 60c, 75c to $1.00. Other good varieties, such as John Llewellyn, Empereur du Bresil, Talisman, Helene Thelemann, etc., 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Easter Lilies, Lilium Multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily, directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10-in. bulbs, and therefore he ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our greenhouses you must all admit they are "crackerjacks." We sell them cheap, too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-in. pots. An order for a reasonable quantity of other stock must accompany the one for lilies. An order for lilies only will not be filled.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5 good leaves, 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c and 75c; 4-in.. 35c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25, 30, 40 to 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 20 to 25 in. high, 50c to 60c.

ARAUCARIAS

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds, same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, 7 to 8-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 3, 4 and 5 tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 20, 25, 30 and 35 in. high, an Elephant for only 75c; a Jumbo for $1.00 and a Holy Terror for $1.25 to $1.50.

Tournesol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14 00 per 100.

Begonia, new, improved Erfordii, 5-in. pots, $2.50 per dozen. Flambeau, 5-in., $2.00 per dozen.

Primula obconica, 5-in., $2.00 to $2.50 dozen.

Yellow and White Daisies, 5-in. pots, $2.00 dozen.

Cineraria hybrida grandiflora. Henry F. Michell Co.'s new improved strain. Our plants and flowers of this strain are twice the size of those of other years, with perfect green foliage, almost as big as a bushel basket, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Spiraea Gladstone. This variety, owing to the dry summer in Holland last year, will be very scarce this Easter, but we, fortunately, secured enough to fill one house full, and they are now in fine condition, full of buds, 6-in. to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each. Spiraea Floribunda, Compacta, Japonica and Superba, 6-in pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c each.

Hybrid roses, grafted, such as John Laing, Brunner, and Magna Charta, 6-in. pots, 30c; 3 ft. high, 50c, 75c to $1.00. Hermosa, 5-in., 30c to 35c. Rambler Dorothy Perkins, 6-in., 50c to 75c.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c.

Daffodil Von Sion, double-nosed bulbs. This is the best double yellow narcissus in existence, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3 bulbs in one pot, $2.50 to $3.00 per dozen pots.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in. pots, 3 plants in a pot, 25c.

Ficus Elastica (rubbers), 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c.

Two houses of ferns. Whitmani ferns, 8-in. to 9-in. pans, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50; 7-in. pots, very large, $1.25 to $1.50.

Boston Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Scottii Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in., 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Amerpohlii, very fine, 6-in., 50c to 75c.

Wilsoni in pans, 35c.

Asparagus Plumosus, large, 3-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hydrangea Otaksa, for Easter, pot-grown, 6 to 7 in., 35c 50c, 75c to $1.00.

Hermosa roses, 6-in. pots, 30 to 36 inches high, 50c.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please. Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots.

All bulbs are now under cover in cold frame and will bloom in two weeks from time of bringing them in the greenhouse.

SPRINGFIELD'S ROSE INDUSTRY.

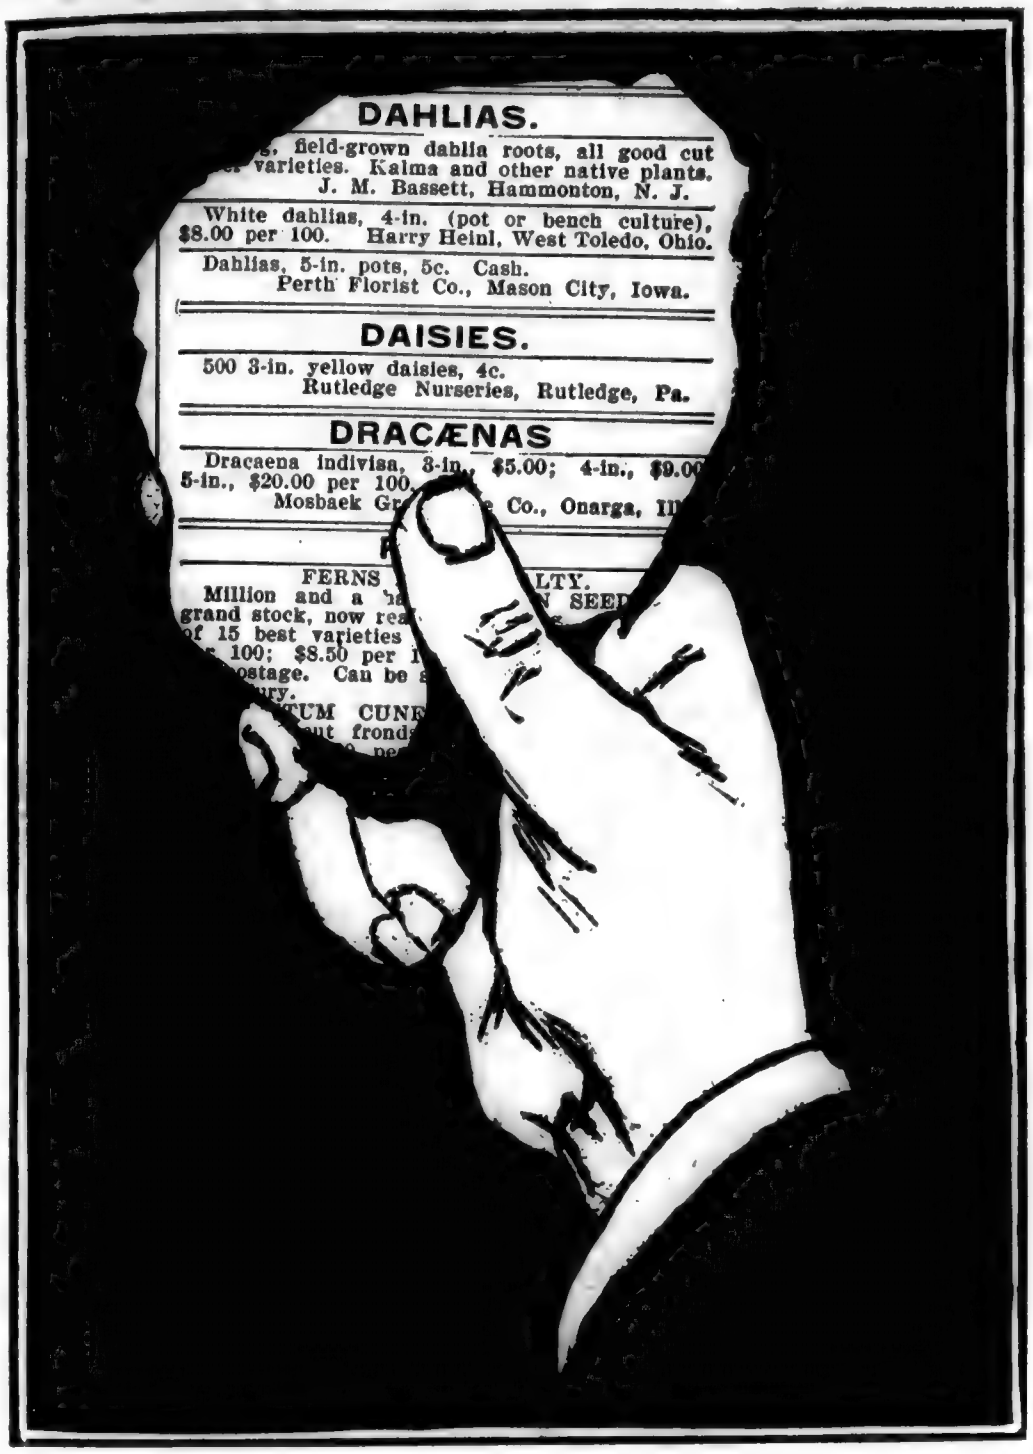
tion. One retail mail order catalogue, to our knowledge, has endeavored to discourage correspondence by mentioning a charge of 10 cents for each written letter in reply to any particular inquiry.



Girl labor is gradually being introduced in the growing, labeling and packing of roses and other plants at the various greenhouses, and by reason of their faithfulness, attentiveness, deftness of hand and aptness to learn, they are conceded to be preferable to boys or young men for many classes of work.

The Simple Life.

The growers of roses by the own-root, summer propagation method are inclined to take issue with the cut flower houses following the method of propagating in the winter from forced and practically exhausted stock. It is argued that it is against the laws of nature to propagate in the non-growing season, when such vegetation should naturally be taking a rest, just the same as living beings require the rest of night after a day of activity. And it is claimed that stock forced for blooms for a year or two of constant strain must naturally be lacking in the vitality of blood necessary to make a vigorous and healthy offspring; that in the long run the quite small plant propagated at the natural time from wood taken from a parent in the prime of its vigor will win out over its competitor propagated at an unnatural time from constantly forced and exhausted stock.

In other words, it is held that the florist about to plant for cut roses, instead of propagating from his own stock or purchasing say 3-inch pot roses from another cut flower house, had better buy and take a new start with fresh and vigorous and naturally grown plants from 2½-inch or even 2-inch pots. To meet the demands of cut rose houses, local growers have frequently discussed the advisability of attempting to meet the demand for 3-inch stock for planting in May or June, but they are always up against the stubborn fact that the 3-inch pot occupies the same space as three 2-inch pots, and bench room for a large quantity of 3-inch seems never to be available, being always in demand either for the 2-inch or 2½-inch stock, or for that which is on the benches for propagating purposes.

No Trade Secrets.

Finally, as to the Springfield method of rose growing, it has in some cases been assumed that this is in the nature of a trade secret, but such is by no means the case. Every department of every greenhouse in this locality is open to the inspection of any and every person practically every day and night of the year, visitors invariably being given a cordial welcome. Nevertheless, the success of the local plant growing industry has been built on years of long and varied experience, and the art is not to be learned in a day. Moreover, all natural requisites are at hand, among which are admirably adapted soils, just the right sand, suitable stable manure mingled with straw, a favorable climate, experienced help, central location for shipping, encouragement of one grower to another, and a multitude of other considerations too numerous to mention.

From start to finish, the battle against diseases, pests and possible disasters too numerous to mention is something terrifying, and the unceasing vigilance and extreme caution required might best be likened to raising a baby. Among other things, the stock plants are liable to be attacked by grub worms, fungus, green fly, scorching from sun heat by reason of slight delay in watering, while the advisability of disbudding or not and the proper ripening prior to cutting are problems requiring critical judgment and watch-care. The cuttings in the hotbeds are constantly on a tremble between life and death, being subject to fungus and other attacks, and sensitive to momentary changes from cloud to sunshine, from sunshine to storm, and from moist to dry atmospheric conditions, so that happy is the head grower after he lifts a choice lot of rooted cuttings showing a fair or extra good strike. When finally potted, the young plants are still tender, and a little too much or too little sun or under or overwatering may prove fatal, and even after having been started fairly on the journey of life their enemies are legion; mildew, black spot, red spider, leaf rollers and a host of other pests are seeking their lives by night and by day.

The Problem of Varieties.

For the commercial rose plant grower, one of the most difficult problems is to determine what varieties to grow and what not to grow and what quantity of each to plant. One season there may be a shortage of a certain variety and the next a surplus, so that it keeps one constantly guessing as to the probable trend of demand for the numerous sorts in more or less popular favor. Even more difficult is it to correctly forecast the rapidity with which a new sort will be taken into favor liberally by the trade, and the matter of buying stock plants at 10 cents to 30 cents or 50 cents each is somewhat in the nature of a gamble, for the average grower having no traveling salesman to personally introduce a new rose at a comparatively high price.

On this subject, the best informed man in America, if not in the whole world, in our opinion, is your esteemed member from Indiana, who irrepressibly bobs up every few months with not only one new and great thing, but a whole bookful of tempting novelties and late introductions from Europe, and he is ready to prescribe on a moment's notice the very thing which will best meet any long-felt or short-felt want which you may happen to express, and you pay your money and take your choice. Despite the fact that Mr. Hill has a keen eye for business, we view him upon the whole as a philanthropist in the matter of disseminating valuable knowledge and in encouraging greater things in the growing of roses and other beautiful things in general, to say nothing of his own accomplishments in the line of hybridizing.

PINK ASTILBES.

There can be no question as to the beauty and value of the new pink flowered astilbes (more commonly called spiræas), and therefore we must accord all the more praise to Astilbe Davidii, the strong growing, deep colored species that is so fine grown near water, says an English gardeners' magazine. The latter was one parent of the newest race of pink astilbes, and A. astilboides floribunda is the other. Several beautiful forms of this hybrid were exhibited before the Royal Horticultural Society July 21 last, and attracted a great deal of attention. The plants were all of sturdy growth, and said to be absolutely hardy. These crossbred plants, raised by Mr. Arends, of Ronsdorf, Germany, open up a fine prospect for planting in moist situations and in beds or borders for giving charming effects, for, with rare exceptions, all the herbaceous members of the spiræa group of plants are elegant and beautiful. Two varieties, among the several that Mr. Arends has raised, stand out prominently by reason of their distinctness, vigor and delightful coloring, and these are Astilbe Arendsi Ceres and A. Arendsi Pink Pearl. The former grows about two and one-half feet high and produces graceful plumose spikes of deep rose-pink flowers. A. Arendsi Pink Pearl is soft, pearly pink, quite distinct, and equally beautiful, and the flowers open more slowly than in the case of the first-named variety, so that the flowering period is prolonged. To each of these two new astilbes the Royal Horticultural Society has granted an award of merit.

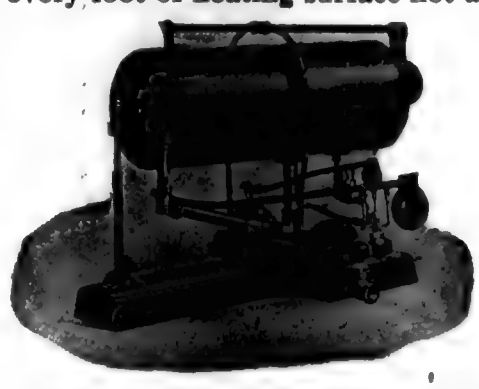
Greenhouse Heating.

HOT WATER FOR LONG HOUSE.

What is the greatest length of greenhouses that can be properly heated with hot water, using 2-inch wrought iron pipe as radiation? I have now in operation one house, 38x200, heated with 2-inch hot water pipe, using eight 2-inch flows and eight 2-inch returns. I should like to add another 200 feet to this, making a house 400 feet long, heated from one end, as I am unable to heat both ways from the middle. My idea is that I have reached nearly the maximum to get the proper benefit out of my radiation. One man tells me to use two 5-inch flows out through the middle of the 400-foot house and return with sixteen 2-inch pipes as radiation, and I think he is pretty nearly right. Now, I should like to have your advice in the matter, giving the proper economical length of houses on both plans of heating. We use the open system, but have our expansion tank up thirty feet from the boiler. E. W. K.

Even with your high expansion tank, I do not think it wise to double the length of your present heating system. The use of the mains suggested would undoubtedly come as near solving the problem as it is possible to solve it without the use of a circulating pump. We do not advocate hot water runs of more than 100 feet under ordinary conditions, and I doubt if you would have the success you enjoy in your 200-foot houses if you did not have the expansion tank thirty feet in the air. L. C. C.

PIPING IN OHIO.



I have a house 29x44x10, and five feet to the plate, with no glass in the sides, but with the south end half glass. The house runs north and south. I have the furnace in a shed at the north end, built in the ground, and a 10-inch smoke flue running through the center to the south end and out. Now, in the furnace I have 100 feet of 1-inch pipe, which connects to a 2-inch flow, which runs to the south end and there divides to feed five 1-inch pipes on each side. The flue and pipes give me all the heat I need, but I wish to take out the flue and put in a boiler. How many 1½-inch pipes will be needed to take the place of the flue? I do not wish to take out the 1-inch pipe.

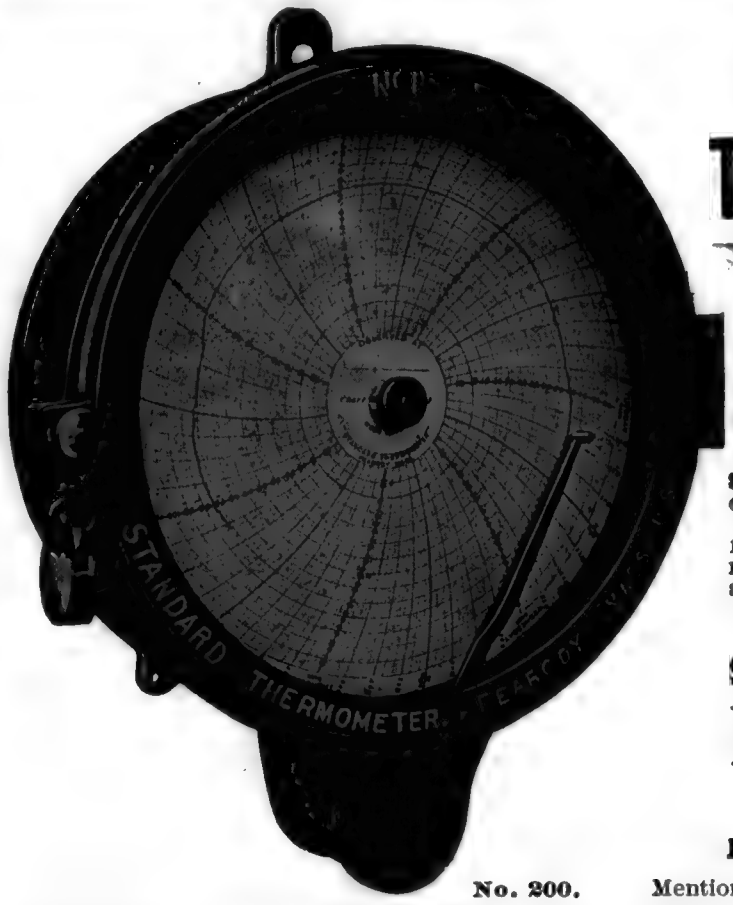
I want to build a lean-to at the west side of the present house. It will be 18x25, with thirty inches of glass in the south side. How many 1½-inch pipes will be required for the lean-to, for lettuce, and how shall I arrange to pipe all from the same boiler? My boiler is a horizontal, with twenty-two 2-inch flues, and the firebox is 22x30. Will the boiler be big enough? P. G.

The additional radiation necessary for the house 29x44 can be supplied by installing twelve 1½-inch pipes, in addition to the ten 1-inch pipes already in place. A flow pipe at least two and one-half inches in diameter should be installed to supply the combined radiation of the ten 1-inch and the twelve 1½-inch pipes. The little house, 18x25, can be heated by the use of a 2-inch main flow and sixteen 1½-inch returns. As you do not state the type, the length of the flues or the diameter of the shell, I cannot tell the capacity of the boiler. L. C. C.

HOT WATER FOR TWO HOUSES.

I should like to get instructions for piping two houses for hot water. House No. 1 is 21x50 feet. The eaves are seven feet high, the walls containing three feet of concrete and four feet of glass. The north side will be protected by another house. There is no end exposure. I want a temperature of 60 degrees. This house has three benches.

House No. 2 is 32x90. The eaves are five feet six inches high. The walls have three feet of concrete and two feet six inches of glass. The east gable end is exposed. This house has five benches, and is to have a temperature of 55 degrees, with the outside temperature 10 degrees below zero. I want to use 2-inch pipe where possible, as I have that on hand.



These houses run east and west, in the opposite direction from the boiler, and are the trussed roof construction, with no purlin posts for supporting the pipe. How many 2-inch pipes will they take and how should they be arranged? I am located in New York state. E. S.

If you use a 2½-inch main flow pipe under the ridge in the 50-foot house and fifteen 2-inch returns under the benches, you should have sufficient radiation for a temperature of 60 degrees. The 90-foot house will require a 3-inch riser or main flow pipe and eighteen 2-inch returns, in order to maintain a temperature of 55 degrees. L. C. C.

HEAT FOR KANSAS RANGE.

Will you kindly tell me what size of boiler, rated in horse-power, for low pressure steam, two to five pounds, will be required to heat the following plant? Also how many feet of 1-inch pipe for radiation, in addition to 2-inch overhead flows, will be needed for each of the following houses, with a temperature of 10 degrees below zero outside, and stiff winds?

Greenhouse No. 1, 13x25 feet; 7-foot walls, with three feet of glass in each, concrete below; ten feet six inches to the ridge; half of south gable glass; north gable joins dwelling; temperature, 70 degrees. House No. 2, 14x84 feet; 5-foot board wall on north, nine feet to ridge; west gable glass; temperature, 54 degrees. House No. 3, connects No. 2 on south; same size, with partition between; west gable glass; temperature, 58 degrees. House No. 4, 24x84 feet; 5-foot walls; twelve feet to ridge; west gable glass; connects No. 3 on south; temperature, 45 degrees. House No. 5, connects on south of No. 4; is same size; both gables and three feet in south wall are glass; temperature, 45 degrees. Also potting shed, 12x54 feet, running along east ends of houses Nos. 2, 3 and 4; temperature, 70 degrees. The boiler will be in the north end of this shed. L. C. B.

The house 13x25 should have a 1½-inch or 2-inch flow and fifteen 1-inch returns; the houses 14x84 should each be piped with a 2-inch main flow pipe and fourteen 1-inch returns, while the houses 24x84 should each be supplied with a 2½-inch main flow pipe and seventeen 1-inch returns. The shed can be heated by carrying a main supply from the boiler, beginning with 4-inch and reducing to 2½-inch between the last two houses, and in addition eight or nine 1-inch radiating pipes. To carry this amount of radiation, you should have a boiler with at least 400 square feet of heating surface, which would be approximately equal to a horizontal tubular boiler rated at thirty horse-power.

L. C. C.

AN ADDITION FOR CARNATIONS.

We intend to build a new greenhouse alongside the old ones. The new ones are twenty feet wide, running east and west. The side walls are five feet high and the ridge is ten feet high. I should like to take the south wall out and connect them, and make the new one twenty-four feet wide. Now, I should like to know whether the house would not be too flat if we make it only ten feet high, or whether it would shade the other houses if we make it higher.

What would be the best way to arrange the benches? Would it be enough to support each side of the roof with one row of ¾-inch pipes, having the standing pipes ten feet apart? How many 2½-inch return pipes would we need to heat the house with a hot water system, having a 5-inch main pipe above the benches? The house is for carnations. The temperature in this part of Wisconsin goes down sometimes to 20 or 30 degrees below zero. M. G.

The flat roof you propose will not be so satisfactory as one considerably steeper, as it will reflect more light than one that receives the sun's rays more nearly at right angles when low in the south during winter. The situation is, however, a serious one, as it is not desirable to build the house high enough to shade the present structure. The flat roof will be the lesser of the two evils, I judge, but it will be necessary for you to use pipe not smaller than 1¼-inch for purlins, and to use supports every eight feet. I cannot answer the heating question, because the length of the house is not stated.

L. C. C.

CEMENT FOR FOUNDATION.

How should I mix the substance for a concrete foundation about 14x22, eighteen inches wide and twelve inches high? How much cement would I need for the above-mentioned foundation and when is the best time to build? A. C. L.

The proportion of cement should be one to seven of gravel or cinders. The amount of cement required will be in the vicinity of seventy bags, to complete the foundation. Ribes.

The Market.

Business for the last three weeks has been all that could be expected, and a little more, for Lent. Violets are selling well and are of good quality. Valley is about equal to the demand. Good roses are scarce and are bringing fine prices. Carnations are also a little short; whites were as good as cash for St. Patrick's day.

Potted plants are selling well and are excellent. Lilies, spiræas, rhododendrons and hydrangeas will be in fine shape. Bulbous stock will be rather scarce; owing to the mild weather, it is advanced too far to hold for Easter. K. R.

HAMMOND'S GRAPE DUST

MILDEW ON ROSES, CARNATIONS, ETC. IT IS SIMPLE AND EASILY APPLIED.

Staatsburg, N. Y., May 25th, 1908.

MR. HAMMOND. Dear Sir:
Replying to your inquiries regarding Grape Dust, would say that we use it solely on Roses, Carnations and Chrysanthemums. As a fungicide we have not found anything to equal it; it is simple and easily applied. We close down the ventilators and fill the house with dust blown through the bellows; when the dust has settled down we ventilate again, putting on a little air as required. We have been using your Grape Dust with good results for the last 14 years. Yours truly,
JAMES BLAIR.

MR. HAMMOND. Dear Sir:
Your letter asking our opinion of the qualities of Grape Dust received.
We have used Grape Dust on Carnations, Chrysanthemums and Asters, and we find it an excellent thing for keeping the plants in a healthful condition. No greenhouse establishment should be without Grape Dust. We find it O. K. Yours truly.

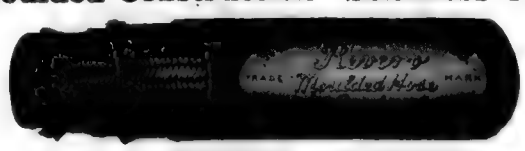
ENGLISH IVY FOR GRAVES.

I want to plant several graves this spring with hardy English ivy. How close should they be planted and how taken care of to make a first-class job? The plants I have are small. I shall plant out of 3-inch pots. F. M.

Spade over the ground well where the ivy is to be planted, adding some well decomposed manure to it. The ivy can go out any time after the middle of April. As your plants are quite small and you will be anxious to have them make a good showing as soon as possible, we would advise rather close planting, say nine inches apart each way. As they grow they will require some pegging down in order to cover the earth. A good soaking of water during dry weather will make the plants grow much faster. They will need no special care in summer, outside of a little pegging down. About December 1, cover the plants with dry leaves and make a low box covering of matched boards. This should remain on until about April 1. The leaves in themselves will keep the foliage fresh if covered with evergreen boughs, but the board covering is neater, if painted dark green. In early spring some of the foliage will take on a brown hue after being exposed a few days. This can be removed. If a little well broken up, rotted manure is scattered among the plants, they will soon hide any early imperfections. Ivy grows rapidly if planted in good soil. W. N. C.

THE LEAF MINER.



What is the trouble with the marguerites, leaves of which are sent under separate cover, and what shall I do to get rid of the trouble? E. O. P.

The leaves received were badly disfigured by the leaf miner, which often attacks marguerites under glass. As the worms are between the tissues of the leaves, it is difficult to fight them. The best remedy is to syringe with some nicotine solution. This has been found helpful by some growers. If you have only a few plants, mix up a tub of the solution and dip the plants in it. We would advise cutting back a few plants rather hard. Spray them with a poisonous substance, such as Paris green or arsenate of lead, and isolate them. The eggs from which the worms hatch are laid outside the leaves, and if you have poison waiting for them when hatched you can destroy them.

Another season keep a sharp watch for the first appearance of the pest and spray with a poisonous substance on the first signs of it. You can do but little this season, we are afraid, to mitigate the damage beyond the dipping in a nicotine solution. C. W.

—a McCray built-to-order refrigerator—Quartered Oak with beveled mirror over display doors.

Best Results With Less Ice

The condition of your stock does not depend upon the amount of ice you use. It depends upon the cooling you get from the ice you use, and this depends upon the patented system of refrigeration which you find in the McCray Refrigerator. The proper circulation of pure, fresh air keeps perishable stock fragrant, and in perfect, strong condition. At the same time it uses very little ice.

McCray Refrigerators

will give an air of elegance to your store. It will save ice for you daily. It will keep your stock right. It will help sell your stock because it will be kept in such perfect condition. Your refrigeration troubles will be over when you buy a McCray.

McCray Refrigerators are lined with white enamel, tile, opal glass, or with marble or mirrors as you prefer, and are made in a wide range of regular sizes for immediate shipment, or can be built to order for any requirement.

Don't neglect to write at once for our beautiful Catalog No. 71, giving the detail of the full line of McCray Refrigerators for Florists.

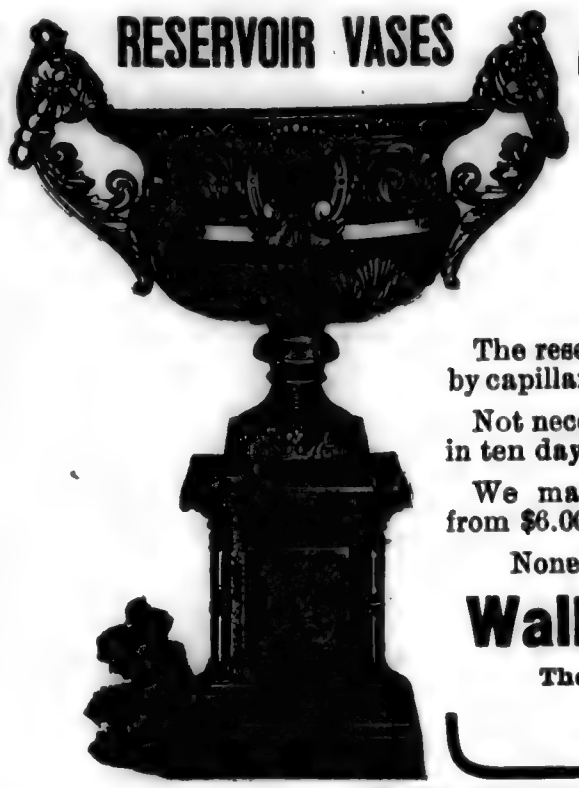
PLANTS FOR SHADY LOCATION.

I have a narrow bed, about sixteen inches wide, along the side of a porch, in which I experience difficulty in finding any stock that will do well. On account of the slight overhang of the porch roof, this bed receives little rain, and it is therefore quite dry; and at the same time it is quite shady. I have made repeated efforts to grow ferns in this location, but without good results. I will thank you to suggest any flowers or low growing shrubs which would likely do well in this dry and shady location. I prefer something hardy, and, if possible, a plant that will not require watering.

J. B. R.



Ferns would not succeed in such a dry spot, unless you keep them mulched with partially decayed leaves and give an occasional soaking of water. Of course, there are no flowers or shrubs which will grow as well in a dry spot as where they can get the rainfall. Try a few plants of Berberis Thunbergii, Japanese barberry, setting the roots as near the outer edge of the little border as possible. Water, if necessary, the first season until they become established; after that they will care for themselves. C. W.

ORIENTAL POPPIES.

What varieties of oriental poppies would bloom outside in southeastern Iowa by Decoration day? Can they be purchased in blooming size, or will they transplant satisfactorily? S. K.

Any of the oriental poppies should bloom in an ordinary season about Memorial day in your state. September is the best time to transplant these poppies. If planted in spring, you will not get any flowers to amount to anything the same season. If you want to get a good batch of plants, purchase seed now. Sow it in flats in a cool house or frame. Plant out in the open ground the first week in May in rows two feet apart, allowing a foot between the plants. Keep the ground well stirred all summer, and by fall you will have good clumps which will flower nicely the following year. C. W.

Fort Morgan, Colo.—L. J. Reid has nearly completed his greenhouse here, and will be ready to open for business a few days before Easter.

An Indestructible Bench

IT is cast iron—sides, ends, bottoms and fittings. The legs are pipe. The sides are cast in lengths of 4 ft. 2 in. The bottom pieces come in different lengths, according to width of bench wanted; the perforations make drainage perfect. It is a bench that can be rapidly put up and easily taken down. Being cast iron, it will last a lifetime without repairs. It has none of the uncertainties of concrete. It is an entirely indestructible bench. Send for our circular, which fully illustrates and describes it.

By the way, did you send for that very special offer in sash, both ventilating and cold frame? Then do it.

Good only for month of March.

Kroeschell Boilers

Made Especially for Greenhouses

Not Cast Iron

No. 1 for Small Houses

No. 15 for 50,000 sq. ft. of glass
Heats to 60° at 15° below zero

We pay no agency commissions—the user gets the benefit. Read the following, and write us for information on our

Latest Improved Piping System

The hot water piping and boiler were installed strictly according to your plans furnished. The heating system works to perfection. Have had no trouble whatever since we started two years ago. We had experience with a poor boiler and misplaced heating pipes. Since we put in the Kroeschell piping and boiler, we have no trouble to keep temperatures up and do not waste our time and money on repairs; we feel that nothing too good can be said about the Kroeschell boiler and piping. Yours truly,

MARSHALL FLORAL CO., Marshall, Mo.

We had the thermometer 18° below and we've just gone through a blizzard bad enough for most any season, and am very pleased to inform you that our heating system was equal to the occasion. So far as we have gone, am certainly well satisfied with the Kroeschell Boiler, Generator and Heating System.

Yours respectfully,
J. E. MATTHEWSON, Sheboygan, Wis.

THE BOILER AND PIPING SYSTEM, I CAN SAY, IS PERFECT IN EVERY WAY. With the Generator I can keep low temperatures, or can get the pipes so hot that we can not touch them. In less than twenty minutes all houses are thoroughly and equally heated, no matter how many coils are turned on, and all this is due to the Generator, which costs only $35.00.

I feel that no hot water system should be without a Kroeschell Generator. Yours truly,

RUDOLPH NAGEL, Lancaster, Pa.

The new house I have just completed, 43 ft. wide by 265 ft. long, and piped according to your instructions, is not varying more than two degrees all over the house at any time, and I consider that remarkable for so large a house.

The Generator purchased from you some time since is giving excellent satisfaction. It not only adds to the capacity of the boiler on account of the increased velocity of the hot water circulation, and consequently less piping is required, but it also seems to maintain a steadier and more even temperature all over the houses where it is in use. Another advantage is that where roses are grown, sulphur applied to the pipes for checking mildew is much more effective.

Yours truly,
STEPHEN MORTENSEN, Southampton, Pa.

We had no trouble whatever in keeping the required temperature during the recent cold spell with thermometer at 12 degrees below zero.

We are glad of the opportunity to recommend your Generator, Boiler and piping plans to our fellow florists, knowing that when placed as directed they will give perfect satisfaction. We did our own piping, and none of us had ever had any experience in that line before. Hoping this will be of some benefit to you, and thanking you for past kindnesses, we remain,

Very truly yours,
NORTH FLORAL COMPANY, Fort Dodge, Ia.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

STORE DISPLAYS FOR EASTER.

The Superabundance of Material.

The amount and variety of plants and cut stock to be had about Easter time sometimes puzzle one when he attempts to display them to advantage and still keep within the bounds of good taste.

After trying various ways of arranging a large quantity of extra plants for a holiday, the most practical and simple method yet found has been to clear out all cases and movable furniture and fill up the space with groups of plants, each kind by itself, as nearly as possible. Low tables or benches are the best for plants. Here they are off the floor, but still low enough so that the purchasers can look down upon them. Extra fine specimens should be mounted on individual stands, apart from the rest.

After space has been allotted to each kind of plants, separate the colors. Plants are thus more easily located by the busy salesmen, and more satisfactorily compared by the customer. Baskets and other special arrangements should be either classed by themselves in a particular place or displayed individually, as is done with specimen plants.

Conflicting Colors.

It is not always an easy matter to arrange plants of the same kind, but of many different colors, for all the reds can by no means be used close together, any more properly than can the reds and purples, reds and yellows, or different orders of clashy pinks.

Take, for instance, cinerarias. In any ordinary sized collection there will be found every shade of red, purple and blue, and intermediate shades and tints that no master of color could define or classify. To reduce this puzzling mass of colors to some semblance of order and harmony, first set out the darkest purple in the center of the space. Next select the purple which comes the nearest to the center purple, but begins to run into the crimson or red. Then, on the same side, place those which have a little more red and less of the purple, then the pure reds, next the rose-colored ones, which, after a while, grade out to light pink, and at the extreme end the white with the touches of pink or red on the edge.

Now, returning to the purple center of the group, select the purples which run into the blue, the darkest first, then the purer blues, next the light, until at the opposite end you find the white tipped with blue, and perhaps the pot of gold either at this end or the opposite end of the rainbow.

Changes in Window Displays.

What has been said with regard to the groups of plants can be said with regard to window displays. It is impossible to exhibit creditably at once in a window anything like a goodly per cent of the numerous kinds of flowers or plants offered for Easter trade. The best solution of the problem is to make frequent changes of window display, and make them striking in coloring and grouping. On account of similarity of inflorescence, get together your lilacs and spiræas, and if you wish to emphasize the violet color, introduce some cut violets or cinerarias, which will add to the charm of the decoration by harmony of color and contrast in growing habits, as the ferns adorn the shady nooks beneath the giant oaks.

Tilt pink blooming plants in basket covers among some fern baskets, over a group of double and single white narcissi or marguerites. That will make another day's window. If you have some especially fine Enchantress or other light pink carnations, set in a huge vase or basket in the center of a field of potted pansies.

An Easter Lily Window.

Another day have an Easter lily window, with two or three harmonious colors of tulip pots. Set in two high, slender stands at opposite ends of the windows. On each stand place a tall vase of cut lilies or a fine specimen of the potted lily. About the base of each stand place a group of vases or potted plants, keeping the idea of a column of lilies in mind. Fill in the rest of the window floor space with the pots of tulips in red, or yellow, or pink, remembering that in the latter phrase are "ors" and not "ands."

The problem of the calla is difficult for those who do not admire the queenly flower. Sometimes you may be inclined to think that the fine, feathery flowers and foliage are needed with the heavy flowers and foliage of the calla, but on second thought, why not select cyperus and other water foliage and large fern leaves?

A Calla Window.

A deep tank in which can be placed a number of slender vases, each holding a calla and leaf, is the best plan for the calla window. With these have a liberal sprinkling of daffodils and other long-stemmed varieties of narcissi or snapdragons. Make it all wild and close looking. Sometime when they pile up on you, you may be able to popularize the calla by some skillful arrangement.

A most interesting and helpful display group for the store or window decoration is a collection of narcissi of all possible kinds. Put in small vases with one or two flowers, set close together like a field or bed of the growing plants.

With azaleas, Easter lilies or candidums, add some sprays of one kind of fruit blossoms and a few good specimens of Pteris tremula or Boston ferns. If a window floor is covered, make at least one break in the uniformity by setting up one or two plants on a stump or a pedestal, with the introduction of the above additions. Gertrude Blair.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE RUSH.

Being Ready Half the Battle.

No time should now be lost in completing preparations for the Easter business.

There are two lines of preparation which are equally essential. In the first place, it is, of course, necessary to have something to sell. Easter is the great floral holiday of the year, the day upon which the well stocked flower store does more business than on any other day in the whole year. Once upon a time a certain gentleman asked a wise man for the recipe for making a rabbit stew. The answer was, "First catch your rabbit," and the same applies to the Easter trade. First of all, you must have something to sell. If you haven't got it in your own greenhouses, no time must be lost in ordering of others. And order plenty. With the assurance of a large supply of good stock at reasonable prices, you will have the confidence to go ahead with the selling end and push the week's business to a satisfactory and profitable conclusion. Don't fail to provide variety in your stock. Not everyone wants lilies at Easter. While the lily is the flower of the day, more will be interested in a pan of tulips or in some other smaller arrangement.

Then, too, cut flowers are as essential as a well selected stock of plants in bloom. Whatever may be said, the average person would rather have cut flowers than plants, and this is especially true of those who buy flowers only on rare occasions. Cut flowers at Easter are more plentiful and more reasonable in price than at Christmas, and with good weather the quality also is fully as satisfactory, so that all that needs be done to do a large and profitable business in cut stock is to provide the flowers, and let the people know you have them. Advertise in your local paper and make a good window display.

Handling the Rush.

Having arranged for stock, it is time to turn attention to the facilities for display, for taking orders, for filling orders and for delivery. Where a big increase in business is expected, all these things require careful attention and systematizing.

An attractive store is of great assistance in attracting custom. Fortunate, indeed, is the florist who has a greenhouse in connection with his retail store. The average store does not afford the space or the light for best display of Easter plant arrangements. If you have no conservatory, you must make the best use possible of the space in your store, but if a conservatory is available, by all means clear it of the ordinary stock and use it for the display of Easter plant arrangements. Arrange the store to look its prettiest and draw the customers in, but once having them inside, take them into the conservatory and carry there most of the stock prepared for their inspection. Remember that a crowded store loses trade—people won't come in if there is a crush, or if in, will not buy so freely.

The Little Things.

Have you all the thousand and one articles you need for the Easter work? How are the cut flower boxes? Have you enough of each size to carry you through the rush? Make up a stock, so that when it comes to putting up orders in the sleepless night of April 10, valuable time need not be consumed in this work, which can be done in idle moments now. The twine and wrapping paper both should be in ample supply. It more than once has occurred that these simple items have been found running short because of lack of forethought to purchase in advance.

How about pot covers? In many of the smaller cities little yet is done in the way of plant embellishment, but if no florist in your town makes it a practice to send out his holiday plants with pot covers, set the fashion this Easter and watch your business grow. A pot cover is but the matter of a few pennies and you need add nothing to the selling price of even the smallest plant because of a crepe paper embellishment. For better plants you can use better covers and it won't be long before you find the trade will pay enough more for a plant with a pot cover to afford the florist a good profit on the cost of the embellishment.

Adding Variety to the Stock.

In stores of better class the plants nowadays are transferred from the common flower pot to something better in the way of unique and tasteful pottery or hampers, baskets and all sorts of odd but suitable receptacles. There is such a great variety in this class of supplies that any store can find something which corresponds to the class of trade handled.

The use of these requisites serves two purposes. If in the beginning they must be sold at cost, their use is profitable in that they add much to the variety of the stock, and it is in variety that the average flower store is most lacking. Year after year the same things are offered and, naturally, the customers feel the lack of novelty. Show something new and different if you want to make sales. If you haven't a thing in your stock but tulips in bloom, you can arrange an endless variety by planting them in different kinds of pans, baskets and boxes. You can make up a big stock with no two alike. But to do this you must make preparations in advance. You must get off an order to your supply house without delay. Any of them will send an assortment, one or more pieces of each kind, and you are taking no chances if you simply put a limit on the size or price you are to pay.

Making up the Plants.

One of the advantages of plant arrangements is that stock can be made up in advance; you do not have to put off planting up your baskets and boxes until the last moment, as in the case of cut flowers. You can make up a lot of these arrangements and make sales from this stock, putting away each customer's selection, tagged for delivery, or if space is lacking in the store and more room is available in the work-rooms or under glass, you can use the samples merely for taking orders and can make up the stock specially as the orders are taken. Probably the better way is to set aside each customer's actual purchase and replace it with another article for sale.

Delivery is Important.

After you have made all arrangements for stock, for supplies and for the taking and filling of orders, there yet remains the essential matter of delivery. Where a week's business is to be delivered in one morning, it does not pay to leave anything to chance. Better plan the delivery just a little more carefully than you plan anything else.

There is no time where room is so valuable as at a holiday season, and there is no time during a holiday rush when room is so useful as when the hour for delivery is approaching. Set aside a space for the orders which can be delivered Saturday afternoon, and another for those which must be delivered Easter morning. Then subdivide these spaces into routes.

Did you ever go into the shipping department of a big express office? If you have, you may have noted that partitions have been built, like stalls, or the floor has been marked off in squares, or some other arrangement has been made for a special place to put the packages to go on each train. When train-time comes everybody about the place knows just what there is to go on it. If you adopt some similar scheme, each wagon will have everything that it should take, and nothing that some other wagon should have.

If you have an empty greenhouse, you can divide up the bench space for this purpose. Put a sign on one bench "South," and on another, "North." Make as many such divisions of your territory as is necessary to handle your business. Then, as each order is put up, it is placed at once in the space set apart for that route, and when all the you, you may be able to popularize the calla by some skillful arrangement.

A most interesting and helpful display group for the store or window decoration is a collection of narcissi of all possible kinds. Put in small vases with one or two flowers, set close together like a field or bed of the growing plants.

With azaleas, Easter lilies or candidums, add some sprays of one kind of fruit blossoms and a few good specimens of Pteris tremula or Boston ferns. If a window floor is covered, make at least one break in the uniformity by setting up one or two plants on a stump or a pedestal, with the introduction of the above additions. Gertrude Blair.

orders are up there is no danger of any wagon starting out and leaving something behind that will then have to be sent by expensive special delivery.

Incidentally, see to it now that you have enough tags and also envelopes for customers' cards. Your order sheet ought to show who takes the order, who puts it up, whose card is to be attached, and who delivers, and there ought to be enough spirit in your employees so that each one will see that his own part is done correctly. All the time and effort spent in preparing to do business is wasted unless the orders are carefully filled and promptly delivered.

Plant orders are bulky and you will doubtless need extra delivery facilities. Arrange for them now. Get enough wagons so that you can get everything delivered by Sunday noon.

There is more individuality in the flower business than in a department store, but the florist will do a whole lot toward avoiding the annoyances if he will adopt the department stores' system for conducting the filling and delivery of orders.

DWARF AZALEAS.

The dwarf azaleas shown in the illustration on page 21 were sold last Easter at $3.50 each, complete, including the receptacle. This was in a high class store in a big city, where delivery added considerably to the cost of the stock, so that in smaller places a good profit might he had at even a lower price. The one at the left is the red azalea, Hexe, or Firefly, as it is known in the east. The receptacle was an unglazed green bowl, which went some little way in making the arrangement attractive.

The one at the right is Azalea Charles Enke, pink, and the receptacle was pure white. It was lined with moss before the plant was put in and it is worth while noting that in each case moss obscured the top of the soil, and "dirt," as most customers call it, never adds anything to the appearance of any plant arrangement. Moss is cheap; use it.

THE RAMBLER ROSES.

The rambler roses, which have become so popular for Easter sales, are something of a tax upon the skill of the florist. Not only do they require careful growing, but they are of such shape that it is not the easiest of things to rig them out in what the leading retailers now consider the embellishments necessary for satisfactory sales. In the illustration on page 29 two Easter roses are shown. The one at the left is Lady Gay, light pink, and all that was required in this case was to slip the pot into the receptacle as shown, spreading a little moss over the soil. The receptacle was copper, with brass hoops, but copper rivets. It was inexpensive and the plant as shown sold for $5. It looked well worth the money.

The plant at the right is Hiawatha, with single red flowers lighter at the center. This has become one of the most popular of rambler roses. The receptacle is the Pompeian tone ware, now known and appreciated all over the country. This plant brought $8 in a good store last Easter.

THE GENISTA.

The genista illustrated on page 23 was as handsome a specimen as was shown last year in one of the country's leading retail stores. The picture cannot show the color, but the combination of yellow flowers and green foliage with the Italian terra cotta pot was especially pleasing. The receptacle was happily chosen; the plant looked worth a lot more money than it would have appeared worth if it had been put in any sort of bright colored dish or basket. It was a small matter to cover the soil in the pot with green moss, but it added much to the appearance of the arrangement.

TWO GOOD SELLERS.

Pussy willow baskets always are good sellers at Easter. They may be had in a variety of shapes and sizes, zinc-lined, for filling with plants. Nothing goes better with the pussy willows than do Dutch hyacinths. Those shown in the illustration on page 33 were blue and the arrangement was a good seller in a high class store last Easter at $3.75. There was as good a margin of profit provided for on the cost of the basket as on the stock used in filling it.

In the same picture another of the brisk sellers is shown—the terra cotta box of primulas. These receptacles come in all sizes. You can tell your customers they are Italian ware, and, indeed, they are Italian in style if not in actual manufacture. The first were imported, but these come from Cincinnati. Practically all the supply houses handle them and you can get those that hold only one good primula, or some that are large enough to occupy an entire window. Articles of this character often make sales for the florist, because the customer thinks, "Well, when the flowers are gone, I've got a pretty dish." What we want, no doubt, is to sell the primulas, but we have no objection to being favorably remembered by the customer who tells her friend that the receptacle in which Willie now keeps his marbles came from Jones, the florist.

GRASSY TWIG HAMPERS.

Something of a novelty last Easter, one of the good sellers this year, will be the grassy twig hamper shown in the illustration on page 25. These may be had of any of the supply dealers and come in a great variety of sizes and shapes. The one illustrated contained twenty-five Rose Luisente tulips. Not many will have use for a larger size, but there are hundreds of stores which will sell large numbers of the smaller boxes, containing say from six to fifteen tulips. And you don't have to plant tulips in them. They go equally well with primulas or any other stock which can be made up in small baskets.

The boxes are of wood, covered with a peculiar heavy brown straw, which is bound in place with lichen-covered twigs. You can order an assortment of the supply houses, getting them square, round, oblong, oval or diamond-shaped, and different sizes in each shape. They will sell steadily during the bulb season.

HAMPERS OF PLANTS.

Not every flower store has sale for the elaborate plant arrangements shown in the leading stores in the big cities. Indeed, in the average small town it would be useless to expect to sell any considerable number of these, but it always pays to have one or two merely to show your customers that you are up-to-date and equal to any demands. Some large baskets and hampers are a good advertisement, even if not sold. In the window put as big and fine a basket or hamper as you know how to arrange, and around it group a few of the kind you expect to sell. Did you ever stop to think why it is the dry goods store puts such fine dresses in the window? You know how many people buy such things.

A Conservatory Like This Is an Inestimable Boon to Any Florist at Easter.

Rose Luisente Tulips in a Grassy Twig Hamper.

They are exhibited simply to show the ladies how up-to-date the store is, and how capable of meeting any demand. They attract attention and inspire confidence. The florist should apply the same principle to his display. Show the people something good and they will come in to buy the articles more within the means of the average person.

The hamper of plants shown in the illustration on page 27 was decorated with hand-painted flowers on the cover. Its color was silver, and it was zinc lined to retain the moisture. The plants used in this arrangement were Azalea Mme. Joseph Vervæne and Dr. Charles Enke. A Soupert rose was placed in one end, with primulas. This particular piece bore a price mark of $11 and if not sold it would easily be worth its cost to any florist for window display.

THE BABY RAMBLERS.

There are few better Easter plants than the Baby Rambler rose, especially for those stores where moderate price is an essential for a large trade. Make them up in receptacles as shown in the illustration on page 22 and they will sell at Easter like the proverbial hot cakes. The one at the right in the picture is a hanging basket and can be sold complete for $1 and make the usual margin for the florist. On the left is a square receptacle of pure white English china, and it brought the selling price up to $2. In the center is a much larger fern dish of copper, which, well filled as shown, was priced at $3.

All the supply houses carry a great variety of such small receptacles and any florist can make these up so that his stock will contain great variety. Priced at from $1 to $3, any store that has a good trade can sell these almost by the hundreds.

THE BASKET OF BRUNNERS.

One reason why plant arrangements have grown in popularity the last few years is that they have been shown at Easter time in such attractive form, while cut flowers have not had similar display. The only use the average retailer makes of his cut stock is to show it in pots in the ice box. If he would show it on his counters as he would recommend it to be used by the customer, more sales might be made.

Last Easter the E. Wienhoeber Co., Chicago, had a nice little supply of Brunner roses. The illustration on page 31 shows how they were used. The flowers were not all put away in the ice box, but several such arrangements as that illustrated were shown about the store. This is a handled basket of the so-called Italian art ware, really terra cotta and inexpensive. The handle carries a large rosette of heavy ribbon of a color just to match the color of the roses. This arrangement on the Wienhoeber counter sold for $8. Smaller ones were shown down to $4, and they sold splendidly.

Of course, one difficulty comes in delivering. Flowers and receptacle have to go in separate packages. Where the store is located in a residence district and deliveries are close by, such purchases give better satisfaction if someone who knows how to arrange flowers makes the delivery and fixes up the arrangement on the customer's table.

There is no reason why short to medium Beauties could not be similarly used.

REGULATING THE RETAILERS.

In several eastern cities the retail florists are fighting the blue laws. They don't want to have to shut up shop when a bell rings Sunday morning. But in England florists, as well as all other merchants, are required to observe strict regulations, not only in the hours they may be open, but in the ages and hours of employees. They may not ask a woman to do some of the things which can be required of a man, and neither men nor women are permitted to work more than a certain number of consecutive

There is no reason why short to medium Beauties could not be similarly used.

REGULATING THE RETAILERS.

In several eastern cities the retail florists are fighting the blue laws. They don't want to have to shut up shop when a bell rings Sunday morning. But in England florists, as well as all other merchants, are required to observe strict regulations, not only in the hours they may be open, but in the ages and hours of employees. They may not ask a woman to do some of the things which can be required of a man, and neither men nor women are permitted to work more than a certain number of consecutive hours. Everybody has to watch the clock or pay a fine.

A movement is now on foot in Greater Berlin to require the closing of the florists' shops on Sundays and festivals, as they call the holidays in Germany, but the movement is meeting with much opposition on the part of the proprietors. At a recent meeting of florists almost 700 persons assembled in Berlin for a demonstration against the proposal. The idea is by law to require the gradual reduction of the hours on which the flower stores may be open and eventually to close them altogether on Sundays and holidays, as is done in Great Britain.

The finest stores in any city have little, if anything, to lose through early or complete closing, but it is on Sundays and holidays that the small stores do a large part of their business, and this they fear to lose, so it is from this class of merchants the opposition to early closing comes.

THE ROCK OF AGES.

The rock of ages illustrated in this issue was made by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. Mr. Fox heartily disapproves of this style of design, believing that it is apt to be stiff and conventional. His treatment in this instance, however, is decidedly unconventional, relieving the design as far as possible from the harsh lines. The cross, of course, must be made on straight lines. To relieve this severity a garland of roses is thrown over it, but the chief feature of the arrangement is the planting of graceful small kentias and small Boston ferns in the base; these, when interspersed with lilies and roses, give a wonderfully natural appearance to the whole arrangement, relieving it from the artificial appearance so apt to prevail. Phil.

Rock of Ages.

THAT WORTHLESS CHECK.

The Commonest of Swindles.

If a total stranger, man or woman, came into your place of business, purchased some flowers which were either to be delivered or taken along and, instead of paying for them, would say, "My name is John Brown (or Mrs. Brown); I will be in tomorrow or Monday and please will you let me have $6 or $8 until then?" would the stranger get the flowers or the money? "Hardly," you say. Why, then, do so many florists become such good customers of the dealer in spurious checks?

When you accept a check from a stranger, and perhaps give him some cash in change, you are doing just what you said a minute ago you would not do.

The unknown one has not even promised to come in tomorrow and pay you; he has merely handed you a slip of paper with some printing and writing on it, and is, of course, prepared with a plausible excuse for not having the cash with him. Possibly the writing was done in your presence, but this adds nothing to the value of the paper or the check.

It is not the fine printing and fluent handwriting upon a piece of paper of a fine texture that puts the value in the check, if there is any there. Neither is the apparent genuineness of the signature a guaranty that the check is good. Take no stock in a check unless tendered by some responsible person known to you or to some of your employees, or perhaps vouched for by an acquaintance of yours.

Of course we all dislike to turn away a sale, and for that reason are willing to take a chance, especially if we have a lot of short stuff on hand and the party gives us a nice funeral order.

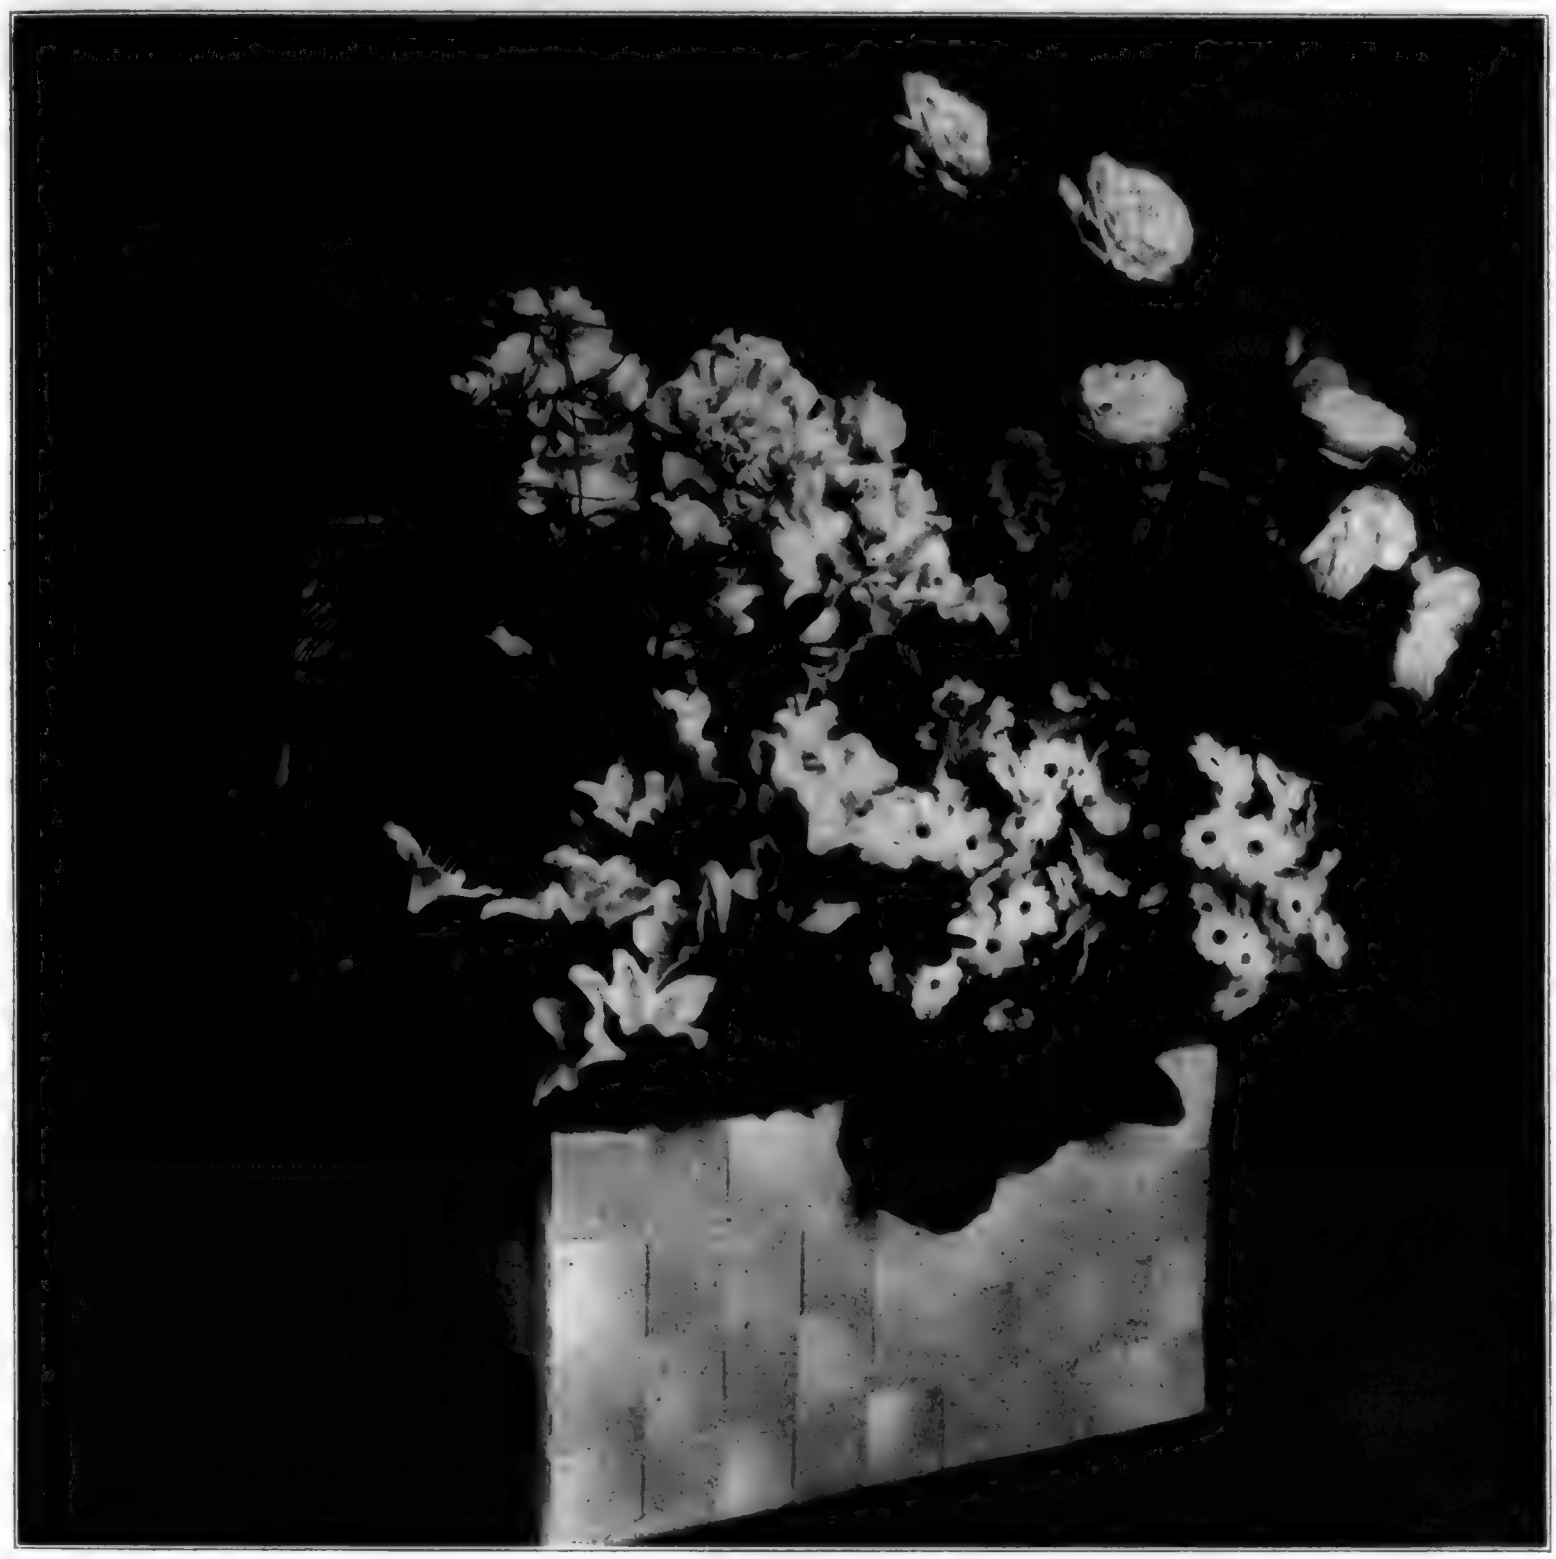
But there is another way to view this. It is seldom that a man of commonsense will ask a firm where he is not known to loan him money, which is about the same as expecting to have a check cashed. If your prospective customer is really sincere he will not take offense at your refusal, but will have all the more respect for you.

Florists Are Favorite Game.

When Mr. Don't U. Trustme arrives in town on the 3:33 flier from the south, which he left unexpectedly because it was getting too warm to be cozy, one of the first tradesmen to be accorded a visit is the florist.

Psychologists have never been able to explain this, but it is a fact. It must be that the gentleman in question has been imbibing freely of the society notes in a Sunday paper and is afraid we florists will become money-bound, or, to make myself understood, he is worrying as to how we will dispose of all our money, for has not every dozen tulips we sell during the week grown into an elaborate table decoration with palms, ferns, etc., thrown in, by the time the news appears in the society columns? But this is getting away from the excuse for this article, and the real reason why so many of these swindlers attempt to work flower stores is that by the aid of the death notice it is easy to make up a story that will defy detection.

A First Experience.



The writer has come in contact with several gentlemen intent upon making a comfortable living without unnecessary physical exertion. In each of these instances a different story was told, always a most plausible one, too.

Several years ago a middle-aged, well-dressed man happened into the store late one afternoon and, with tears balanced upon his lower eyelids, told of having suddenly lost his only near relative, a dear sister. Ordering a wreath and a spray, he came forth with a check for about one-third more than the amount of the order.

So far, so good. This was nothing out of the ordinary and, but for the rule of the house never to accept a stranger's check, he of the sad expression would have departed with about $10 easy money jingling in his pocket. Still, our man insisted upon the pieces being made up, saying that as we would not accept his check we might collect at the house. If he had not forgotten to shed more tears that might have insured his getaway, but the sudden drying of the lachrymal flow aroused suspicion and he was finally asked to tell his story at police headquarters. When last heard from, he was becoming quite graceful with the lock step.

A Second Attempt.

Our last experience was with a dapper young fellow who would have nothing less than several dozen best Beauties, price being no consideration whatever. While he looked as though he had some money, still those people who really have money enough to purchase Beauties are careful, conservative people (that is why they have money), who think it no disgrace to inquire into the price of an article. The clerk who waited upon our friend thought him rather reckless and, when the check for more than the cost of the flowers was offered, held his attention until detectives arrived, and it took but a little questioning to convince them that something was not right. He was later identified by several other local florists as a recent customer of theirs, and one whom they regretted very much having met. Well! The jury found him guilty as charged.

Other Ways of Working It.

It should be the rule in every flower store not to cash checks for any stranger. When the amount of the check is the same as the amount of the purchase, the latter being ordered for later delivery, you run little risk—but don't give change for checks unless you know the customer. It is not enough that you have other orders for the same funeral—recently in a California city a prominent citizen died and it was surprising how many flowers were sent, many from people the family did not know, but whose checks, each calling for a little cash change, subsequently came back to the florists, who lost both money and flowers and whose only profit was experience. In an eastern city a stranger ordered a different kind of flowers, to be sent with his card to the belle of the town—a real live one—no weeps in this at all, nothing but joy—until the checks proved to be just as bad as in the other case. Each one used a little local color, a sort of sugar coating, to make his story easy to swallow, that is all.

Never Return Cash Change.

It is mainly when some cash, even a small sum, is wanted in change, that you must be extremely careful. Men or women who endeavor to earn their living by this means are usually after the cash.

When you entrap one of these fellows, prosecute him, by all means, even though you may not like the idea of having to appear in court. If you fail to prosecute these wrong-doers you are doing not only yourself but the public at large an injustice. HUGO SCHROETER.

CUT OUT THE CIGARS.

One of the daily papers at Omaha is trying to interest the retail florists there in the use of its classified columns as a means of reaching the local buyers. To help the florists the following was published as a display advertisement in another part of the paper:

"Flowers—no they're not expensive. Cut out two or three cigars today and tomorrow put the price of them into flowers, take them home, and you will have made the little girl's mother mighty happy.

It's worth your trouble to look over our want ad page and see what is offered under the heading of 'Florists.'

A few flowers will let them know that you really do think of them. Try it, or do you think the shock will be too great?"

As coming from someone not in the flower business, that's good talk for the florists—wonder what the cigar advertisers think of it?

FLORICULTURE IN ILLINOIS.

State University Gathers Facts.

The authorities of the Agricultural College and Experiment Station at the University of Illinois recently published and are now distributing a pamphlet "devoted to the business of setting forth to farmers and others interested in the development of agriculture in Illinois, and to the members of the Assembly, which must provide the funds, the needs of the Agricultural College and Experiment Station, if they are to meet at all adequately the rapidly increasing demands that are laid upon them for instruction and information."

Referring to the work for floriculture undertaken two years ago at Urbana, the pamphlet says:

Amount Invested.

"According to reliable estimates which have been compiled, we find that more than $20,000,000 are now invested in the floricultural business in Illinois. More than $4,000,000 of this amount is represented by buildings and a considerably larger amount in land. There are 719 commercial florists in our state, receiving from their sales approximately $3,000,000 annually, while they expend for labor $700,000 and $30,000 for fertilizers. In addition to the above, there are over 100 retail florists and commission men dependent upon the growers for the stock which they handle.

"The glass area devoted to floriculture in Illinois is not less than 16,000,000 square feet, which covers 12,500,000 square feet of land. Aside from all this, we find there are in the state more than 2,000 farmers and gardeners using glass for the growing of various plants. Indeed, we find that this industry is not a localized one, for nearly every county has large floricultural interests.

"The glass area devoted to floriculture in Cook county is not less than 7,000,000 square feet, while some of the other counties run as follows: Du Page county, 600,000; Kane county, 200,000; Sangamon county, 200,000; McLean county, 175,000; Will county, 125,000.

"These figures go to show that the floricultural industry is one belonging to the entire state. Indeed, no other state has so general an interest in this thriving and important industry. There is no doubt that Illinois ranks second to none in the value of her floricultural output.

State Work for Florists.

"During the past two years work has been carried on in several lines. Investigations for the repression of thrips injuring roses and carnations under glass were begun at Bloomington in October, 1907, and the amount of injury caused by this insect each week was recorded until June 15, 1908. The total number of carnation buds examined was 68,048. A test of six proprietary compounds containing nicotine was made to determine their efficiency for spraying, fumigating, and for the two combined. On roses, badly infested with thrips, five applications of sprays resulted in ridding eighty per cent of the blooms of these tiny insects. On carnations, there was 57.7 per cent injury on the check section, 13 to 18.5 per cent on the different fumigated sections, and 11 to 13 per cent on the sprayed sections.

"In order to test methods for the control of thrips on cucumbers in greenhouses, experiments were begun at Streator in March, 1908. Hydrocyanic acid gas at a safe strength was of no practical value in killing thrips. It was found that spraying with a very weak solution—one-quarter ounce of a 40 per cent nicotine preparation to one gallon of water—applied early in the day while the thrips were on the upper surface of the leaves, was effective in killing the insects, and if the material was syringed off at once no injury to the leaves resulted.

"Analyses are also being made to determine the nicotine content of various commercial preparations of tobacco. This was done so as to determine their value as insecticides.

"At the present time, the state greenhouses are devoted to an experiment with carnations testing the value of chemical fertilizers as supplementing stable manures. This experiment comprises thirty combinations of fertilizers and these are repeated with four different varieties of carnations, in order to check results. To finish this work, will require at least three years. The results will be of great value, as the fertilizer question is one of the greatest importance to the commercial grower.

Problems of the Florist.

"Among the many questions confronting the florist of today, the following are of the greatest importance:

"1. Study of fertilizer requirements of plants other than carnations. Although the results of fertilizer experiments with carnations may be of value in the growing of roses, chrysanthemums and other plants, separate experiments should be carried on with each, as the requirements are not the same. The intensive method of farming under glass requires close attention to the kinds and amounts of fertilizer used.

"2. A study of the various insect pests troublesome to greenhouse and garden crops and a determination of the best methods for their extermination, should be made.

"3. The fungi prevalent in floricultural work should be studied and methods for their control should be determined.

"4. A great many of the flowers raised in the state of Illinois are shipped great distances, not only to neighboring states, but to all parts of the country. There is also much shipping done from small towns to larger centers. Studies should be made for increasing the keeping qualities of the flowers, and the problems of packing and shipping should be investigated.

"5. Studies and actual tests should be made in various methods of bench construction. The high price of lumber has led to the use of many other materials for this purpose.

"6. The questions arising from the use of refrigeration plants should be thoroughly investigated. This includes the handling of cut flowers in artificially cooled houses and the cold storage of various forms of plants and bulbs to retard their growth.

"7. There seems to be a great future for the growing of many of the hardy annuals, perennials and bulbs for both cut flowers and decoration of home grounds if this line were properly developed.

"This station could carry on many of these lines of investigation and many others if it had the proper facilities, and so save the people thousands of dollars."

GREENFLY IN ROSE HOUSES.

What do you consider the best and most economical means of exterminating greenfly in greenhouses containing roses planted out for cut flowers. F. H. W.

There are many very effective methods of killing greenfly, and every florist has his own particular fancy. Smoking with tobacco stems, or other fumigants containing tobacco in some form, is the most common practice, and if carefully performed, is one of the surest and safest methods. Some prefer to steam the stems, thus raising a vapor which condenses on the leaves and stems. This is also a sure way to exterminate the pests.

The most effectual method, however, is to release the fumes of cyanide of potassium. This is a rather delicate operation, and dangerous alike to plants and operator if not properly performed. Full instructions as to this method have appeared from time to time in these columns. These should be carefully studied before using this method. Ribes.

MOVING KILLARNEY ROSES.

Would you please let me know whether it is safe to move our Killarney roses from the bench into the solid bed next summer? They were planted last July, and are in a healthy condition. How much drying off do they require before moving? We also have a bench of Richmond. Should they be treated in the same way?

Our Rhea Reid sheds its foliage about every five weeks. Is this a common trouble with it? C. S.

It is perfectly safe to shift Killarney roses from table benches into solid beds. This operation can be performed any time during June and up till September. Before moving them, they ought to get a partial ripening by gradually withholding water for a week or so, always giving plenty of ventilation. After planting, keep the house rather close and moist for a week, until root action commences.

Rhea Reid is no more inclined to shed its foliage when properly treated than Killarney. It requires plenty of ventilation and water. RIBES.

ROSE ANTHRACNOSE.

Under separate cover I am sending you two rose plants. These plants have been grown in a good, light house, have not been overwatered and have had the right ventilation, for there has been no mildew in the house. They were planted June 15 of last year. Kindly advise me what the trouble is. F. W. W.

These rose plants are suffering from the disease known as Anthracnose rosea. It is usually induced by a close, damp atmosphere during the growing season, and is one of the hardest diseases to get rid of. It generally begins to manifest itself during the late fall. The tops of the shoots begin to blacken and die, the disease apparently working down the stem. At the same time young, vigorous canes will start from the bottom, these in turn to be attacked in the same manner.

The only remedy, when this appears, is to throw out the affected plants, give the house a thorough cleaning out of all decaying leaves, etc., and keep on ample ventilation. RIBES.

ROSE PLANTS FOR THE BENCH.

As we intend to erect a greenhouse for roses this summer, we should like to know what is the best time to plant them in the benches, in this Oregon climate. Would the first of September be too late if we could not get them sooner? What would be the best to plant—one or two-year-olds? M. G.

The best time to plant roses is from early in May up till July. Roses planted as late as September are rarely a paying crop.

One-year-old stock — that is, stock raised during the winter—is preferable to stock of any other age. RIBES.

WHITE ANTS IN ROSE SOIL.

Under separate cover, we are sending a sample of soil infested with a small white pest, which neither lime water nor tobacco affects in the least. Our rose and carnation soil has millions of them. No noticeable harm is done to the carnations, but the roses are going to the bad for some reason, and we should like to know whether this insect is in any way responsible. M. A. B.

These insects are termites, and usually do not harm the roots of growing plants, their function in life being the removal of dead and decaying vegetable matter.

The only remedy I know of is bisulphide of carbon. This is applied by exposing it in a shallow vessel, and as the vapor is heavier than air, it sinks into the soil. Care must be taken to keep lighted matches or any kind of fire out of reach, as it is highly explosive. Applied once a week for three weeks, it will frequently clear a house. RIBES.

BUDDED VS. OWN-ROOT ROSES.

I notice in the REVIEW of March 18 that "Phil," in his always interesting Philadelphia news letter, quotes P. J. Lynch as taking issue with me in regard to the superiority of budded over own-root roses for outdoor culture. I am well aware of Mr. Lynch's high standing as a rosarian, but regret that I am unable to agree with him in his quoted statement that rose plants for outdoor culture grown from cuttings are better than budded stock.

I do not doubt for a moment that some of Mr. Lynch's customers have had good

"4. A great many of the flowers raised in the state of Illinois are shipped great distances, not only to neighboring states, but to all parts of the country. There is also much shipping done from small towns to larger centers. Studies should be made for increasing the keeping qualities of the flowers, and the problems of packing and shipping should be investigated.

"5. Studies and actual tests should be made in various methods of bench construction. The high price of lumber has led to the use of many other materials for this purpose.

"6. The questions arising from the use of refrigeration plants should be thoroughly investigated. This includes the handling of cut flowers in artificially cooled houses and the cold storage of various forms of plants and bulbs to retard their growth.

"7. There seems to be a great future for the growing of many of the hardy annuals, perennials and bulbs for both cut flowers and decoration of home grounds if this line were properly developed.

"This station could carry on many of these lines of investigation and many others if it had the proper facilities, and so save the people thousands of dollars."

GREENFLY IN ROSE HOUSES.

What do you consider the best and most economical means of exterminating greenfly in greenhouses containing roses planted out for cut flowers. F. H. W.

There are many very effective methods of killing greenfly, and every florist has his own particular fancy. Smoking with tobacco stems, or other fumigants containing tobacco in some form, is the most common practice, and if carefully performed, is one of the surest and safest methods. Some prefer to steam the stems, thus raising a vapor which condenses on the leaves and stems. This is also a sure way to exterminate the pests.

The most effectual method, however, is to release the fumes of cyanide of potassium. This is a rather delicate operation, and dangerous alike to plants and operator if not properly performed. Full instructions as to this method have appeared from time to time in these columns. These should be carefully studied before using this method. Ribes.

MOVING KILLARNEY ROSES.

Would you please let me know whether it is safe to move our Killarney roses from the bench into the solid bed next summer? They were planted last July, and are in a healthy condition. How much drying off do they require before moving? We also have a bench of Richmond. Should they be treated in the same way?

Our Rhea Reid sheds its foliage about every five weeks. Is this a common trouble with it? C. S.

It is perfectly safe to shift Killarney roses from table benches into solid beds. This operation can be performed any time during June and up till September. Before moving them, they ought to get a partial ripening by gradually withholding water for a week or so, always giving plenty of ventilation. After planting, keep the house rather close and moist for a week, until root action commences.

Rhea Reid is no more inclined to shed its foliage when properly treated than Killarney. It requires plenty of ventilation and water. RIBES.

ROSE ANTHRACNOSE.

Under separate cover I am sending you two rose plants. These plants have been grown in a good, light house, have not been overwatered and have had the right ventilation, for there has been no mildew in the house. They were planted June 15 of last year. Kindly advise me what the trouble is. F. W. W.

These rose plants are suffering from the disease known as Anthracnose rosea. It is usually induced by a close, damp atmosphere during the growing season, and is one of the hardest diseases to get rid of. It generally begins to manifest itself during the late fall. The tops of the shoots begin to blacken and die, the disease apparently working down the stem. At the same time young, vigorous canes will start from the bottom, these in turn to be attacked in the same manner.

The only remedy, when this appears, is to throw out the affected plants, give the house a thorough cleaning out of all decaying leaves, etc., and keep on ample ventilation. RIBES.

ROSE PLANTS FOR THE BENCH.

As we intend to erect a greenhouse for roses this summer, we should like to know what is the best time to plant them in the benches, in this Oregon climate. Would the first of September be too late if we could not get them sooner? What would be the best to plant one or two-year olds? M. G.

The best time to plant roses is from early in May up till July. Roses planted as late as September are rarely a paying crop.

One year old stock—that is, stock raised during the winter—is preferable to stock of any other age. RIBES.

WHITE ANTS IN ROSE SOIL.

Under separate cover, we are sending a sample of soil infested with a small white pest, which neither lime water nor tobacco affects in the least. Our rose and carnation soil has millions of them. No noticeable harm is done to the carnations, but the roses are going to the bad for some reason, and we should like to know whether this insect is in any way responsible. M. A. B.

These insects are termites, and usually do not harm the roots of growing plants, their function in life being the removal of dead and decaying vegetable matter.

The only remedy I know of is bisulphide of carbon. This is applied by exposing it in a shallow vessel, and as the vapor is heavier than air, it sinks into the soil. Care must be taken to keep lighted matches or any kind of fire out of reach, as it is highly explosive. Applied once a week for three weeks, it will frequently clear a house. RIBES.

BUDDED VS. OWN-ROOT ROSES.

I notice in the REVIEW of March 18 that "Phil," in his always interesting Philadelphia news letter, quotes P. J. Lynch as taking issue with me in regard to the superiority of budded over own-root roses for outdoor culture. I am well aware of Mr. Lynch's high standing as a rosarian, but regret that I am unable to agree with him in his quoted statement that rose plants for outdoor culture grown from cuttings are better than budded stock.

I do not doubt for a moment that some of Mr. Lynch's customers have had good success with roses from his well-known nursery, but I do question the statement that in New England, or any of our colder states, own-root roses are for one moment to be compared with budded stock for outdoor culture. I have had no experience with budded roses, either foreign or domestic, in North Carolina, as Mr. Lynch has, but in New England own-root roses are of so little value outdoors that I do not know of a grower who would plant them. The budded stock, when properly planted, viz., two or three inches below the bud, will make more growth in one year than the own-root plants will in thrice that period. When planted as suggested, the rose itself will send out roots in addition to those produced on the Manetti or briar stock, thus insuring greater vigor in the plant.

The only objection which can be raised to budded stock is that in ignorant or careless hands the Manetti suckers are not removed when they appear, but I have yet to see in New England outdoor roses on their own roots, either hybrid perpetuals or hybrid teas, which will bear any comparison with flowers produced on budded stock.

M. H. Walsh, of Woods Hole, Mass., is probably the best all-round hardy rose grower we have in the east. I do not believe Mr. Walsh would grow any own-root stock. All I have ever seen on his place were budded. I would be glad to have the opinions of other growers on this subject, which is an important one.

Own-root roses at a low price bring the queen of flowers within the reach of thousands who would probably never buy a budded plant, and I would be sorry, indeed, to say one word which might in any way affect their sale, but in our colder states, at least, budded plants are much hardier, possess greater vigor and are much longer-lived than own-root plants, and where exhibition flowers are wanted, they are incomparably superior in every way. In Great Britain, where undoubtedly the finest examples of outdoor roses in the world are to be seen, far better than the best we can produce under the most favorable conditions in New England, no one would think of planting other than budded stock. I have had considerable experience, both there and here, with hardy roses, and where hardiness, vigor, longevity and quality are prime considerations I would always plant budded stock. Perhaps, however, in states with balmier climatic conditions, own-root stock may succeed better. W. N. Craig.

ROSES FOR A GRAVE.

I should like to know what kind of a monthly rose would be best to put on a grave—some variety that would bloom most of the summer. J. W. J.

If not particular as to color, there is no better rose, so far as hardiness and free blooming are concerned, than Mme. Plantier. This is also called Memorial rose. Clothilde Soupert is also a desirable rose for this purpose. Ribes.

FLORICULTURAL EDUCATION.

In connection with the recent discussion of floricultural education, the work being done by the state of Minnesota is worthy of mention.

At Owatonna the state of Minnesota maintains a public school for dependent children. It corresponds closely to the orphan homes throughout the country. One of the departments is devoted to the teaching of floriculture under the gardener, who is Edward W. Schuster. The children are taught how to prepare, plant and cultivate all sorts of plants and flowers; they are taught to make hotbeds and how to propagate. There is a greenhouse in connection with the school and a large lawn, which the pupils keep clipped with the pony mowers and small hand mowers. They have two pony teams for doing the work. The flower beds shown in the accompanying illustration were planted last spring by the children and cared for through the summer. In the greenhouse chrysanthemums are grown in the autumn and carnations in the winter, together with miscellaneous pot plants and the large amount of material needed for planting the grounds. The training makes practical gardeners and florists of any lads having aptitude for the work.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Easter Preparations.

The greatest floral festival of the year is now close at hand and all indications point to splendid business, in many sections an improvement over a year ago. We trust that the many flowering plants, which have been carefully tended for weeks or months past, are in good condition and that sales will once more beat all records. Weather vagaries have to be reckoned with and it is more than likely that some stock will be a little late. A few dark, cloudy days in succession make a woeful difference in the opening of flowers, and any which seem backward and which you are in doubts about should be given more heat, for remember that prices after Easter slump considerably, particularly in the case of lilies and other pot plants.

Plants well expanded must be kept cool and shaded from the sun's rays. All pots should be washed scrupulously clean, not forgetting to clean the bottoms as well as the sides. Anyone attempting to sell plants in dirty pots deserves to lose business. Put a neat stake to all the lilies. Now is the time to make up large pots of these. Shaking away a lot of the earth will not materially affect the expansion or lasting properties of the flowers. Pots containing three to five stems are often wanted for church decorations, and if kept well moistened at the root, will never show a sign of wilting. Be sure to keep all yellow stamens removed from the flowers.

Be sure that you do not forget an abundant water supply to all flowering plants, particularly in the case of such thirsty subjects as spiræas, genistas, marguerites and ramblers. Remember that one good drying out will ruin any of these.

Easter weather, we hope, may be balmy. Of this, however, we are never certain, and it is well to be prepared for eventualities by having a good supply of wrapping material on hand. If it is warm enough, flowering plants carry better not wrapped over at all. It is otherwise when a northeaster with snow squalls prevails. Do not rely on the prognostications of the weather bureau. Remember how they slipped up on their Washington inauguration menu.

Many florists now tie cards on plants, saying "Water this every day." It is a good idea; with some plants it might be well to make it read twice a day. Always remind your customers about the necessity of careful watering. Deliver all purchases as promptly as possible, and do not promise goods you know you cannot supply. A pleased customer is the best advertisement you can have, so strive in every possible way to merit their approval.

Easter Lilies.

About every grower is certain to have a percentage of his lilies rather backward. It will well repay a little special effort to hurry these along, as Easter prices are worth striving for, the demand the following week usually being slight. Longiflorums will stand a night temperature of 75 degrees, with a corresponding rise in the daytime. Spray them over several times a day, using warm water. These plants will lack the substance of those grown under cooler conditions, but a plant with at least one flower open will sell, while those unexpanded are not wanted.

The giganteum type of longiflorums is extremely dwarf this season, although fairly healthy. An early Easter does not suit this variety. The bulbs cannot have a proper rest before being forced. On the other hand, if brought along cooler for Memorial day, they will have stems of double the length. The Formosa type will be more grown another year. They grow much taller than the other longiflorums and come in season a couple of months earlier without hard forcing.

Fancy-leaved Caladiums.

There is no special advantage in starting fancy-leaved caladiums much earlier than the first week in April. Shake out the bulbs and start them in small pots or flats of leaf-mold and sand. They want a brisk heat; 65 degrees at night will suit them. Water sparingly until roots and leaves appear. Pot off singly when they are nicely started, using for compost fibrous loam, sharp sand, leaf-mold and some well broken old cow or hotbed manure. Stand the pots on a bench where they can obtain some bottom heat from steam or hot water pipes.

Caladium Esculentum.

Caladium esculentum makes such extremely rapid growth that there is no need to start them before the middle of April. Colocasia esculentum, as this plant is known botanically, is indispensable for sub-tropical bedding and succeeds particularly well where the ground is low and damp. Some florists prefer to purchase fresh roots each year. These are inexpensive, and where suitable winter storage quarters are wanting, it is much better to secure a new stock of roots each spring. Lay the tubers on a bench in a warmer house, scattering a little moss or sand over them, and pot up singly when growth has started.

Outdoor Bulbous Plants.

It is now time to remove the winter mulch from Dutch bulbs, except in northerly latitudes. Use care in taking it away. The winter has been a comparatively open one and shoots of tulips and hyacinths will be easily snapped off, if careless hands are employed to do this work. On no occasion use rakes on the bulb beds where the tops are showing, but use the hands to remove the winter mulch. After taking away the leaves or straw, scratch over the surface soil and press in any bulbs which may have been heaved by the frequent alternate freezings and thawings.

Hardy Perennial Plants.

The recent spring rains are starting hardy perennial plants into activity and it is time to carefully remove the winter mulch applied in December. The value of this mulch has been well demonstrated this winter. Those who carried out fall planting and failed to use any winter protective material, are mourning over their losses. Had the winter been a steadily cold one, losses would have been much less severe. A coating of snow is the best possible covering for all this class of plants, and if we could only have it from Christmas until the middle of March, few herbaceous plants would die.

Perennial Phlox.

Perennial phlox is one of the most useful of all perennials and hardy in any location. To increase stock of the best varieties, lift a clump of these now and plant in a bench in a cool house. The young shoots now starting will root readily in a bench where carnations and mums root, and potted off into 2½-inch or 3-inch pots, placed in a frame and planted outdoors early in May, will make fine spikes which will also come in season when the older clumps are on the wane.

KEEP UP TO DATE.

Did you ever send an order to a man and get no acknowledgment of it? In such a case, did you ever wait ten days and write inquiring about the order? If you did, how did you feel a week later, when you received a postal card stating laconically: "Can't fill your order"? There are two essentials to doing a mail-order business by advertising that frequently are overlooked. If one cares to achieve a reputation as a good person to deal with, it is necessary to do one ot two things every time an order is received: Either the goods must be shipped at once, or an acknowledgment sent, stating when shipment will be made. In the event the order calls for something which cannot be supplied, it is no more than common business courtesy to write at once, that very day, stating that the order cannot be filled. It is the height of discourtesy to neglect to make such a reply if an order cannot be filled, and it is the means of driving away many who might become regular customers.

If you get your orders by advertising, keep the advertisement up to date. Don't let the advertisement contain items you are sold out of. Cut out the items as fast as you are sold out of stock, and when you are all cleaned up discontinue the advertisement promptly.

Watch these details and they will go a long way toward establishing your reputation as a prompt, reliable and satisfactory person to deal with. Such a reputation will help your advertisement bring returns, and a reputation to the contrary is a handicap on any advertising you may do.

THE NEW SECRETARY.

Each year the new officers of the American Carnation Society, an organization that has enjoyed a reputation for special activity, take up their duties about April 1. Albert M. Herr, in passing to the presidency, hands over the secretarial duties to A. F. J. Baur. The secretary is the working officer in each of the trade organizations, and the new keeper of the records brings to the work the energy and enthusiasm of youth. He was born January 9, 1876, at Bloomfield, Pa. His father was a clergyman, but the lad did not do as ministers' sons are often said to do, and begin his horticultural career by sowing a crop of wild oats, for at 13 years of age he was sent to F. Morat's Sons, at Louisville, Ky., where he worked in the greenhouses for two years. After this he went to work for the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., January 21, 1891. He remained with this firm five years, having charge, at different times, of the carnations and exhibition mums. It was while at this place that Mr. Baur became interested in plant breeding and in carnations; and here under his hand originated Triumph, Armazindy and Flora Hill. December 11, 1895, he went to Stuart & Haugh, at Anderson, Ind., to grow roses, and January 1, 1897, before he had reached his twenty-first birthday, he became foreman of H. A. Niemeyer's place, at Erie, Pa. He remained with this firm two years, and then took a similar position with Charles Siebert, of Pittsburg, but remained there only five months.

Mr. Baur formed the partnership with F. S. Smith, who was also a graduate from the Hill establishment, May 20, 1899, and together they leased the Bernie Fohl place, at Indianapolis. The firm has been steadily successful, and in 1905 started a new place that has since been added to each season. Seeing the possibilities in the carnation, they soon made this a specialty, growing blooms for the Indianapolis market and cuttings for the trade. Hybridization naturally was taken up, and in 1905 a pink seedling named Indianapolis was sent out. This was followed in 1907 by a flesh pink called May. Next year they expect to disseminate a white, Shasta, which is easily the best sort they have yet raised. It was a center of attraction at the recent convention and exhibition of the A. C. S., and has since been shown in good shape before many of the florists' clubs.

Mr. Baur's name is well known to the trade as that of the author of "Carnation Notes—West," in the Review. He has been writing carnation notes for the Review since 1900, and has answered many hundreds of inquiries in regard to the culture of this flower. He married April 10, 1901, Miss Elma Steinkamp, of Richmond, Ind., and their first-born, a daughter, is now 2 years of age.

In 1907 Mr. Baur was elected secretary of the State Florists' Association of Indiana. He is now serving his third term. The association has been exceedingly active and successful during this period. Of its work Mr. Baur says: "I have gone on the principle that activity in any body of men, as well as in an individual, makes for development, and the soundness of this principle is borne out by the condition of our association." Mr. Baur was vice-president of the Carnation Society last year, and took the leading part in preparing for the Indianapolis convention. He is a member of the S. A. F.

HOW OLD IS ANN?

Orland P. Bassett, president of the Pictorial Printing Co. and a resident of Hinsdale, Ill., where the greenhouses of Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, are located, is 73. Born March 31. His hobby is his four automobiles.

J. A. Valentine, president of the S. A. F., was born in Iowa half a hundred years ago. With a sheepskin from Iowa University, he went into the flower business at Denver to pull out an investment that had gone in before he did.

E. Allan Peirce, who is given much credit for the great success of the recent Park Street Market's show in Boston, is 40, born at Arlington. Peirce Bros., at Waltham, are said to be the largest growers of Easter lilies in this country. They come out of the greenhouses on a miniature railroad and are delivered for fifty miles around by a big automobile van.

J. E. Northrup, of Northrup, King & Co., is 51. Born at Saline, Mich., at an early age he sought fresh pastures and now is president of the Board of Park Commissioners at Minneapolis.

Peter Reinberg, democratic alderman from one of Chicago's strongest republican wards, was 51 March 5. His greenhouses cover more ground than any others in America and he pays more personal property taxes than all the rest of the Chicago city council put together. They talk of running him for mayor.

Henry C. Ostertag, who is running for alderman, although they call it member of the House of Delegates, at St. Louis, is 42. He was born at the capital of Wisconsin.

"Billy" Kasting, ex-president of the S. A. F., and chairman of the National Flower Show, is 39. Born at Sachsenhausen, Vaterland, he now is park commissioner in Buffalo—and would have been city treasurer if there hadn't been too many republicans.

Willis N. Rudd, native of the town of Worth, Ill., and alumnus of Cornell, was 49 March 30. He finds play for his varsatility by being president of a cemetery and secretary of the S. A. F.

A. A. Pantet, candidate for re-election as alderman for the Third ward at Fort Smith, Ark., is 43. He was born at Angouleme, France, New Year's day, 1866.

Mentor, O.—C. Merkel & Son are preparing a fine showing of flowers for Easter.

Atlanta, Ga.—In a big storm at midnight March 24 the big plate glass window of the Westview Floral Co., 105 Peachtree street, was blown in and considerable stock ruined.

Norwich, Conn.—A conservatory, to cost about $2,000, is being erected at the Washington street residence of Mrs. W. C. Lanman. It will be used for the cultivation of new varieties of roses.

CLEANING GREENHOUSE GLASS.

Please give us some information in regard to cleaning greenhouse glass. We have torn down an old house, and the glass is covered with a kind of dirt which is very hard to remove. We have tried lye, but this has no effect. Do you know what will cut the dirt? O. J. P.

If concentrated lye does not remove the dirt after the glass has been immersed a few hours, there is little hope of getting it clean. Corrosive sublimate will remove all paint and putty stains if the surface of the glass is not corroded. This chemical requires very careful handling to prevent burning the hands. Consult some chemist or apply to a good painter, as they usually have recipes for this class of work. RIBES.

ST. LOUIS SPRING SHOW.

The third annual spring flower show of the St. Louis Horticultural Society took place March 24 to 26, in the large banquet hall of the Grand Avenue Masonic Temple. The exhibition was a creditable one. The competition was not large, but all of the stock shown was of extra fine quality. Several of the local florists, as well as the city park department, made displays not for competition. The park department made the largest display, having eight groups in different parts of the hall, which were in charge of William Wurnane, who, by permission of Superintendent George Ostertag, arranged the displays with great taste and skill.

Fred C. Weber showed an excellent Easter design. Theodore Miller also had an attractive display, the center of which was a large oval wreath on an easel. Vaughan's Seed Store, of Chicago, and George A. Kuhl, of Pekin, showed groups of plants. A. C. Brown, of Springfield, had one fine vase, each, of Sangamo and Governor Deneen carnations. J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, showed a vase of Alice Roosevelt roses, which attracted some attention.

Visitors at the show were: W. J. Vesey, Jr., of Fort Wayne, Ind.; George Kuhl, Pekin, Ill.; Albert T. Hey, Western Springs, Ill.; A. T. Pyfer, Joliet, Ill.; E. A. Easterday, Nokomis, Ill., and J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill. The attendance for the three days was good. The music in the evening was much enjoyed by the crowd. The management was satisfied with the results of the show and the society attracted many new friends.

The judges were R. T. Tesson, A. Meyer, Sr., and Albert T. Hey. After a few hours' hard work, they announced the results as follows:

Collection of bulbous plants in bloom, William Schray & Sons, first; Koenig Floral Co., second.

Fifty foliage and blooming plants, William Schray & Sons, first; C. Young & Sons Co., second.

Perennial Phlox.

Perennial phlox is one of the most useful of all perennials and hardy in any location. To increase stock of the best varieties, lift a clump of these now and plant in a bench in a cool house. The young shoots now starting will root readily in a bench where carnations and mums root, and potted off into 2½-inch or 3-inch pots, placed in a frame and planted outdoors early in May, will make fine spikes which will also come in season when the older clumps are on the wane.

KEEP UP TO DATE.

Did you ever send an order to a man and get no acknowledgment of it? In such a case, did you ever wait ten days and write inquiring about the order? If you did, how did you feel a week later, when you received a postal card stating laconically: "Can't fill your order"? There are two essentials to doing a mail order business by advertising that frequently are overlooked. If one cares to achieve a reputation as a good person to deal with, it is necessary to do one of two things every time an order is received: Either the goods must be shipped at once, or an acknowledgment sent, stating when shipment will be made. In the event the order calls for something which cannot be supplied, it is no more than common business courtesy to write at once, that very day, stating that the order cannot be filled. It is the height of discourtesy to neglect to make such a reply if an order cannot be filled, and it is the means of driving away many who might become regular customers.

If you get your orders by advertising, keep the advertisement up to date. Don't let the advertisement contain items you are sold out of. Cut out the items as fast as you are sold out of stock, and when you are all cleaned up discontinue the advertisement promptly.

Watch these details and they will go a long way toward establishing your reputation as a prompt, reliable and satisfactory person to deal with. Such a reputation will help your advertisement bring returns, and a reputation to the contrary is a handicap on any advertising you may do.

THE NEW SECRETARY.

Each year the new officers of the American Carnation Society, an organization that has enjoyed a reputation for special activity, take up their duties about April 1. Albert M. Herr, in passing to the presidency, hands over the secretarial duties to A. F. J. Baur. The secretary is the working officer in each of the trade organizations, and the new keeper of the records brings to the work the energy and enthusiasm of youth. He was born January 9, 1876, at Bloomfield, Pa. His father was a clergyman, but the lad did not do as ministers' sons are often said to do, and begin his horticultural career by sowing a crop of wild oats, for at 13 years of age he was sent to F. Morat's Sons, at Louisville, Ky., where he worked in the greenhouses for two years. After this he went to work for the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., January 21, 1891. He remained with this firm five years, having charge, at different times, of the carnations and exhibition mums. It was while at this place that Mr. Baur became interested in plant breeding and in carnations; and here under his hand originated Triumph, Armazindy and Flora Hill. December 11, 1895, he went to Stuart & Haugh, at Anderson, Ind., to grow roses, and January 1, 1897, before he had reached his twenty-first birthday, he became foreman of H. A. Niemeyer's place, at Erie, Pa. He remained with this firm two years, and then took a similar position with Charles Siebert, of Pittsburg, but remained there only five months.

Mr. Baur formed the partnership with F. S. Smith, who was also a graduate from the Hill establishment, May 20, 1899, and together they leased the Bernie Fohl place, at Indianapolis. The firm has been steadily successful, and in 1905 started a new place that has since been added to each season. Seeing the possibilities in the carnation, they soon made this a specialty, growing blooms for the Indianapolis market and cuttings for the trade. Hybridization naturally was taken up, and in 1905 a pink seedling named Indianapolis was sent out. This was followed in 1907 by a flesh pink called May. Next year they expect to disseminate a white, Shasta, which is easily the best sort they have yet raised. It was a center of attraction at the recent convention and exhibition of the A. C. S., and has since been shown in good shape before many of the florists' clubs.

Mr. Baur's name is well known to the trade as that of the author of "Carnation Notes—West," in the Review. He has been writing carnation notes for the Review since 1900, and has answered many hundreds of inquiries in regard to the culture of this flower. He married April 10, 1901, Miss Elma Steinkamp, of Richmond, Ind., and their first born, a daughter, is now 2 years of age.

In 1907 Mr. Baur was elected secretary of the State Florists' Association of Indiana. He is now serving his third term. The association has been exceedingly active and successful during this period. Of its work Mr. Baur says: "I have gone on the principle that activity in any body of men, as well as in an individual, makes for development, and the soundness of this principle is borne out by the condition of our association." Mr. Baur was vice-president of the Carnation Society last year, and took the leading part in preparing for the Indianapolis convention. He is a member of the S. A. F.

HOW OLD IS ANN?

Orland P. Bassett, president of the Pictorial Printing Co. and a resident of Hinsdale, Ill., where the greenhouses of Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, are located, is 73. Born March 31. His hobby is his four automobiles.

J. A. Valentine, president of the S. A. F., was born in Iowa half a hundred years ago. With a sheepskin from Iowa University, he went into the flower business at Denver to pull out an investment that had gone in before he did.

E. Allan Peirce, who is given much credit for the great success of the recent Park Street Market's show in Boston, is 40, born at Arlington. Peirce Bros., at Waltham, are said to be the largest growers of Easter lilies in this country. They come out of the greenhouses on a miniature railroad and are delivered for fifty miles around by a big automobile van.

J. E. Northrup, of Northrup, King & Co., is 51. Born at Saline, Mich., at an early age he sought fresh pastures and now is president of the Board of Park Commissioners at Minneapolis.

Peter Reinberg, democratic alderman from one of Chicago's strongest republican wards, was 51 March 5. His greenhouses cover more ground than any others in America and he pays more personal property taxes than all the rest of the Chicago city council put together. They talk of running him for mayor.

Henry C. Ostertag, who is running for alderman, although they call it member of the House of Delegates, at St. Louis, is 42. He was born at the capital of Wisconsin.

"Billy" Kasting, ex-president of the S. A. F., and chairman of the National Flower Show, is 39. Born at Sachsenhausen, Vaterland, he now is park commissioner in Buffalo—and would have been city treasurer if there hadn't been too many republicans.

Willis N. Rudd, native of the town of Worth, Ill., and alumnus of Cornell, was 49 March 30. He finds play for his varsatility by being president of a cemetery and secretary of the S. A. F.

A. A. Pantet, candidate for re-election as alderman for the Third ward at Fort Smith, Ark., is 43. He was born at Angouleme, France, New Year's day, 1866.

Mentor, O.—C. Merkel & Son are preparing a fine showing of flowers for Easter.

Atlanta, Ga.—In a big storm at midnight March 24 the big plate glass window of the Westview Floral Co., 105 Peachtree street, was blown in and considerable stock ruined.

Norwich, Conn.—A conservatory, to cost about $2,000, is being erected at the Washington street residence of Mrs. W. C. Lanman. It will be used for the cultivation of new varieties of roses.

CLEANING GREENHOUSE GLASS.

Please give us some information in regard to cleaning greenhouse glass. We have torn down an old house, and the glass is covered with a kind of dirt which is very hard to remove. We have tried lye, but this has no effect. Do you know what will cut the dirt? O. J. P.

If concentrated lye does not remove the dirt after the glass has been immersed a few hours, there is little hope of getting it clean. Corrosive sublimate will remove all paint and putty stains if the surface of the glass is not corroded. This chemical requires very careful handling to prevent burning the hands. Consult some chemist or apply to a good painter, as they usually have recipes for this class of work. RIBES.

ST. LOUIS SPRING SHOW.

The third annual spring flower show of the St. Louis Horticultural Society took place March 24 to 26, in the large banquet hall of the Grand Avenue Masonic Temple. The exhibition was a creditable one. The competition was not large, but all of the stock shown was of extra fine quality. Several of the local florists, as well as the city park department, made displays not for competition. The park department made the largest display, having eight groups in different parts of the hall, which were in charge of William Wurnane, who, by permission of Superintendent George Ostertag, arranged the displays with great taste and skill.

Fred C. Weber showed an excellent Easter design. Theodore Miller also had an attractive display, the center of which was a large oval wreath on an easel. BOSTON'S SPRING SHOW.

A Great Success.

The exhibition briefly referred to in last week's REVIEW, and which is still in progress, the major portion of the leading exhibits being still in place, is far the most successful from every point of view of any horticultural show Boston has yet held. It was thought that with two big trade shows immediately preceding the Massachusetts Horticultural Society's show, the latter might suffer, but as a matter of fact it only seemed to galvanize new life and enthusiasm and the record-breaking attendance of the public attested the popularity of it. On the third day, March 26, cash receipts exceeded by several hundred dollars the total receipts for the spring show of 1908. Saturday broke all records again and it was decided to hold the show open to include Sunday, April 4. The attendance this week continues good.

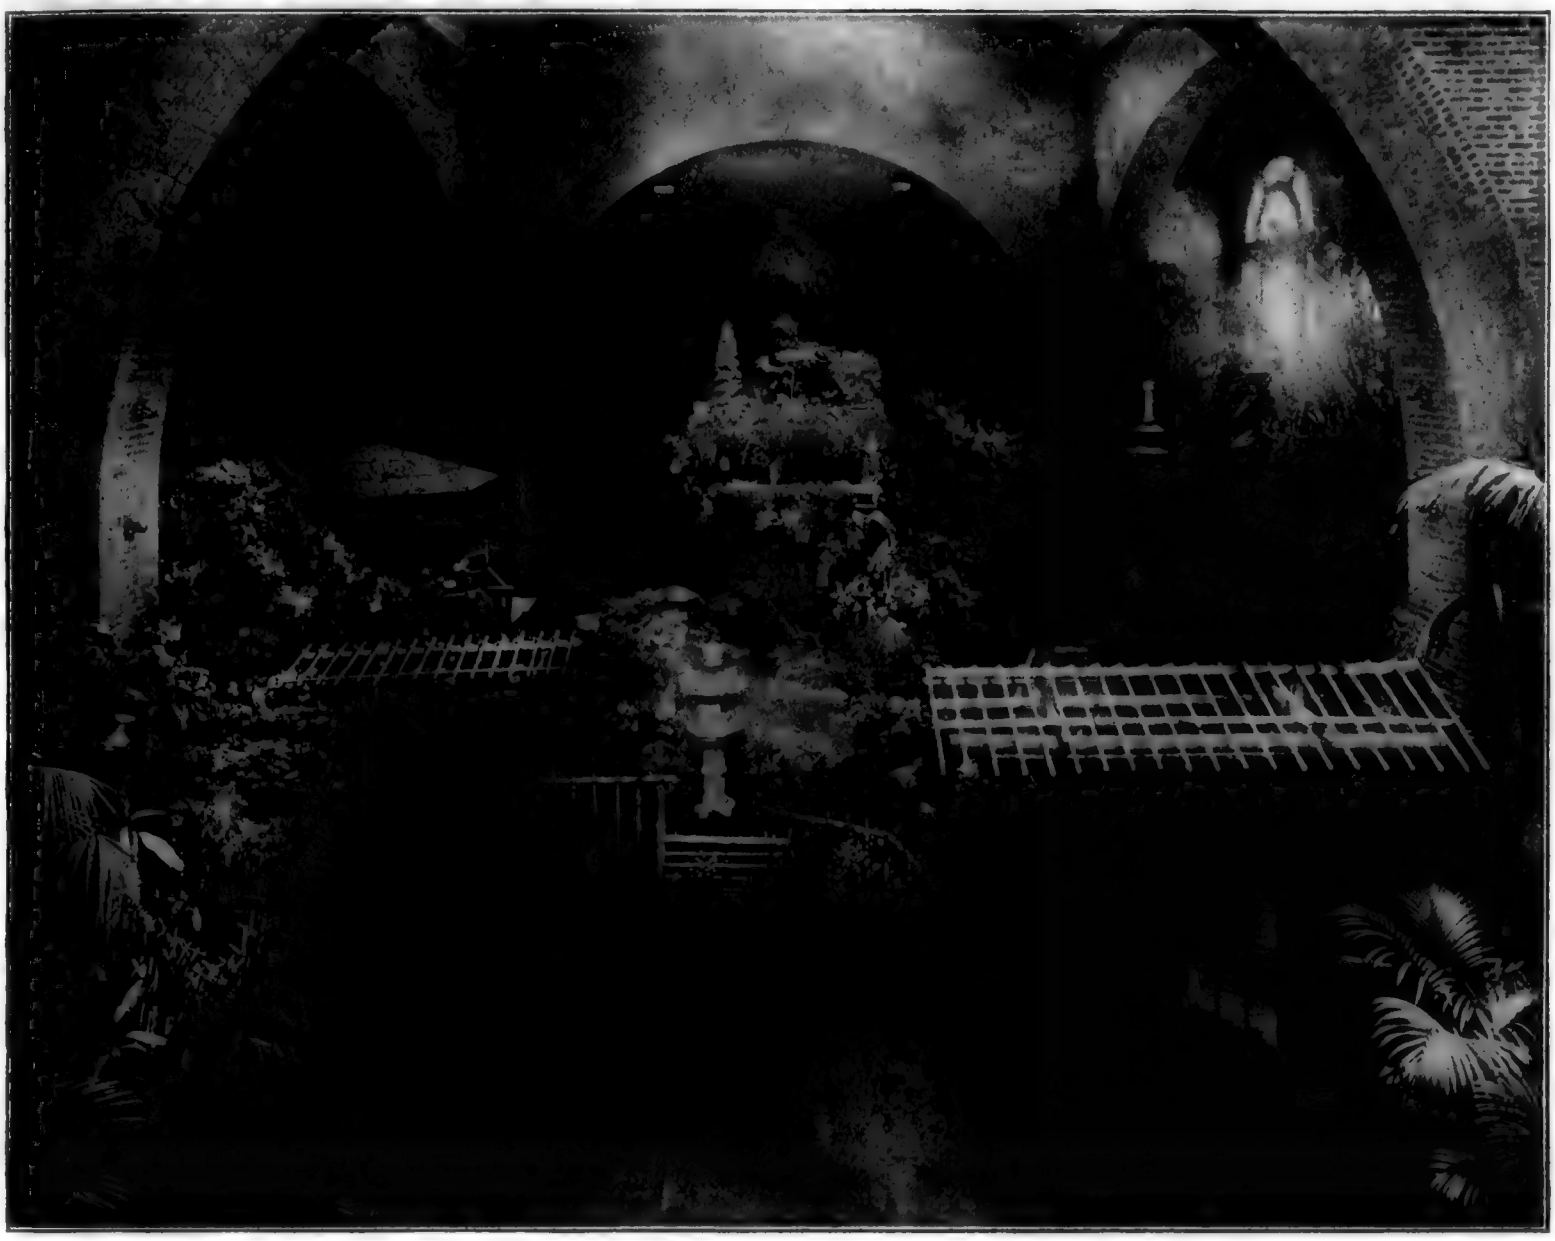
The Japanese Garden.

The immense success of the show is due to the Japanese garden by R. & J. Farquhar & Co. This is on a magnitude never before attempted at any exhibition, either in America or Europe. It entailed an outlay of thousands of dollars, there being scores of wagon-loads of plants required to furnish it. The designing and planting were done with exquisite taste; the variety of plants used was legion, from the big magnolias, cherries, forsythias and peaches down to the tiniest rock plants. Tree and herbaceous peonies, chrysanthemums, lilies, astilbes, primulas and hosts of other flowering subjects were utilized, and all the evergreens peculiar to the land of the Mikado. Under artificial light the sacred mountain of Japan, Fuji-yama, looked realistic in the distance. We were pleased to note the enthusiasm of the most liberal patrons of horticulture for this peculiarly interesting and satisfying style of garden. A gold medal, the highest award of the society, was inadequate for this superb garden.

The Pot Plants.

Robert Cameron's big group in the main hall was arranged in that gentleman's usual finished style and well merited the silver medal awarded. Thomas Roland's silver medal group of Easter plants has never been equaled in Boston. The beautiful Acacia pubescens and a host of other choice things were all splendidly grown, and a gold medal would not have been too high an award. Edward MacMulkin's second prize group was also fine, the best that gentleman has ever staged.

M. H. Walsh's ramblers were, as usual, a great feature. He captured all prizes in the rambler classes. Among his new sorts we noted Maid Marion, a beautiful single pink, awarded certificate of merit; Friar Tuck, single pink; Kalmia, single pink; Troubadour, double scarlet; Alana-Dale, large single pink, loose flowers; and Excelsa. Of older kinds, Delight, Lady Gay, Hiawatha and Milky Way were excellent.



The azaleas were specially good, E. MacMulkin, W. Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, and E. W. Breed being prize winners. E. MacMulkin, Mrs. F. Ayer, George Page gardener, and W. Whitman had the best palms, while for ericas, Mrs. Ayer had the field to herself. J. R. Leeson, J. Cartwright gardener, had the only entry of miscellaneous hard-wooded plants. The Bellevue Nurseries, with a pretty rock garden, secured first for not less than twenty-five varieties of herbaceous and alpine plants in bloom.

Cyclamens, as usual, were up to Boston's high standard, Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust gardener, E. J. Milton, Mrs. F. Ayer and J. S. Bailey, W. McGillivray gardener, taking the prizes. John Barr had a handsome table of commercial stock in 5-inch pots. Cinerarias were extra good, especially W. Whitman's C. stellata plants, being four to five feet across. Other winners were W. A. Riggs, Dr. C. G. Weld, J. S. Bailey and Mrs. J. L. Gardner, W. Thatcher gardener.

Dutch bulbs were of fine quality. W. Whitman had the best group and won a number of prizes in individual classes. Others who were successful were: Mrs. J. L. Gardner, W. A. Riggs and Mrs. J. M. Sears, W. C. Ritchie gardener. The collection of seedling amaryllis from Mrs. Sears were superb and well merited the silver medal awarded.

Schizanthus prizes went to Mrs. J. L. Gardner and J. L. Bailey. E. B. Dane, D. McKenzie gardener, had the best orchid group, securing the silver medal. A fine Cypripedium Mandiæ secured a certificate of merit; Seth Borden, F. Vardon gardener, was second and E. J. Milton third. Julius Roehrs had a nice group of orchids not for competition. E. O. Orpet had a number of good seedlings, securing a certificate for Brasso-Cattleya Susannæ. Duncan Finlayson also received a certificate for a fine form of Lælia elegans. Mrs. A. W. Blake, J. L. Smith gardener, and Seth Borden had the best specimen orchids.

Roses and Carnations.

In the rose classes competition was not keen. Waban Conservatories led for Beauties; F. R. Pierson Co., second. Montrose Greenhouses led with Bride, Bridesmaid and Richmond, all of fine quality. W. H. Elliott was second for Richmond, first for Killarney, third for any other pink, and third for any other variety. F. R. Pierson Co. took the silver medal for best new rose not in commerce with White Killarney.

Patten & Co., with a grand vase of their new white, Genevieve, won for best 100 carnations. They also led for crimson, with fine flowers of Sara Nicholson, W. Wheeler and Edward Winkler following with Harry Fenn. C. S. Strout had the best vase of dark pink and Winsor shade of pink, Patten & Co. and Backer & Co. being second and third in latter class. R. D. Kimball and Patten & Co. had the best Enchantress shade of pink. For scarlets John Barr led with splendid Beacon; Patten & Co., second; B. P. Winch, third. Patten & Co., with White Perfection, were first for whites; C. S. Strout second, with White Enchantress. Patten & Co. also won for white variegated with Variegated Lawson and yellow variegated with their seedling, Hattie Starrett. S. J. Goddard made a fine display of carnations. The New Hampshire Agricultural College had some nice seedlings, awarded honorable mention.

R. D. Kimball had first for twenty-five antirrhinums. For 100 single violets, Estey Bros., William Sim and H. M. Howard won, all showing Princess of Wales. For double violets, L. E. Small, H. M. Sanderson and N. F. Comley took prizes in order named. William Sim had first and third for two vases of 600 each of sweet peas; N. F. Comley, second. Mr. Sim also had one of his usual fine displays of named varieties, and March 30 was awarded a silver medal for a fresh display of peas and violets.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

The mantel decoration prizes attracted five entries. E. MacMulkin took the lead with a pleasing arrangement of yellow daffodils, Acacia pubescens and Otaheite oranges; Mrs. E. M. Gill second, with a light decoration of Winsor carnations; S. Hoffman third, with Killarney and pink Rambler roses.

Among miscellaneous exhibits, Julius Roehrs Co. secured a first class certificate for Odontoglossum crispum E. B. Dane, a nice spotted type, and Cattleya Schrœderæ Surprise. Mrs. J. L. Gardner had Darwin tulips. W. A. Riggs showed well flowered plants of Rose Tausendschon. This variety was quite largely shown in the groups. John Streiferd & Son had a nice group of genistas. Thomas Roland for fine specimen genistas received a cultural certificate, as did William McGillivray for a specimen of Dracæna Godseffiana over ten feet high. J. L. Smith received a silver medal for a plant of Nephrolepis Piersoni eleven feet in diameter. Arthur Griffin had a fine balloon specimen of Gloriosa Rothschildiana, which was awarded a silver medal. This is being introduced this season by Knight & Struck, New York. T. D. Hatfield had a nice group of hybrid amaryllises.

Mrs. Frederick Ayer had a handsome collection of specimen acacias and some well flowered gardenias. Mrs. J. M. Sears had camellias. Mrs. H. F. Durant, Thomas Watt gardener, showed Phaius grandifolius. W. C. Ward had a beautiful lot of pansies. Robert Ballantyne staged dwarf blue cinerarias and was awarded honorable mention. E. MacMulkin had a display of palms. W. W. Rawson received a certificate of merit for Narcissus King Alfred.

Visitors.

The attendance of gardeners and florists from all parts of New England and beyond broke all records for a Boston show. A few of those noted from a distance were: F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; John S. Hay, Philadelphia; Edward Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J.; F. C.

Gardner had Darwin tulips. W. A. Riggs showed well flowered plants of Rose Tausendschon. This variety was quite largely shown in the groups. John Streiferd & Son had a nice group of genistas. Thomas Roland for fine specimen genistas received a cultural certificate, as did William McGillivray for a specimen of Dracæna Godseffiana over ten feet high. J. L. Smith received a silver medal for a plant of Nephrolepis Piersoni eleven feet in diameter. Arthur Griffin had a fine balloon specimen of Gloriosa Rothschildiana, which was awarded a silver medal. This is being introduced this season by Knight & Struck, New York. T. D. Hatfield had a nice group of hybrid amaryllises.

Mrs. Frederick Ayer had a handsome collection of specimen acacias and some well flowered gardenias. Mrs. J. M. Sears had camellias. Mrs. H. F. Durant, Thomas Watt gardener, showed Phaius grandifolius. W. C. Ward had a beautiful lot of pansies. Robert Ballantyne staged dwarf blue cinerarias and was awarded honorable mention. E. MacMulkin had a display of palms. W. W. Rawson received a certificate of merit for Narcissus King Alfred.

Visitors.

The attendance of gardeners and florists from all parts of New England and beyond broke all records for a Boston show. A few of those noted from a distance were: F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; John S. Hay, Philadelphia; Edward Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J.; F. C.

Green, Warwick, R. I.; R. Gardner and A. Griffin, Newport, R. I.; W. F. Gude, Washington, D. C.; G. F. Struck, New York; H. Wild, Greenwich, Conn.; Joseph Manda, West Orange, N. J.; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; T. McCarthy, Providence, R. I.; C. S. Strout, Biddeford, Me.; T. Mellstrom, St. Albans, England; A. T. De La Mare, New York, N. Y.; R. Ballantyne, Canandaigua, N. Y.; F. McMahon, Seabright, N. J.; J. F. Huss, Hartford, Conn., and J. M. Keller, New York.

BAKER AND HIS BACKGROUND.

If there is any part of this country which is developing faster than the rest, it is the southwest. George C. Baker is one of those first on the ground at San Antonio, Tex., and already is doing an excellent business, with prospects of rapid increase. The accompanying illustration shows Mr. Baker beside his delivery outfit, with his residence and greenhouses at the rear, and at the left of the greenhouses a slat house, which is used as a shade for chrysanthemums and roses.

Geraniums

THE BEDDING STOCK.

The removal of lilies and other Easter flowering stock from the houses will give an opportunity to spread out the now rapidly growing bedding geraniums. If you leave them overcrowded now, it will materially decrease their selling value. Space the plants so that sunlight and air can strike in among them. This is the best of preventives for blight and other fungoid diseases.

If any of the plants in 4-inch pots show signs of yellowing, it probably means that with pots crammed full of roots they need a little tonic. Weak doses of cow manure water or a little nitrate of soda will soon tone them up.

If you are anxious to utilize bench space now occupied by geraniums, prepare a gentle hotbed, which should be fairly tramped. Lay three to four inches of fine coal ashes over this and partly plunge your geraniums in it. You will be surprised to note how well they will thrive in such a place.

GERANIUM LEAVES DISEASED.

I enclose leaves taken from some of my geraniums. They were growing nicely in 4-inch pots. This disease attacked them some time ago and is spreading fast. The south side of the house is the worst, the north side being almost free from it. Not all the south side is badly affected, but a large part of the leaves are affected. What is the matter and the remedy? E. B.

The foliage received was quite badly diseased. The cause of the trouble I could not state, without understanding more of your cultural conditions. A number of reasons can be advanced for this geranium trouble. Among these are overpropagation, extreme fluctuations in temperature, improper soil, lack of proper air and sunlight, keeping the soil and foliage too damp, and last, but not least, a failure to keep decaying or affected foliage removed. Cleanliness below the benches, as well as above, will do much towards keeping away these blights.

I would advise throwing away the worst affected plants. Keep the leaves showing disease carefully picked from the others. Also remove any which are drying or moldy. Space the plants so that they do not crowd each other. Let them have full sun, a free circulation of air and a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night. When you water, soak thoroughly, but let them dry out well before applying any more. Do not make a practice of spraying the plants overhead, and avoid the use of chemicals or liquid manure unless the plants are starving for it.

Geranium blight probably often has its inception in the cutting bench, but if conditions conducive to the proper culture of the plants are followed, even almost hopeless plants can be galvanized into new life. I have not found any advantage from the use of Bordeaux mixtures or other fungicides for this trouble.

GERANIUMS IN SOLID BEDS.

How will geraniums do grown in solid beds for propagating purposes? Will it be all right to put in small plants this spring and pinch to grow for cuttings this fall? We have always grown our stock in benches with bottom heat, and have had more than satisfactory results, but we want to make some changes in the use of our benches, and so we desire, if possible, to grow the geraniums in solid beds in the future. F. P. F. C.

While we would prefer benches for geranium culture, they will do well in solid beds. They will require more careful watering in the dark winter months. You can plant out young stock and pinch them as suggested. Water carefully, so as not to get the soil in a sour condition. Afford ample drainage and do not give over six inches of soil. Use fibrous loam, with some decayed horse or cow manure added to it, and rough sand to make it porous. The geraniums want all possible light and no shade. C. W.

PINCHING GERANIUMS.

Please tell me when is the best time to quit pinching geranium buds, so as to have them blooming nicely from May 10 to 30. The varieties are: S. A. Nutt, Montmort, Ricard, Beaute Poitevine, Marvel, Jean Viaud and Mme. Buchner. Do different varieties require different treatment? H. D. H.

If you discontinue pinching the flower shoots from three to four weeks before they are wanted of such varieties as you name, they will be all right. Better give them the longer period, so as to discount any spells of dark weather, when they would make slow headway. The varieties named all succeed well under the same treatment. C. W.

GERANIUMS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

What kind of fertilizer is best to use to make geraniums bloom for Memorial day? H. G. N.

If you have still some geraniums to repot for Memorial day, use a 5-inch pot of fine bone to each barrowload of loam. A little spent hotbed manure may also be used with advantage, but cow manure promotes too strong a leaf growth at the expense of flower, as does the use of the majority of chemicals.

If your plants are all potted and well rooted, give them an airy, sunny house. Run a little on the dry side at the roots. A light topdressing with Clay's fertilizer or Bon Arbor, or a little of either diluted in water, I have found to be excellent fertilizers. In case the plants have a starved appearance, try the effects of an occasional watering with weak nitrate of soda water or either of the aforementioned chemicals. Cow manure water promotes the growth of leaves at the expense of flowers. C. W.

TREATMENT FOR PLANTS.

I am enclosing some geranium leaves, which appear upon an apparently healthy plant, and I have been unable to find the cause. Will you kindly tell me what it is, also the remedy? C. W. A.

This trouble appears to be fairly common at present, as numerous inquiries similar to yours are being received. The cause of the trouble I cannot give without knowing somewhat of cultural conditions. Give your plants a light, sunny house. Let them dry out well between waterings and watering them overhead, also keep the atmosphere on the dry side. Keep them in a temperature not exceeding 50 degrees at night. Keep the plants spread out to let light and sun get in among them, and remove all dead or diseased foliage. I have not found spraying of any benefit for this leaf blight, but care in watering, cleanliness above and below the benches, and the avoiding of anything approaching a close, stagnant atmosphere, should prevent its spread. Carefully pick over affected plants; if only a few are badly affected, throw them out. C. W.

KILLING WEEDS.

Theodore Wirth uses a preparation of his own manufacture for killing weeds in roads and walks. In the bulletin of the American Association of Park Superintendents he gives the formula, as follows:

"Take three gallons of water and place in kettle over fire and when warm put in two pounds of soda. Let it come to the boiling point and then cool off to about 180 degrees; then add one pound white arsenic; boil twenty minutes, stirring with a long stick frequently; when cool add seven gallons of water to the above quantities. The utensils must not be used for any other purpose, on account of the arsenic. Be careful not to inhale fumes while boiling. The cost of material is about one cent per gallon.

"I use one of our regular sprinkling carts holding 500 gallons, on which I have mounted a small double action pump, using ½-inch hose and a Seneca nozzle. With this fine spray we save a large amount of material and are enabled to direct the spray where wanted, covering the ground thoroughly and forcing the liquid into the ground. It is best to apply after a rain, or if the ground is dry, to sprinkle two or three hours before applying, as the killer enters more easily and deeper than in dry ground. To protect the grass borders, it is well to have one man pull a board ten to twelve inches wide and ten or more feet long along the border as the man with the nozzle advances, in order to keep the fine spray off the grass.

"If this work is done thoroughly in the first part of the season there will be no weeds seen all the rest of the season. If properly handled one gallon will cover six to eight square yards.

"I am writing this to induce others who have not tried weed killers to make a trial and benefit by it."

VIOLETS LIGHT COLORED.

Kindly tell the cause of so many double violets with white centers, which have to be thrown away? The variety is Campbell. I was never troubled this way before. W. C. P.

Quite a number of growers are complaining of this same trouble with Campbell violets this season. The real reason is difficult to explain. It may be caused by some inherent weakness in your stock. If this shows any signs of running out, I would advise an infusion of new blood from a reliable source. Have you used hydrocyanic acid gas for fumigating purposes? I have had several complaints that this, while effective in controlling aphis and other pests, has taken color from the flowers. After the early part of March a light shade on the glass will help to keep color in your flowers. Strong feeding will ruin the color of violets and other flowers. Sheep manure and soot makes a safe stimulant, either in liquid form or as a topdressing. C. W.

PRINCESS OF WALES.

Will you kindly inform me if I can grow the Princess of Wales violet from cuttings started in flats and set out in the house, the same as the double violet is grown, or is it necessary to grow them in the field? Any information will be gladly received. F. M. B.

Unlike the doubles, the singles will not give satisfaction if kept under glass. They will grow and make immense plants, but flowers are practically nil. Plant them in the field in rows two feet apart. Keep well cultivated all summer. Cut off runners, and do not house before October. If the plants have a little frost on two or three occasions before housing, to check their leaf growth, they will do all the better. C. W.

WORCESTER, MASS.

The Aitken Co., conducting a flower business in Worcester and Springfield, the local store being at 424 Main street, has been incorporated under Massachusetts laws with a capitalization of $5,000, the par value of the stock being $100.

The officers are Carl S. Meachan, president, and Mark Aitken, treasurer.

The capital stock has been paid for in $2,000 cash and $3,000 worth of merchandise.

CUTTINGS FAIL TO ROOT.

Can you advise me as to why I am unable to root cuttings of Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress? I am using a north side bench, under which there are five 1½-inch hot water pipes. The front of the bench is boarded up to within two inches of the bottom and both ends are boarded up. I have no trouble in rooting White Perfection in the same bench in three to four weeks. Enchantress and Lawson do not seem to make any roots at all. All the plants were forced pretty heavily until about six weeks ago, when I reduced the temperature from about 55 to 50 degrees. L. L. W.

Your letter does not disclose any reason why you should be unable to root Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress cuttings. If you are rooting White Perfection without any considerable loss of cuttings, you ought to root the other two. White Perfection is one of the easiest varieties to root; in fact, we count on rooting just about 100 per cent out of every batch we put in. While the Enchantress varieties are not quite as dependable, yet they are counted among the easy ones. Lawson, too, is rather an easy one to root, though it does not, as a rule, come out of the sand as nice as the others. That is because the roots grow very bushy and break off easily.

The change in temperature should not make that much difference, though the higher temperature would likely cause the cuttings to be soft and less easy to root. Cool growing plants always give the best cuttings. A. F. J. B.

RUST ON ROOTED CUTTINGS.

Will you kindly tell me what causes the rust on the carnation leaf enclosed? The stock so affected consists of rooted cuttings, about three inches apart in a bed. Also tell me what to do to prevent the trouble. G. E. C.

Some varieties which are troubled very little with rust on the flowering plants are frequently attacked by it in the cutting bench, or while the young plants are becoming established after they are taken from the sand. The reason for this is that in the propagating houses the atmospheric conditions which must be maintained to prevent wilting are also conducive to the development of rust and kindred diseases. Then, too, the cuttings or young plants are naturally in a weakened condition until they become well established in the soil, and are less able to resist disease. Estelle, Cardinal and Jubilee were always difficult to get out of the sand entirely free from rust. Some growers have trouble with Victory. This variety will frequently come out of the sand clean, but will take rust badly before the young plants get under way properly. After it gets a good start, it soon outgrows the trouble.

Young plants so diseased should be watered carefully, only on bright days, and early enough so they will dry off before night. Pick off all the rusty leaves and keep them dusted with Grape Dust or lime and sulphur. The former is preferable, because it not only contains the latter two, but also other fungus-destroying agents. A. F. J. B.

USED OLD SOIL.

N. Greivelding, at Merrill, Wis., is one of those growers who does not believe it necessary to renew the soil in his benches every year. Last fall the REVIEW printed an illustration of a house of chrysanthemums which were in soil two years on the benches. The crop was entirely satisfactory to Mr. Greivelding. In the illustration in the current issue one of his houses of carnations is shown. This soil has been on the benches three years. Of it Mr. Greivelding says:

"You see by the picture that the carnations have stems enough to satisfy anyone; the carnations are about three inches higher than the yardstick standing in one of the plants. I have measured some of the flowers, which are close to four inches across. Most growers put in new soil each season and think they cannot grow carnations any other way; they would not plant a second year in the same soil, but I shall not throw out this soil this summer. You will note that I have no benches, all solid beds a foot high for the carnations, and the same for chrysanthemums.

"I recently noted someone asking if gladiolus bulbs could be forced two years in the greenhouses, and the answer was that it would not pay. I had some that were flowered inside last summer for the second time and were just as good as for the first time. After flowering, I dried them off and planted the same corms in again this year. They now are about ten inches high and doing nicely. The variety is America. I think those who do not succeed keep them too warm. I plant in soil which is three years old on all the beds, and planting them the latter part of January, I get them in bloom for Decoration day, when I get 25 cents a spike for them."

CARNATIONS IN ENGLAND.

The rapid progress which the carnation has made in the few years since it was taken up in England is nowhere better shown than in the special carnation catalogue recently issued by Hugh Low & Co., who were among the first of the English growers to import varieties from America. They now have something over an acre of glass in carnations and propagate over a million young plants each year. The catalogue lists practically all the varieties in general cultivation in America, with some few raised elsewhere. Low & Co. have also turned their attention toward hybridizing and have a set of four new varieties raised from crosses of the American sorts. Chief of these is Black Chief, a seedling from The President crossed with Harlowarden, which it is said they are thinking of disseminating in America next season. The color is deep, velvety crimson. Malmaisons are having an exceptional sale in Great Britain. Low & Co. recommend the American perpetual-flowering carnations as summer bedding plants for use in England. They say: "We have found that the best results are obtained from plants in 5-inch pots, which have been wintered in a cool frame and, at the time of planting, are electing to flower. Plants which have flowered during the winter in medium-sized pots will also produce excellent results. May is the best month to plant. Almost any well-worked soil is suitable. Allow six to nine inches between the plants and keep the soil well cultivated during hot weather."

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Concrete Benches Built by Walter S. Hall, Osage, Ia.

HALL'S CONCRETE BENCH.

How thoroughly the trade is interested in the subject of permanent bench construction is shown in the frequency with which someone comes forward with a new idea for the use of concrete. Louis Wittbold, of Chicago, was one of the pioneers in this line, and he favors the one-piece bench. Having perfected a method for the economical construction of a one-piece bench, he patented the molds he employs, and these are now in use all over the United States. There is no system of sectional construction which has come into general use, most of the sectional methods being the result of experiment by growers who simply were looking for something to solve their individual problems. Such a one is that shown in the accompanying illustrations, which has just come to light in Iowa.

This bench is built by Walter S. Hall, at Osage, Ia. One of the pictures shows a new house, just completed, in which the bench is just being finished. He is putting in two more houses of the same size, using the concrete blocks as shown stacked up in the other illustration.

Mr. Hall makes the blocks at odd moments during the winter, each section being one foot wide and as long as is necessary for the width of the bench desired. The bench in the center of the house, as shown, is four feet wide. The bench consists of posts, runners and crosspieces. The sides and bottom are in one piece, and made in one operation. Mr. Hall spent a year or more in experimenting on this bench, and thinks his method now so perfect that he has applied for a patent, both on the machine and on the blocks. He finds the cost of the cement and gravel so small an item that he prefers to make his bench strong enough to stand without reinforcement, and no wire net or iron rods are used. The bottom is perforated to supply any desired amount of drainage, although most growers who use sectional benches consider the cracks between the sections supply all that is needed. The bench retains its position through the locking of the parts and the weight of bench and stock. He has found the bench excellently adapted to the needs of a general line of stock, one of the benches in the picture being planted to lettuce and the other containing carnation cuttings.

While it doubtless will be some years before concrete benches come into general use, still it is only a question of time when concrete will supplant pecky cypress, just as pecky cypress has taken the place of hemlock for this purpose. A pecky cypress bench will last several times as long as a hemlock bench will stand under the severe conditions imposed in a greenhouse, but when cement is used the bench becomes the most enduring, instead of the shortest-lived feature of the house.

OBITUARY.

Edward Gill.

By the death of Edward Gill, which occurred March 25 at his beautiful home, Bellamount Place, Berkeley, Cal., the horticultural fraternity of the Pacific coast loses one of its brightest members. For almost half a century he had been actively employed in the direction of his large nursery interests, and at the time of his death he had over 100 acres devoted to hardy ornamental stock. He had long made a specialty of roses, and over forty acres were devoted exclusively to this portion of his business. His grounds at Berkeley for years have been the Mecca for all visiting nurserymen from various parts of the country.

Edward Gill emigrated to California from New Jersey in 1863 and commenced at that early time to build up a business, which at the time of his death was one of the largest on the coast. His fame, however, chiefly rests on his knowledge of roses, and various trips to eastern states and to Europe kept him in touch with all the leading firms in that line and made his own collection by far the most complete on the Pacific coast.

He held many medals and certificates from various exhibitions and societies, and his knowledge of horticultural subjects, extending over almost half a century, made him a mine of information from the earliest times on the growth and development of his chosen profession.

After being happily wedded for almost forty years, Mr. Gill lost his wife in November, 1907, and ever since that time he had been in failing health. Essentially a home-loving man, he erected a beautiful residence and surrounded it with a wealth of magnificent growths, so that it soon became one of the show places of Berkeley, Cal. He leaves a family consisting of two sons and two daughters, all of whom were at the bedside when the end came. Mr. Gill leaves a host of friends to mourn his loss. He was a gentleman of the old school, kind, courteous and honorable.

CARNATIONS

CUTTINGS FAIL TO ROOT.

Can you advise me as to why I am unable to root cuttings of Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress? I am using a north side bench, under which there are five 1½-inch hot water pipes. The front of the bench is boarded up to within two inches of the bottom and both ends are boarded up. I have no trouble in rooting White Perfection in the same bench in three to four weeks. Enchantress and Lawson do not seem to make any roots at all. All the plants were forced pretty heavily until about six weeks ago, when I reduced the temperature from about 55 to 50 degrees. L. L. W.

Your letter does not disclose any reason why you should be unable to root Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress cuttings. If you are rooting White Perfection without any considerable loss of cuttings, you ought to root the other two. White Perfection is one of the easiest varieties to root; in fact, we count on rooting just about 100 per cent out of every batch we put in. While the Enchantress varieties are not quite as dependable, yet they are counted among the easy ones. Lawson, too, is rather an easy one to root, though it does not, as a rule, come out of the sand as nice as the others. That is because the roots grow very bushy and break off easily.

The change in temperature should not make that much difference, though the higher temperature would likely cause the cuttings to be soft and less easy to root. Cool growing plants always give the best cuttings. A. F. J. B.

RUST ON ROOTED CUTTINGS.

Will you kindly tell me what causes the rust on the carnation leaf enclosed? The stock so affected consists of rooted cuttings, about three inches apart in a bed. Also tell me what to do to prevent the trouble. G. E. C.

Some varieties which are troubled very little with rust on the flowering plants are frequently attacked by it in the cutting bench, or while the young plants are becoming established after they are taken from the sand. The reason for this is that in the propagating houses the atmospheric conditions which must be maintained to prevent wilting are also conducive to the development of rust and kindred diseases. Then, too, the cuttings or young plants are naturally in a weakened condition until they become well established in the soil, and are less able to resist disease. Estelle, Cardinal and Jubilee were always difficult to get out of the sand entirely free from rust. Some growers have trouble with Victory. This variety will frequently come out of the sand clean, but will take rust badly before the young plants get under way properly. After it gets a good start, it soon outgrows the trouble.

Young plants so diseased should be watered carefully, only on bright days, and early enough so they will dry off before night. Pick off all the rusty leaves and keep them dusted with Grape Dust or lime and sulphur. The former is preferable, because it not only contains the latter two, but also other fungus destroying agents. A. F. J. B.

USED OLD SOIL.

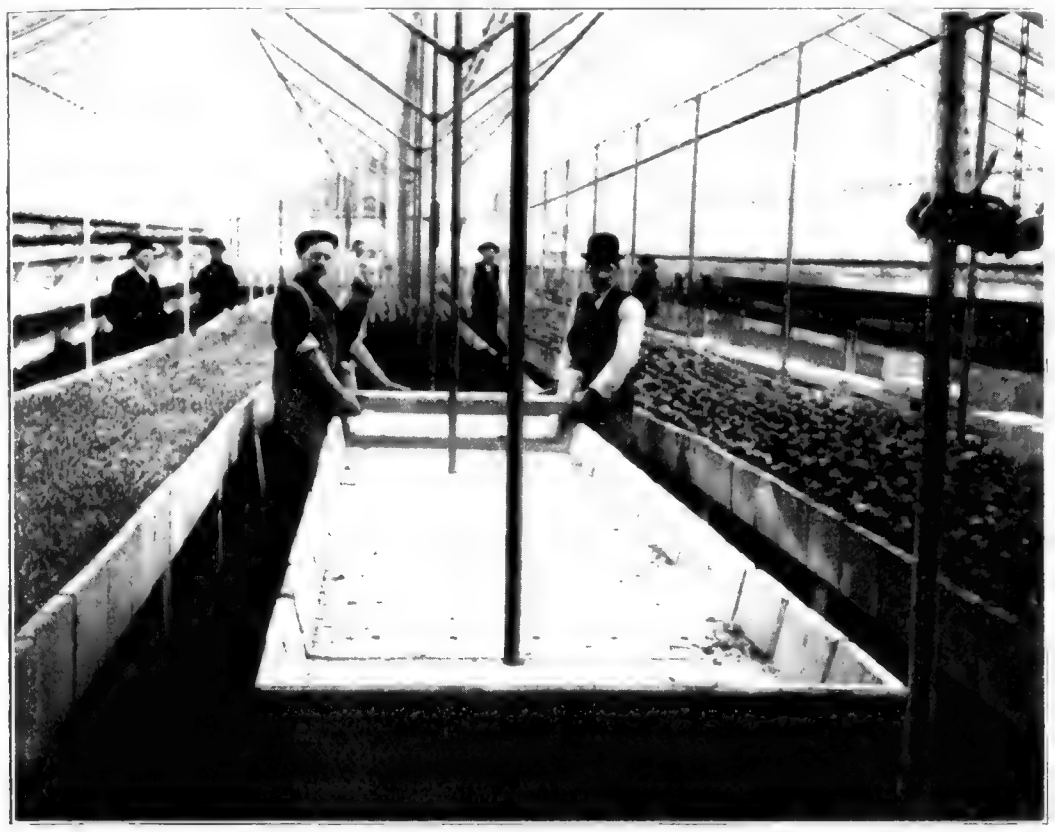
N. Greivelding, at Merrill, Wis., is one of those growers who does not believe it necessary to renew the soil in his benches every year. Last fall the REVIEW printed an illustration of a house of chrysanthemums which were in soil two years on the benches. The crop was entirely satisfactory to Mr. Greivelding. In the illustration in the current issue one of his houses of carnations is shown. This soil has been on the benches three years. Of it Mr. Greivelding says:

"You see by the picture that the carnations have stems enough to satisfy anyone; the carnations are about three inches higher than the yardstick standing in one of the plants. I have measured some of the flowers, which are close to four inches across. Most growers put in new soil each season and think they cannot grow carnations any other way; they would not plant a second year in the same soil, but I shall not throw out this soil this summer. You will note that I have no benches, all solid beds a foot high for the carnations, and the same for chrysanthemums.

"I recently noted someone asking if gladiolus bulbs could be forced two years in the greenhouses, and the answer was that it would not pay. I had some that were flowered inside last summer for the second time and were just as good as for the first time. After flowering, I dried them off and planted the same corms in again this year. They now are about ten inches high and doing nicely. The variety is America. I think those who do not succeed keep them too warm. I plant in soil which is three years old on all the beds, and planting them the latter part of January, I get them in bloom for Decoration day, when I get 25 cents a spike for them."

CARNATIONS IN ENGLAND.

The rapid progress which the carnation has made in the few years since it was taken up in England is nowhere better shown than in the special carnation catalogue recently issued by Hugh Low & Co., who were among the first of the English growers to import varieties from America. They now have something over an acre of glass in carnations and propagate over a million young plants each year. The catalogue lists practically all the varieties in general cultivation in America, with some few raised elsewhere. Low & Co. have also turned their attention toward hybridizing and have a set of four new varieties raised from crosses of the American sorts. Chief of these is Black Chief, a seedling from The President crossed with Harlowarden, which it is said they are thinking of disseminating in America next season. The color is deep, velvety crimson. Malmaisons are having an exceptional sale in Great Britain. Low & Co. recommend the American perpetual-flowering carnations as summer bedding plants for use in England. They say: "We have found that the best results are obtained from plants in 5-inch pots, which have been wintered in a cool frame and, at the time of planting, are electing to flower. Plants which have flowered during the winter in medium-sized pots will also produce excellent results. May is the best month to plant. Almost any well-worked soil is suitable. Allow six to nine inches between the plants and keep the soil well cultivated during hot weather."



AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Concrete Benches Built by Walter S. Hall, Osage, Ia.

HALL'S CONCRETE BENCH.

How thoroughly the trade is interested in the subject of permanent bench construction is shown in the frequency with which someone comes forward with a new idea for the use of concrete. Louis Wittbold, of Chicago, was one of the pioneers in this line, and he favors the one-piece bench. Having perfected a method for the economical construction of a one-piece bench, he patented the molds he employs, and these are now in use all over the United States. There is no system of sectional construction which has come into general use, most of the sectional methods being the result of experiment by growers who simply were looking for something to solve their individual problems. Such a one is that shown in the accompanying illustrations, which has just come to light in Iowa.

This bench is built by Walter S. Hall, at Osage, Ia. One of the pictures shows a new house, just completed, in which the bench is just being finished. He is putting in two more houses of the same size, using the concrete blocks as shown stacked up in the other illustration.

Mr. Hall makes the blocks at odd moments during the winter, each section being one foot wide and as long as is necessary for the width of the bench desired. The bench in the center of the house, as shown, is four feet wide. The bench consists of posts, runners and crosspieces. The sides and bottom are in one piece, and made in one operation. Mr. Hall spent a year or more in experimenting on this bench, and thinks his method now so perfect that he has applied for a patent, both on the machine and on the blocks. He finds the cost of the cement and gravel so small an item that he prefers to make his bench strong enough to stand without reinforcement, and no wire net or iron rods are used. The bottom is perforated to supply any desired amount of drainage, although most growers who use sectional benches consider the cracks between the sections supply all that is needed. The bench retains its position through the locking of the parts and the weight of bench and stock. He has found the bench excellently adapted to the needs of a general line of stock, one of the benches in the picture being planted to lettuce and the other containing carnation cuttings.

While it doubtless will be some years before concrete benches come into general use, still it is only a question of time when concrete will supplant pecky cypress, just as pecky cypress has taken the place of hemlock for this purpose. A pecky cypress bench will last several times as long as a hemlock bench will stand under the severe conditions imposed in a greenhouse, but when cement is used the bench becomes the most enduring, instead of the shortest-lived feature of the house.

OBITUARY.

Edward Gill.

By the death of Edward Gill, which occurred March 25 at his beautiful home, Bellamount Place, Berkeley, Cal., the horticultural fraternity of the Pacific coast loses one of its brightest members. For almost half a century he had been actively employed in the direction of his large nursery interests, and at the time of his death he had over 100 acres devoted to hardy ornamental stock. He had long made a specialty of roses, and over forty acres were devoted exclusively to this portion of his business. His grounds at Berkeley for years have been the Mecca for all visiting nurserymen from various parts of the country.

Edward Gill emigrated to California from New Jersey in 1863 and commenced at that early time to build up a business, which at the time of his death was one of the largest on the coast. His fame, however, chiefly rests on his knowledge of roses, and various trips to eastern states and to Europe kept him in touch with all the leading firms in that line and made his own collection by far the most complete on the Pacific coast.

He held many medals and certificates from various exhibitions and societies, and his knowledge of horticultural subjects, extending over almost half a century, made him a mine of information from the earliest times on the growth and development of his chosen profession.

After being happily wedded for almost forty years, Mr. Gill lost his wife in November, 1907, and ever since that time he had been in failing health. Essentially a home-loving man, he erected a beautiful residence and surrounded it with a wealth of magnificent growths, so that it soon became one of the show places of Berkeley, Cal. He leaves a family consisting of two sons and two daughters, all of whom were at the bedside when the end came. Mr. Gill leaves a host of friends to mourn his loss. He was a gentleman of the old school, kind, courteous and honorable.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 17 to 20, 1909.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

IN March the REVIEW provided for its readers 380 pages of matter, more than ever before were printed in four consecutive issues.

AND now the French growers have organized a special society for the carnation. Its title is La Société Nationale des Œillettistes. The general secretary is M. Jules Grec, of Antibes.

THE Gardeners' Chronicle, London, prints a picture of a range of seven houses, each 12x300 feet, that recently collapsed utterly under the weight of snow. It was W. Wood's place at Dartford Heath.

W. J. PALMER & SON, Buffalo, N. Y., referring to the item on page 18 of last week's REVIEW noting the illustrations of their bridal bouquets in the April Ladies' Home Journal, say they also provided the photograph from which the cover design of the Journal was prepared.

THIS week's set of notices for the general press, sent out by the National Council of Horticulture, are entitled "Sweet Peas and Other Good Annuals," "How to Select Shrubs," and "What to Plant in April," the latter referring to vegetable seeds. Many florists and nurserymen arrange with their local papers to advertise the stock referred to in these press notices in the same issue in which the articles appear. If your local paper does not receive the notices, write J. H. Burdett, 1720 West One Hundred and Fourth place, Chicago.

WILL SELL OUT.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

Please discontinue our classified advertisement. Last week's issue sold 8,800 plants and as we had only about 20,000 we care to sell, we think we will be liable to dispose of the balance on the orders that will still be coming along.

WARRICK BROS.

Washington, Pa., March 27, 1909.

HARDLY a day passes that the REVIEW does not receive a perfectly proper request for information from someone who writes on plain paper and signs only initials. No one cares to answer anonymous questions, and of course where the initials do not correspond with those of someone on our mailing list at that postoffice there is nothing to do but put the query in the waste-basket. Full names never are used in the REVIEW in replying to a question, but that we shall know the identity of the one who asks the question is due us both as a matter of courtesy and as a guaranty of good faith.

CLOTH FOR COLDFRAME.

The REVIEW has received the following inquiry: "Will you kindly send me the addresses of firms that furnish cloth that is prepared to be used on coldframes? The cloth is oiled or waxed and is used in the place of glass."

If any reader knows of the manufacturer of such an article the REVIEW would be glad to hear the address.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

Business already is good with the plantsmen who grow spring stock. A. B. Reimers, of the Mosbæk Greenhouse Co., writes as follows:

"We have been studying all the week what we should advertise specially in the Easter Number, and are at a loss what to make special mention of. Either your paper is doing exceptionally fine work, or this is an unusual season, for we are already rushed with orders and it is hard for us to keep the supply up to the demand. It is four times as easy to sell a dollar's worth of plants this year as it was last, and from all quarters we hear that the stocks in retailers' hands have been unusually low, and the same way with wholesalers."

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market suffered an attack of indigestion last week, but relief came on Friday in the shape of an unusually heavy run of large orders from the special sales people. There were dozens of buyers who took from 500 to 5,000 roses, or from 1,000 to 10,000 carnations. The prices were low compared to rates for the preceding fortnight, but were good considering the accumulation of stock. This week there has been a relapse, one which may be described as acute, although everyone hopes it is not to become chronic. Practically everything is piling up and the short and distasteful word glut is almost the only one which can be used to describe the present condition.

It always is noticeable that when crops come on in the Chicago market, they also come on with those who produce part of their own supplies, or who get part at home, and who thereupon cancel their standing orders in this market. A large number of people have regular orders here. By regular they apparently mean orders which are to be shipped regularly as long as they want the stock and to be canceled at pleasure, in spite of the fact that the cancellation always comes when the wholesaler is most anxious that the shipment should go out. Every now and then it happens that the cancellation comes in by wire after the box is packed and entered in the express book. But all the wholesaler has to do is to look pleas-

LILIES —FOR— Easter

A Splendid Lot of Longiflorum Giganteum

THIS is the same stock we have handled each Easter for the last six years—from the same grower and handled in the same way (packed at the greenhouses for all early orders). This stock has given perfect satisfaction in previous years and it will this year, for, if anything, the Lilies are better than usual.

Plenty Lilies for Immediate Delivery. Fine, long-stemmed stock, $2.00 per dozen; $15.00 per 100

Roses--Beauties

Our Beauties are in crop just in time for the Easter business. No order too large for us to fill—with the best Beauties on this market. Maid, Killarney, Richmond and Bride are extra fine. Our supply is large and we can meet any requirements. Fancy long stock, and fine heads on the shorter stems.

Carnations

We have (now and all the time) the largest lot of strictly first-class Carnations on this market. We can meet your Easter wants to your entire satisfaction. Order by the hundred or the thousand—you get what you want.

Sweet Peas

Nothing in the market to compare with our Fancy grade. Can supply splendid, long-stemmed Pink, Lavender and White in any quantity for Easter. We are doing a big business in these, both local and shipping, because they never fail to please.

Plenty Peas for immediate shipment, fresh picked each afternoon for evening shipments.

Violets

All season long we have handled the cream of the Violets, both double and single, coming to this market. From present indications they will be finer than ever at Easter.

Bulb Stock

Bulb stock is not being grown so largely as last year and retailers will find it will sell well at Easter. We can supply first-class flowers of anything wanted in Bulb Stock.

Fancy Ferns

We have the best Ferns in this market. Try them and confirm what other buyers say. Headquarters for all green goods.

ant—and be sure to ship regular orders in full when stock is on the short side.

The spring rose crops seem to be on. The production of Beauties has increased greatly and all other roses are coming in heavily. This market never had finer roses than at present. The weather has been favorable—cool, with a fair amount of sun—and Maid, Bride and Richmond are in splendid shape. Killarney continues to be the most popular rose, though with some growers the color is not all that is to be desired. Maid generally has good color. Richmond has come into crop again and is rather more abundant than the other sorts.

The growers, who said there was nothing in sight in the carnation houses, have found Old Sol could see flowers where the owners of the houses could not. The increase in the cut of carnations has been fully as great as in any other line of stock. The receipts last week were so far ahead of regular requirements that it would have been impossible to clean up had it not been for the cheap sales Friday and Saturday morning, that took the accumulation. Carnations, as well as roses, are of splendid quality and exceptionally good value at present prices. The stock is accumulating again this week, so that April 2 will again be bargain day.

Callas have come in so heavily that the market is oversupplied, and Easter lilies also are abundant. The receipts of bulbous flowers are not anywhere near so great as a year ago, but tulips, daffodils and outdoor bulbous flowers are so plentiful they can only be sold at cheap prices. Valley is going to waste in some houses.

Violets are approaching the end of the season. The receipts of eastern stock are lighter and the local singles are becoming small. Sweet peas also are rather less abundant than they were, although they never were finer and there still are enough so prices are not high. Mignonette is hard to sell. Daisies are coming in more plentifully.

Smilax is decidedly on the short side. Other greens are fairly abundant. The price of ferns will move up another notch within a few days.

Easter Prospects.

The extent of the supply and the strength of the Easter demand really depend upon the weather of the next seven days, but the wholesalers have nearly all come to the belief that there will be an abundance of stock. Quality will be as good as the trade ever saw for the Easter festival.

The market is now heavily supplied and the same state prevails throughout the country. If weather conditions continue normal, no change is to be expected, but too hot weather will rush the stock in and dark, cold days will hold it back. An increased supply means a lessened demand, and a decreased supply means a doubling up of orders, so there you are.

Roses hardly can fail to be abundant and there will doubtless be enough carnations, so that everyone who will pay a seasonable price can get all the good stock wanted. Lilies will be not different from the usual.

Of other items there will be an ample supply.

Another Ladies' Night.

The Chicago Florists' Club will entertain the ladies at a cinch party at the Grand Pacific hotel, Clark street and Jackson boulevard, at 8:15 Friday evening, April 2. Refreshments will be served and prizes awarded the winners. The ladies have received invitations which conclude: "Sure, bring your husband."

The regular club meeting at the Union comes April 1.

Various Notes.

Peter Reinberg and Wm. A. Peterson are leading the fight of the property owners out Lincoln avenue who want the Drainage Board to bridge the proposed north channel at Lincoln avenue, instead of at Peterson avenue, as planned. Lincoln avenue is a main traveled road and hundreds of teams would have to make a detour if the bridge were not on that thoroughfare.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., calls attention to a condition which becomes more and more noticeable as time goes on. He says that practically all the buyers have a price limit for each kind of stock, and that they simply let that line of stock alone when its price goes above their limit. The point is that except for special orders the buyers are gradually but steadily lowering the limit.

H. Bauske is in hopes of getting an early settlement from the Peoples Gas Co. for the loss in his rose houses, which resulted from a leak in the gas main in the street. John Lang met with a similar loss two years ago, but could not get a settlement and started suit, from which nothing resulted.

The Market.

Easter is in the air and everything points to a big business. Stock is being rounded into shape and the only thing that the growers are having trouble with is the lilies. The black-stemmed ones seem to eat up more heat and do less growing than is pleasing to the owners. From the outlook, lilies will be scarce.

Trade has been rather quiet for ten days.

Arthur Beyers, formerly manager for one of W. J. Palmer's stores, has resigned his position and will start in business under his own name. It was his intention to start at once, but some trouble with the tenant has prevented his opening as soon as expected. A. Fisher has taken the new position at the Palmer store.

The event of the week was the opening of the new flower store by J. Benson Stafford. It is by far the most elaborate in the city, and no expense was spared in making it stylish in every detail. The interior decorations are carried out to perfection. On either side the walls are colored in pale blue, with green lattice work, and above pergolas extend the length of the store proper. THE MARKET

For Easter we expect to have a large stock of cut flowers in great variety and in all grades to fill the requirements of all sorts of buyers. The prospects are for a good cut of everything in season; in fact, the indications are for a very satisfactory market, with hardly an oversupply or shortage in any particular line that we can think of.

Lilies are reported somewhat scarce, but we have arranged for more than we have ever handled at a holiday. Unless the demand is unusual, we expect to have enough of them to fill all orders. We advise ordering early.

We will have double violets for Easter — in fact, in most any quantity — which is a certainty, but the quality of the violets is dependent entirely on the conditions of the weather. If it continues cool between now and Easter, violets should be satisfactory stock. We will get them to you as fresh as it is possible to have them.

In roses, carnations and miscellaneous stock, if we judge the market correctly, we look for a good supply, but hardly in excess of the demand.

For quotations on cut flowers, everything in season for Easter, and interesting remarks about market conditions, etc.,

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Business is quiet. There has been a lull in the demand for cut flowers, with prospects that extreme activity will be transferred to plants until just before Easter. There is no marked change in the conditions governing the cut flower market beyond a let-up in the demand indicated in the opening sentence. There is plenty of business going at fair prices; business, however, without the snap characterizing the earlier weeks of Lent.

The increase in the supply of Kaiserins and the appearance of the first Jacqs are the only changes in the rose market. Carnations seem a bit lighter in supply. The preference for white over colors no longer exists. The single violets are petering out, with probability that we shall depend on the frames for available stock for Easter. Double violets, both from the Hudson river and Hightstown, continue fine, with local growers also sending in excellent stock. Home-grown daffodils have shortened materially, the growers having been too badly burned by the competition with the southern stock to risk cutting much so late in the season. Daffodils from Virginia are not plentiful as yet, though fair sized shipments are arriving. Lilies are in large supply in all the varieties. Southern sprays of Asparagus plumosus are much more plentiful than locally grown stock. The shipping demand is fair.

Indications for Easter.

The supply of Easter lilies will be smaller next week than it was at this time last year. The ruling price for good stock will be 12 cents for each flower and well developed bud. Some are being sold at 10 cents, and some select stock will bring 15 cents. The supply of well-grown stock of all the standard varieties of Easter plants is larger and finer than ever before. There is no indication of scarcity in anything, barring possibly lilies. The supply of cut flowers coming into this market is an uncertain quantity, so much depending on the weather. It is probable that there will be plenty of all varieties at moderate prices. Roses are not expected to advance much, except on fancy stock. Carnations, sweet peas and violets are expected to be in fine condition, with prices ruling a little higher than present quotations. Gardenias will be fairly plentiful. An abundance of greens seems improbable.

A Place of Progress.

It is always a pleasure to visit Joseph Heacock in the greenhouses of his company, because one always sees good stock and progressive ideas carried into effect. The impression left by a visit to Mr. Heacock a few days ago is that his success is due to the fact that he is just as progressive today as he was years ago. A small house not well adapted for growing everything has been eliminated, and with it a roadway, and in their place a large, light house has been built, adding 7,000 square feet of glass to the company's already large area. The palms, kentias chiefly, are in tiptop condition; a careful inspection of the sizes shows that the buyers appreciate merit and are making inroads into the large, medium and small sizes without distinction. The plants have grown nicely since their last shift, and are now ready for distribution.

The feature of the cut flower houses was the range of Dorothy Gordon carnations, a picture in itself. The Killarneys were looking well, full of those vigorous red shoots that give pleasure to the true rose lover. The orchids are becoming an important element at Wyncote. Cattleya Schrœderiana was in bloom; twenty cases

The Features at Riverton.

The establishment of Henry A. Dreer, at Riverton, N. J., has grown to such vast proportions as to baffle detailed description of the whole place. The only way in which the ground can be covered intelligently, without becoming wearisome, is to take a bird's-eye view of one or two departments at a time. The most interesting departments in this wonderful place at present are the hardy roses and the perennials.

Experience has taught the powers that be at Riverton that hardy roses cannot be successfully carried over winter in frames; the percentage of winter-killed stock destroys the profit. The bulk of the stock is therefore potted up during the winter in fives and sixes, and placed in a range of glass, 150x175 feet, devoted exclusively to this purpose. This range is kept at a temperature a little above freezing in late winter. The temperature is allowed to increase on sunny days and as the spring advances, care being taken to give plenty of air at the same time. The stock is all imported, grafted on Manetti, from England and Ireland. Jacqueminot, Magna Charta, Laing, Luizet, Kaiserin, Killarney, Hermosa, Agrippina, Carnot and La France are ranged side by side with the more modern Harry Kirk and Mildred Grant. The effect of this vast sea of roses just coming into bud is impressive.

To show that the Dreer Co. is appreciated, it is only necessary to say that the well-known amateur and professional rosarians come or send here from all over the country asking for plans of rose beds and rose borders requiring hundreds and sometimes thousands of many varieties. These orders are picked out and set by themselves until the proper time arrives for shipping. This time is gauged by the earliness or lateness of spring in the particular locality for which they are destined. Among the varieties noted were some of the best known Dickson introductions, for which, judging from the tags, there was a lively demand. The trend of public sentiment is toward the hybrid tea classes, as giving the best satisfaction.

There were frames filled with hardy roses, outside plants that had not been admitted to the immense range just described, probably through lack of room. These had wintered well this year, owing possibly to the season, undoubtedly assisted by the original method of covering, the variegated pennisetum tops being used for protection. "What if they take fire?" an expert said; but they did not, and an English grower admired the covering so much that he asked whether the pennisetum was grown especially to use the tops to form protection for roses!

I have waxed so enthusiastic over the roses that little space is left me to describe the hardy perennials. I must, however, stop to tell how frame after frame appeared, filled with delphiniums, campanulas, centaureas and so on—ad infinitum, it seems to me, looking down the long rows just starting into vigorous growth. It takes judgment to handle these perennials; the chiefs at Riverton spend anxious moments deciding when the weather conditions will permit removing the protection in order that the stock may be properly hardened. These potted plants mark an epoch in the growing of perennials. The old-time plan of digging them out of the ground or from frames, where they had been placed during the winter, has been superseded by this more modern practice, which gives the planter in some distant town or state something on which he can depend when planning landscape effects. NEW YORK.

The Market.

From beginning to end of last week the tendency of prices was downward. The bottom seemed to be reached Friday, and even Saturday's demand failed to lift the clouds. Beauties fell to 20 cents for the best and Bride and Maid to 5 cents. It is the old story of other years repeated. Prices of all kinds of roses are low. Wagon-loads of boxes went to Brooklyn during the week, where the retail price was 75 cents a dozen, and the best carnations were offered in the windows at 50 cents. Split these prices in two and you can easily decide at what figure the flowers were sold at wholesale.

Violets are down to 35 cents for the selects, and most of the stock goes to the street men at $1 to $1.50 per thousand. There were flower gardens last week at every street corner. These merchants now handle valley, roses and daffodils, as well as violets, and it is not hard to predict where the wholesale cut flower market would go without their patronage.

Orchids are abundant, but prices hold firm, and will until after Easter. There will be a great shipping demand. Lilies are already advancing; 12 cents probably will be the top for Easter. One of the quarter-century experts prophesies 30 cents for Beauties, 10 cents for Maids and 75 cents for violets as probable tops for the holiday. There will be plenty of violets, the Rhinebeck growers tell us. Of bulbous stock there is enough, and to spare. Trailing arbutus and lilac are already here.

Everything looks encouraging for a record Easter. Flowering plants were never more numerous, more perfect, or more reasonable, and the retail stores are buying freely.

Various Notes.

The florists' supply houses never were so busy. The ribbon men announce the largest trade they have ever enjoyed.

store, with many decorations, and at his artistic store on Broadway.

Many of the wholesalers are handling choice plants for Easter. Ford Bros. have their usual exhibit of giant daisies.

Anton Schultheis is celebrating his twenty-first year in plant growing, and has now a model establishment, completely rebuilt and up-to-date. The Easter demand, he says, is phenomenal.

M. A. Bowe has a branch store and a larger force than usual for the holiday. He has already selected more heavily of flowering plants than ever before, and has planned for the biggest Easter in his history.

John King Duer is making an elaborate Easter display in the large court at the rear of his store, and has many unique novelties in vases and statues in his windows.

David Clarke's Sons are celebrating their sixty-first year. New York has grown from a stripling to a giant since the senior Clark built his first greenhouse, in 1849.

Gunther Bros. find room a necessity, and expect to move into ampler quarters on Twenty-eighth street shortly. They have had the usual prosperous year, and are now of age, this being their twenty-first year.

Since Henshaw & Fenrich consolidated, the firm has done an excellent business. Both "Hen" and "Fen" are crack bowlers. Mrs. Fenrich has fully recovered from a dangerous illness.

August Millang, proprietor of Millang Bros., has some fine stock from Ordonez Bros., Madison, N. J., among his Easter supply.

M. H. Walsh's many varieties of ramblers will again be in evidence at the handsome store of Wadley & Smythe, on Fifth avenue, at Easter.

A. Warendorff now has a quartette of handsome stores from Wall street to Harlem.

Charles Millang calls his new store on Sixth avenue the Crystal Palace, and his expanse of glass corroborates the title.

All the seed houses are doing a phenomenal business, which the continued chilliness of March does not seem to lessen. Harry Bunyard says he has been so busy since his return from his western trip that he has only had cat naps.

Lord & Burnham, Hitchings & Co., Pierson U-Bar Co., and the Johnston Co. all report lots of building for the spring and summer already contracted for. The same hopeful outlook is reported by Jacobs & Sons, in Brooklyn.

The Market.

The business done last week was satisfactory to both wholesalers and retailers. There were heavy shipments to this market, but the retailers were active in their demand for good stock and there was little, if any, that went to waste. Monday, March 29, the demand for white carnations was heavy. Carnations have recently had a better call than any other flower, and the price has been holding up to 3 cents and 4 cents for fancy stock. All varieties and grades of roses have been coming in better of late and these, too, have been holding up in price. Richmond, Killarney, Ivory and Mrs. Potter Palmer, when fancy, sell clean.

There has been an unusually good call for long smilax. Sweet peas could not be improved upon. The present consignments from Kirkwood, in all colors, are in demand, especially white and lavender. Easter lilies are not any too plentiful. No doubt the growers are holding them back for the Easter cut. Of callas there are plenty. Extra fine lily of the valley sells well. Tulips, Von Sions, Romans, Paper Whites and Dutch hyacinths, as usual at this time, are enough for the demand.

The indications are that there will be plenty of everything in season in this market for the Easter trade.

Various Notes.

Park Commissioner Scanlan last week appointed the following park keepers: Andrew J. Freeman for Carnegie place, Frank P. Walsh for Washington square, Martin Bowden for St. Louis place, and John J. Roggie for Jackson place.

Robert F. Tesson was recently elected president of the Missouri Breeders' Association. Mr. Tesson is running a successful dairy farm in Clayton, where he once had a large greenhouse plant.

Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, was a recent visitor. Mr. Denker reports that the florists' business in St. Charles has been fairly good all through Lent.

Joe Wors, son of C. W. Wors, is now with George H. Angermueller. He is a bright boy and should make good.

F. W. Bruenig and W. H. Kruse, south end florists, have been quite busy of late with decorations for spring openings in the downtown stores.

The blooming bulb stock exhibited by William Schray & Sons at the show last week was the finest ever exhibited at any of the spring shows. It was surely a grand sight.

Albert T. Hey, of Western Springs, Ill., who was a visitor at the flower show last week, before leaving for home visited his friend, J. F. Ammann, at Edwardsville, Ill.

Jules Bourdet, on South Vandeventer avenue, has a lot of extra fine blooming plants, which will come in right for Easter.

C. Young & Sons Co. put in a busy week in its seed department. The large force of employees worked overtime, filling orders for shipping the next day.

Weber & Sons, the Sanders Nurseries and Rothenhoefer & Schulte, our local nurserymen, say they had an exceptionally good season in all kinds of nursery stock. Their planting season will run into the middle of April.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. is having a run on tree boxes, garden trellises and their new folding plant stand, which they are shipping daily.

John Wunderle, who is at present with the H. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., will, after the planting season, accept a position from City Forester Meyer as inspector.

everybody busy and Mr. Nichols, the president, in a good humor. Walter Retzer, lately with the firm, left last week for South America.

The crepe pullers will have a hard row to hoe from now on. The daily press published a big article about them and told the public to stay clear of them, especially those who use leading florists' names in order to obtain their orders.

O. L. Baird, of Dixon, Ill., is consigning to this market a fine lot of roses and carnations. Last week he shipped a great deal of funeral stock to close-by towns.

Luther Armstrong, one of the oldest florists of St. Louis, who resides in Kirkwood, has fully recovered from his recent illness. Mr. Armstrong was one of the charter members of the S. A. F. when organized at Cincinnati, and says he will attend the twenty-fifth anniversary of the society at Cincinnati next August.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold an important meeting Thursday afternoon, April 8, at 2 o'clock. Several committees will report, and a discussion on Easter stock will take place at the close of the meeting. President Young and Vice-president Denker will both be on hand. Both were sick at the time of the last meeting.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Market conditions are a little quiet, as is customary just prior to Easter, but business is on the whole quite satisfactory. Carnations are not in heavy supply. Many growers report their plants as being quite off crop. The prices on these have not varied much in the last few weeks. Quality is good all through. In roses, American Beauties of the better grades are not abundant, but Killarney is fine. The same cannot be said of Richmond, which is not at all up to last year's standard. Bride and Maid now are extremely fine. Hybrid perpetuals, such as Brunners, are seen, but only in small lots, and they cut little figure.

Violets continue abundant, but clean out well. A slight advance in best singles has taken place. The quality of sweet peas is superb and quantity large. Of valley there is an overplus, demand being poor. Bulbous stock sells quite well. Lilies and callas are rather more abundant. There is quite a variety of miscellaneous material arriving. There is no change in green stock.

In pot plants a brisk trade is being done. Lilies are nice, stocky plants, well flowered, and are selling fast at 12½ cents. Azaleas are good. There are even more pink ramblers than of the older Crimson Rambler; quite a few of the new Tausendschon are also seen. Acacias are good and some good ericas are seen. Genistas, rhododendrons, marguerites, spiræas and quite a line of other flowering plants are seen. The large growers are already pretty well sold out.

Various Notes.

Members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club are reminded to take electric cars at Park street subway station at 1 o'clock April 3 for the Waverley field day with W. W. Edgar & Co., Peirce Bros. and Edgar Bros. A large delegation is assured.

Judge C. W. Hoitt, of Nashua, N. H., will act as toastmaster at the club banquet in Horticultural hall, April 14. Peter M. Miller will act as floor director for the dancing, with a competent corps of aids. Tickets are selling fast and a record attendance is certain. None will be disposed of after April 10.

William Sim enjoyed a brief visit to Philadelphia the early part of last week, carrying some of his fine sweet peas and violets, and taking the only silver medal awarded for his collection of sweet peas.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, are handling at Park Street market some remarkably fine white, pink and lavender sweet peas with grand stems.

The big spring show in Horticultural hall will be continued until Sunday evening, April 4. All the leading exhibits will be retained and new features added. There will be music from a ladies' orchestra each afternoon and evening. Attendances have never before been equaled in Boston, although admission charges were doubled for this show.

At the club meeting, April 20, L. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., will read a paper on "Rose Culture."

E. L. Pierce, of the Hews Co., is seriously ill.

T. J. Benwell is convalescing.

F. E. Palmer and George Cartwright are around, after brief illnesses.

Death of Mrs. Doyle.

Mrs. Katherine E. Doyle, wife of William E. Doyle, died March 29 at her home in Cambridge, after a long illness.

W. N. Craig.

A case involving the question whether florists can work on Sunday making fresh floral pieces for Sabbath funerals was decided by Judge Sullivan in the City Police Court, March 26, Abraham Caplan, a florist, at 144 Massachusetts avenue, being fined $15. Caplan's attorney contended that as flowers were perishable, they could not be prepared and delivered except on the day of the funeral. Judge Sullivan decided that, as Caplan had been working in his store on Sunday, the fact that the flowers had been paid for on Saturday had no bearing on the case, as the transaction could not be completed until they were delivered.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24, 1909.

FIRE in the home of Louis May, son of L. L. May, St. Paul, did $4,000 damage March 22.

THE 2-cent postage rate already has drawn the horticultural trades in England and the United States closer together.

R. LE ROY LAUGHLIN, of the Laughlin Seed Co., who has been located at the San Jose office of the company, is now removing to Kenton, O., where he will have charge of the firm's storeroom and eastern agency.

PLANS are afoot for another attempt to show Chairman Payne and the Ways and Means Committee that the seedsmen make no unreasonable request for changes in the tariff bill. Tuesday, April 13, will probably be the day for the effort.

ONION sets are now on the last lap. The final spurt will find only enough to meet requirements and the prices, which have held stiff in the face of cold weather and shortened sales, will probably rise as soon as the ground warms up and the demand comes for general planting.

THE opposition to the pure seed bill pending in the New York legislature, led by Marshall H. Duryea, of Henry Nungesser & Co., is thought to have proved effectual. It is expected the substitute proposed by a committee of the trade, bringing the law into workable shape along the lines of purity standards, will be reported favorably by the Committee on Agriculture. March 30 Mr. Duryea, with Alex Forbes, of Peter Henderson & Co., Messrs. Sherman and Bennett, of Albany, and Nott and Gordinier, of Troy, had a second conference with Assemblyman Boshart's committee, at which the bill was gone over thoroughly. The seedsmen's substitute was prepared at the suggestion of the legislative committee, upon whom a delegation of twenty seedsmen from all parts of the state waited March 23.

purchaser that the seed is of the best quality, but must meet the lowest man's price.

It is time that the counter trade began to do its part, but those interested in this line report it quite backward in the west.

That the duty on seeds, whether specific or otherwise, will be put through regardless of the wishes of the seedsmen, seems to be the general opinion of those in the trade. It is somewhat in the same category as free seed distribution.

Some seed for onion sets has been planted in the north end of the Chicago district. It is well to get the seed in early, but the weather is not such as to make it advisable to do much planting. Within the next two weeks, however, it is expected that many thousands of pounds of onion seed will go in for sets. Some growers say that there will be more seed than usual planted. Others say not as much as usual, and there you are.

The bean growers report that the outlook for placing contracts with the farmers is going to be uphill work. It is rather early for them to give out anything definite, but the same conditions prevail in the placing of bean contracts as was the case with putting out peas. New sections are being looked for and as far as is possible prices to the farmer will be held where they were last year. The condition of the field bean market and the prices at which the farmers can get contracts for this variety will have its influence. It is expected, however, that in general prices to the farmer who takes garden varieties on contract will be above last year's.

The pea growers report that acreages for the 1909 crop are secured for the most part. There has been a general advance all along the line in the prices to farmers, and the slight additional advance of price to the pro rata purchaser will not offset it. It has been one of the hardest years in the history of pea grow-

NEW DAHLIAS FOR 1909

For upwards of half a century we have made the raising of new Dahlias a great specialty, and our success in this work is now universally known. The set of novelties described below will certainly do us great credit, as they are amongst the very best of our introductions and will be looked upon as indispensable by successful exhibitors. Strong plants will be ready the end of April, and trade terms will be as usual.

CACTUS VARIETIES

CANADIAN (Keynes). A flower beautifully incurved, the central florets and the base of the outer ones are pale lemon color, but towards the outside the color gradually deepens to quite a rich shade of pink. Habit sturdy and erect. 4 ft. $1.80.

ELECTRIC (Keynes). One of the most distinct flowers yet raised; the florets, which are of good shape, are bright golden yellow, heavily and regularly tipped with pure snow white. In a dry season like the last, some flowers are produced which are not perfectly double, but even with this defect its novel and attractive color is sure to make it a great favorite; in fact, the number of orders we have already received for this is considerable. The habit is upright and the stems carry the flowers well above the foliage. 4 ft. $1.80.

FELIX (Keynes). Terra cotta, red-tipped and striped with white, quite distinct from all other tipped kinds. It flowers profusely on long stalks. 5 ft. $1.80.

F. W. BARNES (Keynes). A pleasing tint of reddish fawn or orange, the center of the flower being of a pale straw color. Very free flowering. In form and growth it somewhat resembles the variety "Star," but the flower is considerably larger. 5 ft. $1.80.

GLORY OF WILTS (Keynes). We have not the slightest hesitation in describing this as the very best yellow Dahlia yet raised; the form of the flower is in every way good, the color bright, and it is of the largest size. It is, moreover, very free flowering and constant the whole season through. At the show of the London Dahlia Union it was awarded first prize for the best six blooms of any variety. 5 ft. $1.80.

GREAT WESTERN (Keynes). A large, noble flower of excellent quality, bright purple; it blooms abundantly and every flower is fit for exhibition the whole season through. 4 ft. $1.80.

MISS HESSEY (Keynes). An exquisite shade of bright pink, paler in the center. In growth it is sturdy and upright. Although suitable for exhibition, its chief charm lies in its usefulness for cutting and for garden decoration, as it flowers profusely and the color is most pleasing. 5 ft. $1.80.

NEW SARUM (Keynes); Yellow, suffused with fawn, and with a reddish-bronze center. The flower is of full size and it flowers freely. The habit is stiff and erect. 5 ft. $1.80.

NISI PRIUS (Keynes). Bright orange scarlet with a well-defined yellow center; the florets are long, narrow and straight. It flowers early and abundantly. 4 ft. $1.80.

RESPLENDENT (Keynes). Beautiful crimson scarlet, with well-formed, narrow florets; the flowers are of excellent quality and are freely produced, but if large size is wanted it must be well disbudded. 4 ft. $1.80.

SUCCESS (Keynes). A bright, clear yellow of excellent quality; the florets are slightly incurved and twisted in a beautiful manner; the stalks are long and stiff, and the habit of growth is distinct from any other. 3 ft. $1.80.

VEDETTE (Keynes). Brightest scarlet, distinctly tipped with white, very free flowering and of good form. At the Franco-British Exhibition last season this won the admiration of everyone, its distinct color and beauty being much commented on. It is certainly one of the best-tipped flowers we have raised. 4 ft. $1.80.

POMPON VARIETIES

AMELIA (Keynes). Pale pink, with a white center; a pretty and distinct shade of color, very free flowering and of good habit. 4 ft. $1.25.

ARTHUR KERLEY (Keynes). Purplish carmine, quite a model in form, very free flowering, with an excellent upright habit. 3 ft. $1.25.

DONALD (Keynes). Crimson scarlet, beautiful in form, erect and compact in growth, flowering abundantly. 3 ft. $1.25.

ing to keep the farmer in line and to hold sections that have been worked in previous years. The competition has been keen at all points and it has been hard to adjust the prices to suit the expectations of the farmer and yet keep within reasonable bounds. It is reported that some of the growers have overreached themselves in their eagerness to get out their contracts.

MARCH IN THE SEED TRADE.

On the whole, the month of March has not done more than to hold its own with the records of other years. Weather conditions during the first part of the month were close to normal over the greater portion of the country, with only occasional storms and little cold weather to interfere with business, giving the mail-order houses a run of heavy business. Most of the big catalogue houses reported early purchaser that the seed is of the best quality, but must meet the lowest man's price.

It is time that the counter trade began to do its part, but those interested in this line report it quite backward in the west.

That the duty on seeds, whether specific or otherwise, will be put through regardless of the wishes of the seedsmen, seems to be the general opinion of those in the trade. It is somewhat in the same category as free seed distribution.

Some seed for onion sets has been planted in the north end of the Chicago district. It is well to get the seed in early, but the weather is not such as to make it advisable to do much planting. Within the next two weeks, however, it is expected that many thousands of pounds of onion seed will go in for sets. Some growers say that there will be more seed than usual planted. Others say not as much as usual, and there you are.

The bean growers report that the outlook for placing contracts with the farmers is going to be uphill work. It is rather early for them to give out anything definite, but the same conditions prevail in the placing of bean contracts as was the case with putting out peas. New sections are being looked for and as far as is possible prices to the farmer will be held where they were last year. The condition of the field bean market and the prices at which the farmers can get contracts for this variety will have its influence. It is expected, however, that in general prices to the farmer who takes garden varieties on contract will be above last year's.

The pea growers report that acreages for the 1909 crop are scanter for the most part. There has been a general advance all along the line in the prices to farmers, and the slight additional advance of price to the pro rata purchaser will not offset it. It has been one of the hardest years in the history of pea grow

For upwards of half a century we have made the raising of new Dahlias a great specialty, and our success in this work is now universally known. The set of novelties described below will certainly do us great credit, as they are amongst the very best of our introductions and will be looked upon as indispensable by successful exhibitors. Strong plants will be ready the end of April, and trade terms will be as usual.

CACTUS VARIETIES

CANADIAN (Keynes). A flower beautifully incurved, the central florets and the base of the outer ones are pale lemon color, but towards the outside the color gradually deepens to quite a rich shade of pink. Habit sturdy and erect. 4 ft. $1.80.

ELECTRIC (Keynes). One of the most distinct flowers yet raised; the florets, which are of good shape, are bright golden yellow, heavily and regularly tipped with pure snow white. In a dry season like the last, some flowers are produced which are not perfectly double, but even with this defect its novel and attractive color is sure to make it a great favorite; in fact, the number of orders we have already received for this is considerable. The habit is upright and the stems carry the flowers well above the foliage. 4 ft. $1.80.

FELIX (Keynes). Terra cotta, red-tipped and striped with white, quite distinct from all other tipped kinds. It flowers profusely on long stalks. 5 ft. $1.80.

F. W. BARNES (Keynes). A pleasing tint of reddish fawn or orange, the center of the flower being of a pale straw color. Very free flowering. In form and growth it somewhat resembles the variety "Star," but the flower is considerably larger. 5 ft. $1.80.

GLORY OF WILTS (Keynes). We have not the slightest hesitation in describing this as the very best yellow Dahlia yet raised; the form of the flower is in every way good, the color bright, and it is of the largest size. It is, moreover, very free flowering and constant the whole season through. At the show of the London Dahlia Union it was awarded first prize for the best six blooms of any variety. 5 ft. $1.80.

GREAT WESTERN (Keynes). A large, noble flower of excellent quality, bright purple; it blooms abundantly and every flower is fit for exhibition the whole season through. 4 ft. $1.80.

MISS HESSEY (Keynes). An exquisite shade of bright pink, paler in the center. In growth it is sturdy and upright. Although suitable for exhibition, its chief charm lies in its usefulness for cutting and for garden decoration, as it flowers profusely and the color is most pleasing. 5 ft. $1.80.

NEW SARUM (Keynes); Yellow, suffused with fawn, and with a reddish-bronze center. The flower is of full size and it flowers freely. The habit is stiff and erect. 5 ft. $1.80.

NISI PRIUS (Keynes). Bright orange scarlet with a well-defined yellow center; the florets are long, narrow and straight. It flowers early and abundantly. 4 ft. $1.80.

RESPLENDENT (Keynes). Beautiful crimson scarlet, with well-formed, narrow florets; the flowers are of excellent quality and are freely produced, but if large size is wanted it must be well disbudded. 4 ft. $1.80.

SUCCESS (Keynes). A bright, clear yellow of excellent quality; the florets are slightly incurved and twisted in a beautiful manner; the stalks are long and stiff, and the habit of growth is distinct from any other. 3 ft. $1.80.

VEDETTE (Keynes). Brightest scarlet, distinctly tipped with white, very free flowering and of good form. At the Franco-British Exhibition last season this won the admiration of everyone, its distinct color and beauty being much commented on. It is certainly one of the best-tipped flowers we have raised. 4 ft. $1.80.

POMPON VARIETIES

AMELIA (Keynes). Pale pink, with a white center; a pretty and distinct shade of color, very free flowering and of good habit. 4 ft. $1.25.

ARTHUR KERLEY (Keynes). Purplish carmine, quite a model in form, very free flowering, with an excellent upright habit. 3 ft. $1.25.

DONALD (Keynes). Crimson scarlet, beautiful in form, erect and compact in growth, flowering abundantly. 3 ft. $1.25.

ing to keep the farmer in line and to hold sections that have been worked in previous years. MARCH IN THE SEED TRADE.

On the whole, the month of March has well done more than to hold its own with the records of other years. Weather conditions during the first part of the month were close to normal over the greater portion of the country, with only occasional storms and little cold weather to interfere with business, giving the mail-order houses a run of heavy business. in the month that orders were coming in more numerously than in either of the last two years, but cold weather in the west has checked the flow in the last ten days of the month and pulled off any gain the average house made earlier. Orders have averaged fully as large as last year. Some of the houses that put out more catalogues than last year report material gains in business. The big day of the year was probably March 22, when some of the catalogue houses say they received more orders than on any other one day in their history. Had the weather warmed up in the last week, the month would have made a most favorable record.

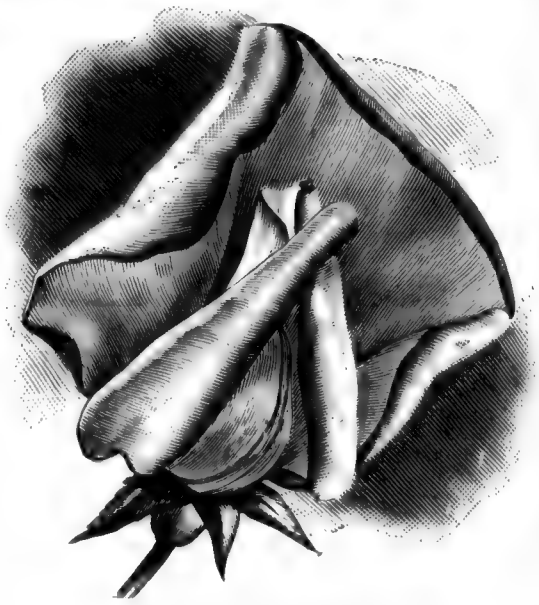
Counter trade has made an excellent start at Philadelphia and Baltimore, but at New York and Boston the start has not been as early as last season, owing to colder weather conditions; still, buyers are numerous. At Chicago the over-the-counter buyers are just beginning to awaken from the winter hibernation, but market gardeners' business has been good.



The serious shortages which were feared last fall have not developed. One of the oldest men in the trade commented some time ago that "if one does not speculate in seeds, there is no longer any occasion to lose sleep over the seed supply; the business is now so broad that stocks are always forthcoming from somewhere; if not just the varieties preferred, then something that will answer the purpose." So it has proven this season.

The Burpee Quality in Sweet Peas

Few Florists or Market Gardeners locat near summer resorts and large towns seem to realize that by planting Sweet Peas early (as early in April as possible) they can add largely to their summer and early fall income. We have recently received letters from progressive planters stating that in 1908 they were able to add hundreds of dollars to the profit side of the ledger by selling Sweet Pea blooms grown from "Burpee's Seeds."

Florists and Market Gardeners, like other horticulturists, differ as to what is best—we suggest as the most desirable of their color in the grandiflora type of Sweet Peas:

Do We Believe in Advertising?

Answer is—Yes

But we first believe in having something worth advertising. When we put an advertisement in the FLORISTS' REVIEW like the one we reproduce here, it is because we know the quality cannot be surpassed. Having introduced more varieties of high-grade Asters in the last twenty-five years than all other American seedsmen combined, we are inclined to think we know what we are talking about when we say that you will find among our list of varieties just the kinds which will bring you the biggest profits and the best results.

But Asters Are Not Our Only Specialties

Few seedsmen in this country maintain as large or as well equipped farms as ours, or grow on their own farms as many different varieties of Flower, Vegetable and Farm Seeds. We grow acres of Tomatoes, Peas, Corn, Oats, Potatoes, Gladioli, Phlox, Dahlias and Poppies; and in smaller quantities, other varieties too numerous to mention.

One of These Fine Days

you will wish you had those seeds you intended to order. In deciding where to get the best quality stocks in the shortest possible time, just remember that we have filled 25% more orders so far than in any previous year. But, nevertheless, we are filling our orders so promptly that 99% are filled the day they get here, except where plants and bulbs are held because of the weather. If you want the best goods, and want them at once, just send us a good sized order, and see how quickly you get your stocks.

VICK QUALITY ASTERS

THE STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE

WE CATALOGUE over-75 varieties of Asters, among which are Queen of the Market, white, pink, lavender, rose and blue; Giant Comet, 12 colors; Victoria; Truffaut's; Improved Crego, white and pink. In fact, if it is a variety that is really worth growing, we make it our business to have the best strains for florists' uses.

Our Best Novelty

VICK'S MIKADO PINK. Premier of Shell Pink Asters. For years we have seen the necessity of a good, mid-season Comet type shell pink Aster. Now we have it, and it's a beauty. Every wholesale florist who has seen it praises it extravagantly. Just the thing to grow between the extra early and the late flowering varieties. Habit similar to non-lateral branchings. Stems, straight, long and strong; plant, vigorous; flowers, very large and yet very dainty; petals, long and narrow and gracefully reflexed; crown, completely covered; color a charming sea shell pink. Sold this year by packet only. Each, 25c.

VICK'S MIKADO WHITE AND ROSE

Every grower ought to have both of these colors to go with Vick's Mikado Pink. Although we have catalogued these two colors before, we have never heretofore had enough stock to fill orders. We have a splendid stock this year, and prices are lower than ever before. 1-32 oz., 35c; 1-16 oz., 50c; ⅛ oz., 85c; ¼ oz., $1.50; ½ oz., $2.75; 1 oz., $5.00.

Two More New Asters

VICK'S IMPERIAL LAVENDER

Vick's Imperials, Daybreak and Purity, are known wherever good Asters are grown. Vick's Imperial Lavender possesses all of the splendid qualities of Daybreak. Color a pure lavender. Will sell well in any market. 1-64 oz., 40c; 1-32 oz., 60c; 1-16 oz., $1.00; ⅛ oz., $1.50; ¼ oz., $2.50; ½ oz., $4.50; 1 oz., $8.00.

VICK'S NON-LATERAL BRANCHING

For several years we have been working to produce a branching plant with fewer, stronger, longer stems, without being sapped by side buds and shoots. We now have a strain in which the whole strength of the plant goes into from nine to fifteen stems, all of which produce exhibition flowers. Two colors only, white and rose. 1-32 oz., 25c; 1-16 oz., 40c; ⅛ oz., 60c; ¼ oz., $1.00; ½ oz., $1.75; 1 oz., $3.00.

Other Recent Vick Introductions

VICK'S EARLY BRANCHING

Similar to the well-known Standard Late Branching. Season, about a week or ten days earlier; two colors, white and rose. 1-16 oz., 25c; ⅛ oz., 40c; ¼ oz., 70c; ½ oz., $1.30; 1 oz., $2.50.

VICK'S ROYAL PURPLE

Flowers, similar to Branching; stems, start close to the ground; very few lateral stems; season, medium early. Goes well with Early Branching. 1-16 oz., 25c; ⅛ oz., 40c; ¼ oz., 70c; ½ oz., $1.30; 1 oz., $2.50.

VICK'S UPRIGHT WHITE

There is a heavy demand for this variety. Flowers similar to Branching, but stems grow directly upward, leaving more room for cultivation. Splendid shipper. Last year we could not furnish seed enough. 1-16 oz., 30c; ⅛ oz., 50c; ¼ oz., 75c; ½ oz., $1.25; 1 oz., $2.00.

VICK'S CARDINAL

For brilliancy of color and profusion of bloom, this Aster surpasses all others. Especially adapted for bedding, where it makes as gorgeous a showing as Scarlet Salvia. Each plant resembles a huge bouquet. 1-32 oz., 25c; 1-16 oz., 40c; ⅛ oz., 60c; ¼ oz., $1.00; ½ oz., $1.75; 1 oz., $3.00.

There are no gardens that will go untilled for want of seeds for planting; though some varieties are sold out or running low, the seedsmen generally will be able to offer "something just as good" to the end of the season. Pickling varieties of cucumber are too scarce for the comfort of some sellers, and some sorts of beans are hard to locate. The wholesalers are having their troubles with the fill-in orders because of the sold out condition of quite a few of the standard varieties of garden seeds, but, like the retailers, still have good substitutes to offer.

GOVERNMENT WORK ON SEEDS.

Work of the Year.

In his annual report as chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, just made public, Prof. B. T. Galloway says:

"During the past year the seed laboratory has been conducted along lines similar to those of previous years under the direction of Edgar Brown, botanist in charge. Over 4,000 more samples of seed were received than in the preceding fiscal year, the total number being 24,715. The practical interest in seed-testing and pure-seed work is shown by the attention given this subject at the agricultural experiment stations and by seedsmen, as well as by farmers.

"The seed laboratory has continued to make tests for both mechanical purity and germination of samples of seed submitted for this purpose by farmers, seedsmen and others. In connection with the seeds distributed by this bureau 2,717 samples have been tested for either mechanical purity or germination, or both. A portion of

Henderson's Invincible Asters

A superior type, of healthy, robust growth, producing long-stemmed flowers of immense size and perfect form. They are of surpassing beauty when cut for vases, and of incomparable effect for garden beds.

The highest achievement in China Asters, a superior race in every way. The plants are of very healthy, robust, branching growth, about 2 ft. high, producing, on long stems, massive, peony-formed flowers of perfect form and faultless outline, and exceedingly double to the very center. The flowers are the most beautifully formed of all large Asters. The petals are of thick, durable substance, and, in consequence, the flowers last long in perfection. When well grown the flowers of Henderson's Invincible Asters average 3½ in. across; 4-in. flowers are quite common, and if grown especially for cut flowers, the side branches pruned, allowing a plant to carry not over 8 or 10 flowers, 1 flower to a stem, their size will then be enormous, measuring 4½ and 5 in. across. These magnificent blossoms, being gracefully poised on strong, well-leaved stems 15 to 18 in. long, resemble good-sized Chrysanthemums, and are unsurpassed as cut flowers.

The Merits of the Philippine Lily

It thrives under glass and in the garden. It forces in 100 days from time of potting to bloom. Can be repeatedly forced with increasing vitality. Two crops of flowers in a year, from the same bulb, may be obtained. Bulbs planted in the open ground the first of May will bloom the last of July; the same bulbs, dug the last of September, rested until December and potted up, will bloom in March. Free from disease, every bulb sure to bloom. Can be grown in the winter under ordinary house care. The blooms are massive in form, elegant in outline, pure in color and agreeable in fragrance, lasting from ten to twelve days.

these were samples offered the department and were tested previous to purchasing; the remainder were samples from seed actually purchased for distribution. Exclusive of packets of vegetable and flower seed, a memorandum of the analysis is sent with each lot of seed distributed, showing the kinds and number of any weed seeds present and the percentage of germination.

Adulterated Seeds.

"The collection and examination of samples of clover, alfalfa and grass seeds have been continued, with the result that the adulteration of most of our common farm seeds has practically ceased. There is still offered in the market, however, a considerable amount of both Kentucky blue grass seed and orchard grass seed which is badly adulterated. The suggestion has been frequently made by seedsmen that Canada blue grass seed is harvested with that of Kentucky blue grass, and in order to determine this point definitely a careful examination of the Kentucky blue grass seed-producing area in the states of Kentucky, Illinois, Missouri and Iowa was made just previous to harvesting time. In no case was there evidence that mature seeds of the two kinds would be harvested together, showing that the presence of Canada blue grass seed in that of Kentucky blue grass is the result of deliberate adulteration. This condition as regards the natural occurrence of Canada blue grass seed in that of Kentucky blue grass seed is practically the same as was found last year in the examination of the orchard grass seed producing section, there being practically no evidence of natural mixture.

"The importation of yellow trefoil has practically ceased, but there are still large quantities of Canada blue grass seed imported for use in adulteration of Kentucky blue grass seed. During the past year 1,159 samples have been received from custom houses, each representing an importation of forage-plant seeds. Among them are found many lots of both red clover and alfalfa, as well as some lots of the less common grass seeds, which are practically worthless for seeding purposes. Dodder is always found in low-grade samples of red clover and alfalfa imported from Europe, and often in large quantities. As has been previously pointed out, it is important that some steps should be taken to prevent the importation into the United States of European screenings and seeds which are used only for purposes of adulteration.

Vitality of Commercial Seeds.

"The investigation of the average quality of various kinds of commercial seeds has been continued. About 5,000 packets of vegetable seeds, as sold by grocers, have been collected and are now being tested for germination. Germination tests have also been made of about 2,500 samples each of cowpeas and corn. The germination of the samples of corn which were submitted by farmers was found to be of a high average quality, and the germination of cowpea seed was very much better than that reported on last year.

"In January, 1908, there was started in coöperation with the Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station, at Lincoln, Neb., a coöperative seed-testing laboratory. The object of this laboratory was to test samples of seed for farmers and seedsmen in the state of Nebraska and adjacent territory, making it possible to save the delay required in sending samples to Washington. This laboratory has been appreciated by both seedsmen and farmers, as is shown by the fact that 463 samples were submitted for test, over one-half of them coming from Nebraska.

"An opportunity has been offered seedsmen, as well as experiment station workers, to spend some time in the seed laboratory, in order to become acquainted with the technical methods of seed testing, as well as to learn to recognize the commoner seeds of cultivated plants and weeds. Several students have availed themselves of this opportunity, and their work here will undoubtedly result in better facilities at the experiment stations and seed houses with which they are connected.

Plans for Future Work.

"The operation of the coöperative laboratory at Lincoln, Neb., has been so successful that it has been determined to locate a similar laboratory in coöperation with the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station, at Columbia, Mo. This will be started in the fall of 1908.

"Particular attention will be paid to investigational work on the germination of seeds, as it is desired to perfect accurate methods for testing many seeds under laboratory conditions, to which it has not been possible previously to give sufficient attention.

"During the coming year a thorough study of the germination of forest-tree seeds will be undertaken in coöperation with the Forest Service. This is a subject which has received practically no attention in the United States and one that is of great importance on account of the growing interest in forestry.

"This laboratory is now in receipt of frequent requests for instruction in the technical methods of seed testing. These inquiries, coming both from the seed trade and experiment stations, show the general interest in better seeds. Although our laboratory facilities are limited, an endeavor will be made to accommodate all those wishing assistance along this line."

FRENCH ENDIVE.

Since replying to W. B. W., in the REVIEW of March 11, page 58, I find that I have been in error in stating that French endive as imported here is really endive at all, as we understand it. The principal importing houses for these salads are in New York and what they hand out as French endive is simply blanched chicory or witloof. The leading hotels, I find, prefer this blanched chicory a la France to the true endive, which closely resembles lettuce. What in our big markets is sold as chicory is liable to be true endive, on the other hand. I made an unintentional error in stating that romaine was green curled endive. It is simply what we know as Cos lettuce.

Seeing that chicory is largely imported and sold as French endive, there would seem to be no good reason why American vegetable growers could not secure this trade. If chicory seed is sown thinly in rows in April, it will give strong roots for forcing the following winter. A warm, dark cellar or shed, such as will grow mushrooms, would be ideal for blanching this French endive. Our vegetable growers under glass, who handle immense quantities of cucumbers and lettuce, might profitably use a little space for more of these French salad plants, which are becoming increasingly popular. W. N. CRAIG.

QUANTITY OF SEED PER ACRE.

Please state what is the proper quantity of seed or plants per acre, in planting such vegetables as tomatoes, cabbages, sweet corn, beans, peas, watermelons, onions, etc. J. H. N.

Tomatoes produce about 2,000 plants from an ounce of seed, if carefully handled. Set in the field four feet apart each way, it would take 2,800 plants per acre.

Cabbage seed should produce about 2,500 plants per ounce of seed. It takes about 16,000 plants to plant an acre of early cabbage, 18x24 inches apart. Late cabbage, 24x36 inches apart, take only half that number of plants.

It takes about a bushel and a half of beans or peas to plant an acre.

Two or three pounds of watermelon seed will plant an acre, if in hills about eight feet apart each way.

Onions, sown in rows one foot apart, take about four to five pounds per acre.

Beets, sown in rows eighteen inches apart, take five to six pounds of seed per acre.

An acre covers a trifle less than 50,000 square feet; 214 feet each way is an easy way to estimate the number of rows or plants per acre. For instance, if the rows are two feet apart and the plants one foot apart in the row, you would have 107 rows, with 214 in a row, etc. This may be a help in calculating the amount of seed and plants required for various other crops.

No exact amounts can be given, on account of variation in planting. H. G.

FIVE ACRES with the Skinner Irrigation will produce as much crops as TEN ACRES without it.

The Market.

Business last week was good. The automobile show, which lasted all the week, created quite a demand for carnations and kept the decorators busy. Roses, Beauties, valley, sweet peas and bulbous stuff were about equal to the demand, with a shortage in orchids, lilacs and Easter lilies. The indications are that this is going to be the best Easter ever. It looks as though everything is going to be plentiful, with the exception of lilies, which are going to be short in number and length of stem.

Various Notes.

Reinhold Schilling, in charge of the flower department of the New York store, reports business good.

One of the features of the auto parade this week which attracted a great deal of attention was an auto decorated with flowers. A. Wiegand & Son executed this work, using about 1,500 carnations and 150 strands of asparagus and smilax in it.

William Langstaff is out, after a three weeks' illness.

The premium list of the state fair is out. By the hard and diligent work of Secretary A. F. J. Baur, the State Board of Agriculture allowed the State Florists' Association of Indiana to revise the list, and increased the premiums to about $1,000. This is by far the best premium list ever offered at the Indiana state fair, and it is hoped that the florists of the state will coöperate with the State Florists' Association and make it a grand success.

Baur & Smith have made arrangements with M. A. Patten & Co., of Tewksbury, Mass., to participate in disseminating Shasta, their new white carnation, and take care of the eastern trade.

Mrs. Ed Bertermann, who has been ill for some time, had an experience the other night which she will not soon forget. About 5 o'clock in the morning a thief entered the house. Searching the rooms downstairs, he secured about $5. Then he made his way upstairs, into the room where Mrs. Bertermann lay awake. But, fearful Mr. Bertermann might spring at the burglar and be shot, should he awake, she allowed him to sleep while the thief went through his clothes. As the thief slipped what money he got into his pocket, Mrs. Bertermann coughed and, seeing that he was detected, he made a rapid exit. Mrs. Bertermann awakened her husband quickly and he ran after the thief, but was not fast enough.

Messrs. Eschner and Karins, of Philadelphia, paid us a visit this week.

Hans Kipke, of A. Wiegand & Son, is back at work, after spending three weeks in the hospital. Fred Stolti, of that firm, is on the sick list.

NOTICE
To all American Nurserymen and Seedsmen desiring to keep in touch with commercial horticulture in England and the continent of Europe: Your best means of doing this is to take in the Horticultural Advertiser
Our circulation covers the whole trade in Great Britain and the cream of the European firms. Impartial reports of all novelties, etc. Paper free on receipt of 75 cents, covering cost of postage yearly. As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalogue or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade.

The Market.

Business last week did not match that of the week before. Things were not nearly so lively, but perhaps it was just as well, as the supply of stock was not heavy. There was some accumulation by Friday night, but Saturday brought a good business and the wholesale houses were sold out clean. Funeral work consfituted the main demand and there was not any too much of it. White flowers had the most call and brought the highest prices.

The outlook for Easter is good. It may be that we will be short on some kinds of stock, but there will be enough in other lines to make up. Orders are being booked in a satisfactory manner and we can look forward to a large and profitable business. We ought to have plenty of pink and white roses and there ought to be a good lot of carnations. Bulbous flowers will not be so plentiful and it looks as if good lilies will be scarce, though the next week may put a different light on this last item.

Various Notes.

It might be well to mention that, in connection with the S. A. F. convention this summer, the local boys are endeavoring to organize a baseball team made up of florists only. We have some mighty good players in this city and they have hopes of organizing a fast team. It is their intention to issue a challenge to visiting baseball players to organize a team, and they guarantee to give them a run for their money. It may be possible that we will be able to make up two teams, and in this case we will be able to take care of two visiting teams. The boys believe that a good ball game would be appreciated by all visitors and that it might be possible to make these games of annual occurrence.

The executive board having charge of the entertainment at the coming S. A. F. convention held a meeting at the club rooms of the Florists' Society Saturday night, March 27. There was nothing new to come before the meeting, but reports from all committees were heard and various matters were discussed by all present. The next general meeting of the society will be held Saturday evening, April 10, unless the date is changed owing to the following day being Easter Sunday.

A visit to Charles Pommert's goldfish hatchery, located at Amelia, O., proved to be one of unusual interest, even though at a sort of off season in this line of business. Mr. Pommert has ponds without number and they are all arranged in such a manner that each can be drained without interfering with any other. He raises goldfish by the hundreds of thousands and is undoubtedly one of the largest dealers in this line in the world. He has many varieties and they are both interesting and beautiful. He has a large greenhouse devoted to Asparagus plumosus and he makes this pay him well. Many outdoor flowers are grown. The many ponds give him the opportunity to go largely into the raising of water lilies. Iris is also extensively grown.

We have just learned that B. F. Hensley, of Knightstown, Ind., is the father of a ten-pound boy.

Charles Dudley, of Parkersburg, W. Va., was a caller. C. J. Ohmer.

In a recent conversation C. E. Critchell said: "Our stock has been moving better in the last month or so than in years. There seems to be an increased demand for flowers of all kinds, and we anticipate a most satisfactory Easter trade in lilies and the like." T. W. Hardesty also is on record as expecting the Easter demand to break all records.

IT IS TO LAUGH.

A traveling man died very suddenly in Pittsburg. His relatives telegraphed the undertaker to make a wreath; the ribbon should be extra wide, with the inscription, "Rest in Peace," on both sides, and if there is room, "We Shall Meet in Heaven." The undertaker was out of town, and his new assistant handled the job. It was a startling floral piece which turned up at the funeral. The ribbon was extra wide, and bore the inscription, "Rest in Peace on Both Sides, and

PACIFIC COAST.

John Evans, proprietor of the large Okanogan nurseries at Oroville, Wash., is preparing to largely increase his plant.

Redlands, Cal.—Sidney Hockridge, the nurseryman, has begun the erection of three large greenhouses, to cost $10,000, to be used for vegetable growing.

San Jose, Cal.—R. Le Roy Laughlin, junior member of the Laughlin Seed Co., starts with his family today, April 1, for Kenton, O., where he will have charge of the company's storeroom and eastern agency.

CALIFORNIA GUMS FOR TIMBER.

The fact that the Santa Fe Railroad Co. has recently been in the market for 1,000,000 gum tree seedlings shows what a demand these wonderful timber trees have met with in California recently. These plants were to be planted on the company's own preserves, to be grown for railroad ties, bridge timbers and piles, for which they have been proven very valuable.

The native redwoods have been practically exterminated in so many sections of the country that extensive building concerns have turned their attention to something that will take their places, and this has been found in some of the many varieties of Australian gums. These trees are of the easiest culture, quick of growth and not affected by insect pests.

The best known variety at the present time is the ordinary blue gum, Eucalyptus globulus, probably the quickest growing tree in the world. It attains a height, in its native country, of 300 feet, and specimens in California 30 years old are at present 150 feet in height. As a windbreak or where a quantity of timber is wanted, it is the most valuable. The wood, however, does not last so long underground as some of the other varieties, but it is extremely valuable for other purposes, being straight grained, tough and durable.

The red gum, Eucalyptus rostrata, has many good qualities that are lacking in the other. The wood is much more durable underground or in the water. The tree does not grow quite so fast, but is more hardy and is apparently resistant to attacks of marine animals and white ants.

The forest red gum, Eucalyptus tereticornis, has to be grown under more favorable conditions than any of the preceding, but attains the height of 100 feet. The timber is red, hard and extremely durable underground.

The narrow-leaved ironbark gum, Eucalyptus crebra, grows tall and slender and does well in poor soil and our warm interior valleys. The wood is tough and lasting.

The sugar gum, Eucalyptus corynocalyx grows to a fair size. Its wood, also, is tough and lasting. It is a profuse bloomer and is much frequented by bees, as is also the yellow box, or Eucalyptus melliodora, which has a hard and durable timber, but is usually crooked and gnarled.

The manna gum, Eucalyptus viminalis, will grow almost anywhere in California, but the timber is not valuable.

Eucalyptus rudis is a rapid grower, but seems to demand considerable water. Its timber has not been tested to any extent here.

The demand for eucalyptus is in the order in which I have listed the varieties, and although there are several others grown here, they are planted more as ornamentals than for use as sources of timber supply. G.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.

Lilydale is the name Colin H. McIsaac has given to his bulb farm here. Mr. McIsaac is the secretary of the Santa Cruz Chamber of Commerce, and actively interested in developing and making known the advantages, resources and attractions which Santa Cruz county possesses. He says he knows by experience that this is a section of this country which is as well, if not better, adapted for bulb growing than any of the famous bulb regions of Europe.

Callas do particularly well here and Santa Cruz county now produces by far the larger part of the trade's supply of bulbs. Mr. McIsaac uses on his letterhead a cut showing the growth made by the lilies in nine months, the tiny bulbs having been set out during June and July preceding the taking of the photograph of the field in bloom February 28. Most of the bulbs planted were no larger than the nail of a small little finger, and none of them was more than an inch and a half long and as big around as a lead pencil. In front of the bungalow

"THE BEST IN THE MARKET"

A SATISFIED GROWER

Near St. Paul, Minn., writes under date of September 15th:

"The germination of the seed purchased from you last spring was the best I ever saw, apparently every seed producing a plant. I gave the best possible cultivation and saw the results about the first of September, when they commenced to bloom. They were perfectly magnificent. At our annual flower show I entered the CREGO ASTER in seven different classes, and took the first prize in every instance. My asters were in a class by themselves, and a local florist, who was one of the judges, said they were the finest he had ever seen, and he offered to buy my crop at from $5.00 to $7.00 per 100."

Enormous fluffy blossoms, long clean stems, vigorous, healthy plants, and a splendid shipper. If you are interested in securing the best possible returns from your Aster crop this season, send in your order at once for seed. White and shell pink only; the rose pink is all sold.

PRICES:—Trade packet, $1.00; Half ounce, $4.50; Ounce, $8.00.

LILYDALE BULB & ROOT CO., SANTA CRUZ, CALIFORNIA

at Lilydale 250,000 bulbs are growing, and as many more in a similar field back of the bungalow.

Santa Cruz county is one of the coast counties of California, some eighty miles south of San Francisco. Topographically ideally environed by mountain, valley and sea, this favored spot has climatic conditions so equable that had it nothing more to offer it would still be richly endowed. Ordinarily lilies grow in this section during the so-called winter or rainy months without interruption, many winters passing by without frost enough to perceptibly damage the blooms, while the heaviest frost experienced does not injure them appreciably.

Last fall some ten pounds of calla lily seed were sown at Lilydale, and these seed beds are at this writing crowded with tiny lilies from one to four inches high, growing so fast that it is almost possible to note their daily increase in stature. Approximately there are some 150,000 seedlings in these seed beds, and calla bulbs thus produced are particularly fine and vigorous.

The Market.

Gusts of wind and showers of rain have alternated during the present week, and natural conditions have not assisted business to any great extent. There has been a fair amount of funeral work, however, and for this the retailers have been thankful. There is rather a dearth of white stock, and everything that could be utilized for mourning flowers has been sold out well. Carnations, with the exception of Enchantress, are rather a scarce article, and roses are not offered in sufficient quantity to fill requirements. Violets are beginning to show that their season for flowering is nearly over and another couple of weeks will make them rather scarce. Narcissi and daffodils have proven money-makers for the retailers this season. They have been low in price and the public have bought them in large quantities. Valley and Easter lilies are in good supply and move well as funeral flowers.

CALIFORNIA GUMS FOR TIMBER.

The fact that the Santa Fe Railroad Co. has recently been in the market for 1,000,000 gum tree seedlings shows what a demand these wonderful timber trees have met with in California recently. These plants were to be planted on the company's own preserves, to be grown for railroad ties, bridge timbers and piles, for which they have been proven very valuable.

The native redwoods have been practically exterminated in so many sections of the country that extensive building concerns have turned their attention to something that will take their places, and this has been found in some of the many varieties of Australian gums. These trees are of the easiest culture, quick of growth and not affected by insect pests.

The best known variety at the present time is the ordinary blue gum, Eucalyptus globulus, probably the quickest growing tree in the world. It attains a height, in its native country, of 300 feet, and specimens in California 30 years old are at present 150 feet in height. As a windbreak or where a quantity of timber is wanted, it is the most valuable. The wood, however, does not last so long underground as some of the other varieties, but it is extremely valuable for other purposes, being straight grained, tough and durable.

flowers, but the fruit blossoms, owing to the excess of moisture this season, have not been as satisfactory to handle as usual. Calla lilies are a drug in the market at present, although quite a quantity of them will be shipped to interior points for church decorations. They are so common here at present that unless we should have a severe frost or some other such calamity they will be hardly worth picking.

It is rather early yet to tell what trade will be for Easter. Flowers will be plentiful enough, from all accounts, and many retailers depend largely on out-of-town orders to bring up the volume of business.

Various Notes.

The Oakland florists had a large amount of funeral work on the occasion of the death of the city attorney, who was buried March 26.

F. W. Dohrmann has been appointed park commissioner by Mayor Taylor.

Domoto Bros. are cutting heavily of L. longiflorum. They will have a good crop for Easter.

Edward Gill, of Berkeley, Cal., died March 25. Further particulars will be found in this week's obituary column.

PRIMULA SEED.

In answer to G. O. K.'s query, on page 7 of the Review of March 18, in regard to producing seed of Primula Sinensis, I wish to say that I have raised it successfully at Oakland, Cal., by the following method, without artificial pollenization:

Grow the plants with short, stocky leaves, so that the flowers stand well above the foliage. Choosing the plants with the finest flowers, place them on a warm, sunny shelf, near to the ventilators; if open at night, all the better. Give plenty of room between the plants, to keep the flowers and seed pods from damping off. Feed and water well until the flowers begin to drop from the seed pods; then give only enough water to keep them from flagging. Watch your seed pods as they ripen, or the seed will drop out and be lost.

I always save my seed from the plants that come from the latest sowing that was made in May or early June. From 100 plants I have saved as much as two ounces of seed. W. L. Graham.

Findlay, O.—S. J. McMichael says the prospects are for the best season in years for the sale of vegetable plants.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus

Last year, owing to the almost total failure of the Asparagus Plumosus to seed, I was unable to fill my orders, but this season I am to the front with about 2,000,000 seed.

The plants, after a year's rest, blossomed freely and matured a heavy crop of what I believe will be the strongest seed ever sent out of California. The Asparagus Plumosus grown here needs no introduction to you, however, as you are already fully acquainted with its merits. You can get seed promptly, as they are being harvested now, and can be delivered upon receipt of your order.

Seeds will be sold by count, with the usual guarantee as to germination, and I will again sell at my usual low, cash-with-order prices as per following list:

1,000 seeds...	$ 2.00	13,000 seeds..	$20.00
6,000 seeds...	10.00	25,000 seeds..	35.00
50,000 seeds...			62.50

I shall be glad to receive your order and know you will be pleased with the results.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

THERE are seventy-five nurseries in the state of Kansas.

ROCHESTER reports the busiest season to date. Everyone has been, and is, on the jump.

THERE is a revival of interest in orcharding and a consequent increase in the sales of apple trees in New England.

THIS week's obituary column contains a brief sketch of the career of Edward Gill, the nurseryman of Berkeley, Cal., who died March 25.

THE Valdesian Nurseries, Bostic, N. C., say this season has brought them the greatest demand they have ever experienced. They consider the outlook exceptionally bright.

THE Fernwood Nursery, New York city, has been incorporated with $70,000 authorized capital stock. The incorporators are: B. J. Ezechil, L. G. Bernheimer and Charles K. Allen.

THE Gilbertson Nursery Co., St. Ansgar, Ia., four years ago began developing a nursery at Mason City with the intention of removing from St. Ansgar in due time. After this spring's business they expect to be all cleaned up at the old location.

NURSERY stock from L. Van Leuwen & Son, Sassenheim; J. Blaauw & Co. and Ottolander & Hooftman, Boskoop, exported October 28, 1908, entered at San Francisco, was correctly priced in the invoice, but the cost of cases and packing was not included, so the appraisers added it.

J. D. GREEN, from Ohio, recently purchased the large estate of A. R. Hurd, one mile south of Farmville, Va., and extensive preparations are being made for the establishment of a nursery. A large shipment of stock has just been received from France. Mr. Green will grow hardy herbaceous stock, evergreens and fancy shrubbery.

LIABILITY IS DOUBLED.

Creditors of the Albaugh Nursery Co., Dayton, O., began a determined contest in Judge Brown's court March 25 to enforce the old law of the double liability of stockholders. The action is that of the Fourth National Bank, which seeks to make stockholders of the former nursery company personally liable for a judgment for $23,000 that the bank obtained some time ago on notes. The claims of the other creditors, amounting to some $15,000, will be affected by the outcome of the suit of the bank.

Counsel for the stockholders claim that their clients can no longer be held individually liable for the debts of the failed concern on the ground that the double liability law is no longer operative. Should the court affirm the contentions of the creditors the stockholders would be liable not only for the amount that they have invested but also for their private means to an equal amount.

No recent legal contest in the local courts has engaged as many lawyers as that of the bank against the nursery company. Ten lawyers are presenting the arguments of their respective sides.

NEW ROSE
WHITE KILLARNEY

Come and see White Killarney growing at our Scarborough houses, and you will say at once, as every one does who has seen it, it is they have ever seen. You need it if you want to be up to the times, and it will pay you better than any other white rose that you can plant. You will regret it if you do not plant it this year, and you will not regret it if you do. Big lots are being booked. Get your order in early. Send us order at once, while you think of it. Get early stock. It will not cost you any more to order today, while you think of it, than it will two months from now. Be the early bird that catches the worm.

Strong young plants, 2¼-inch pots, own root, now ready for delivery, $30 per 100, 250 for $70, 500 for $125, 1000 for $250. Grafted plants, ready April 1, $35 per 100, 250 for $82.50, 500 for $150, 1000 for $300.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive and most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000 working them into the soil around the trees and shrubbery on the campus. What do you think of this plan and what would be the proper quantity for each tree, in this pure state? What do you think they would be worth per ton as a fertilizer in this stage? J. W. Y.

Raw bones contain forty-eight per cent of phosphate of lime and four and one-half per cent of ammonia. In order to derive full benefit from bones, they ought to be reduced to one-half inch or one-quarter inch size, and, for quicker assimilation, to bone meal or bone dust. In this state about one-half peck to each tree would be sufficient. This should be spaded in to the depth of at least six inches.

Bones in the unprepared state are worth about $8 per ton, but often sell for more. It depends a good deal on locality. Ribes.

GOVERNMENT WILLOW CULTURE

The government is right in the midst of the harvest of a most unique crop at its experimental farm near Arlington, just across the Potomac from Washington, where a corps of laborers in charge of trained foresters are preparing for the annual free distribution of 100,000 basket willow cuttings.

Uncle Sam is encouraging the growing of high grade willow rods in this country, and in the five years since the establishment of the holts at Arlington approximately a half million select cuttings have been distributed among farmers, with directions for planting and preparing for market. Particular attention is given to selecting the varieties and strains best suited to the soil where the plantings will be made.

Willowcraft is an industry which is constantly growing in importance in this country, yet the culture of basket willow in the United States made little progress until five or six years ago. Even now, practically all of the best grades of basket willow are imported from Europe, chiefly from France.

The government recognizes the importance of good cuttings, a point more commonly overlooked than the matter of cultivation. Only the best and most thrifty rods are selected for each season's distribution. To produce a desirable grade of rods it is very important to select planting stock not only from thoroughly tested varieties, but the cuttings should be taken from the tallest, perfectly straight, cylindrical, branchless, and fully mature rods. High grade basket willows can be raised only by being sure that the cuttings planted are from parent stock above the average.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The market remains under the influence of the Lenten season, but on the whole is satisfactory, cleaning up in almost every line, and very little goes to the ash barrel. Quite a few events of a social character took place last week, and the florists' trade has benefited thereby. Forty days of inaction in society circles means a long pull and few among society people are equal to the demand; consequently some business is created through lapsing vows, and other departures from the orthodox observance of Lent.

A heavy cut is on in roses and, from all reports, there will be a heavy cut for Easter. Bride and Maid are quite plentiful, but prime values are practically unchanged and such cleaning out as is necessary is confined to stock of inferior quality. There is a certain demand—quite limited, too—for the highest grade of stock, and when this is supplied, figures to be realized are toward the minimum. Carnations are not quite so plentiful, and concessions in consequence are not so frequent. Violets are not strong in point of demand, but values are steady as quoted. With the Easter season so close, today's prices may be some criterion of the values to be expected during Easter week.

Various Notes.

Charles Cook, of Mosher street, has been looking over several pieces of property near Catonsville and expects to close a deal in a day or two. His present place is too small for his increasing trade. He will build several new houses this season.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club was treated to a geranium show by R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., of White Marsh, March 22. The club room was one mass of blooms, as there were 150 varieties on exhibition, some of which measured over six inches across. Mr. Vincent gave a talk on geraniums and their requirements. M. Hannigan had a handsome vase of Ulrich Brunner roses on display.

The park board has begun setting out thousands of pansies in the parks and squares, and they make a pretty show, as most of them are in bloom. Q.

Carnation Conquest.

CONQUEST

A new seedling to be disseminated next season. This is a variety that florists have been wanting ever since they discarded Prosperity.

Conquest is a light flesh pink, overlaid with a deep rose pink, the color extending over the petals from the center almost to the edge. It does not fade, making it a most beautiful and attractive flower. Its habit is somewhat on the order of Lawson, although the stem is somewhat longer, and very stiff. The flowers are well filled and nicely formed, which add to its attractiveness. Without a doubt, it will be the most attractive, as well as the most profitable variety to be disseminated the coming season.

Orders booked now for January 1st, 1910, delivery.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal; closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Immediate delivery.

CHAS. KNOPF FLORAL CO., Richmond, Ind., and S. J. REUTER & SON, Inc., Westerly, R. I.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate. The Charles Knopf Floral Co., B., K. & B. Floral Co., Formerly the Richmond, Ind.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The cut flower trade is fair, with the supply equal to the demand. There is no change in prices as yet. There seems to be a good supply of bulbous stock on hand, with the exception of Paper Whites. Perhaps these are being saved for Easter.

Funeral work has been good. Wm. P. Peirce reports large orders.

A good supply of bulbous stock for Easter is being forced in this section. Growers of Easter lilies will get only a fair crop, many of them losing half of their bulbs.

A. B. Hathaway has a big sale of daffodils in pots to the Country Club. This is an annual order with him, he furnishing the club with a certain number of pots each week. The club's proceeds provide funds for sending mothers and their children into the country for fresh air.

Wm. Livesey is getting ready to pot up smilax. W. L.

ASHTABULA, OHIO.

Thirty-six new greenhouses are to be built in Ashtabula during the coming summer. The improvements will constitute an increase by fifty per cent of the extent of the greenhouse industry in this city, a fact which indicates as well as anything could the stability of the business.

A large portion of the houses will be built especially for the winter tomato portion of the business, which is comparatively new. The past has demonstrated that Ashtabula tomatoes are superior to those of Florida and Cuba and are in fact in a class by themselves.

The thirty-six new houses will be built in the following numbers by the firms named: R. W. Griswold, Jr., twelve; Dunbar & Hopkins, ten; Griswold Greenhouse Co., six; Adams Bros., four; Gallup Bros., three.

The recent organization of a national association of greenhouse vegetable growers has brought out the fact that Ashtabula is the leading city in the west in this line, and the local growers purpose to keep in first place.

Sweet Briar, Va.—David Harris, the market gardener, expects to go into the florists' business.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business again was brisk last week. More carnations could have been used, while the supply of Beauties and other roses showed an increase over last week. Bulbous stock sold well, and the same can be said of sweet peas.

Various Notes.

The spring openings of the department stores made several of the retailers hustle and helped to clean up the market on those days. The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. was kept on the jump, for it had the work of the stores of Gimble Bros., Espenhain and H. E. Bauch; also the grand opening of the G. M. Barrett Co.

Robert Zepnick, of 147 Lincoln street, reports a busy week, with funeral work predominating.

Besides smaller orders, the Baumgarten Floral Co. made a large horseshoe for the employees of the G. M. Barrett Co.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Paul Schultz, formerly of Cincinnati, is now grower with the C. B. Flick Floral Co.

Lake Forest, Ill.—The Horticultural Society of Lake Forest, of which J. W. Scharfenberg is secretary, has issued the premium list for its third annual exhibition, to be held the third week in July.

Rowayton, Conn.—Traendly & Schenck will build two large greenhouses, 50x300 feet, on their property on Rowayton avenue. The houses will be duplicates of several large rose houses which this firm built some time ago.

ORCHIDS Headquarters for all Central American Varieties

ONCIDIUM SPLENDIDUM

Just received a nice importation in fine condition of this grand variety, without doubt the best Oncidium to grow for cut flowers, being easy to manage and sure to bloom. For description, see the Florists' Review for March 11, page 11.

Also Oncidium Cavendishi, O. Wentworthianum, Lycaste Skinneri, Odontoglossum Grande (Baby Orchid), and a few fine specimen Laelia Digbyana, established, showing flower sheaths. Expect Cattleya Skinneri, Laelia Superbiens and others in a few days.

My arrangements and facilities enable me to quote lowest possible prices for all Central American Orchids for present or future delivery. Write for them.

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

Business continues good, with stock plentiful, and the plant trade is picking up. The demand for flowering plants is good. Hyacinths, cinerarias, Primula obconica, spiræas, hydrangeas and such subjects are making our windows gay. Easter stock is good, but somewhat scarce this year, especially lilies. The weather here is mild and springlike.

Various Notes.

Fister Bros., vegetable growers on the Maysville road, have lost about $1,500 worth of glass and other material, which was blown up by the explosion of their boiler.

Honaker has some good hydrangeas this year.

J. Ferdinand Keller has returned from a trip to Cincinnati, O., Richmond, Ind., and other northern points.

BLUE GRASS.

HANNIBAL, O.—The greenhouse of Emil Rist, together with its contents, was destroyed by fire March 20.

WEST VIEW, PA. — Louis P. Faulk is pleased that, beginning April 1, he will have free delivery of mail, although he will have to change his address to Allegheny, R. F. D. No. 3.

AUSTIN, MINN. — A. N. Kinsman will plant one less house of carnations next season and give the space to roses. He has built a high cement wall to keep the river from damaging his grounds at high water and it will take a thousand loads of dirt to fill it up level on the inside.

Bay Trees, Boxwood, Palms, Araucarias, and other decorative material.

EVERGREENS, in all choicest varieties. ROSES, Dwarf, Climbing, Tree and Ramblers. CLEMATIS, and all other Vines and Climbers. Trained Fruit Trees, Greenhouse Grapes, Herbaceous Plants, Trees and Shrubs.

We shall be pleased to give special prices on lists. Ask for Wholesale Catalogue.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Trade seems to be taking on a little life and is showing improvement along all lines. Stock has shortened up a little and prices have stiffened proportionately. There seems to be a question about stock being scarce for Easter. The wholesalers say stock will not be overplentiful, as many of the crops will be about two weeks late, owing to the bad weather. The retailers, however, say there will be plenty of stock and to spare, and point to the fact that there is stock to burn at the last minute every holiday.

Various Notes.

The shops are making a special effort to display their plants and there are some good things, but the best will not be shown until next week.

Fred Burki is doing jury duty. It is not exactly to his liking at this time of year, but one must obey the law.

Visitors: Carl Hagenburger, Mentor, O.; W. P. Snyder, Philadelphia, Pa., representing the Edwards & Docker Co.; Geo. W. Swayne, Summit, N. J., representing Lager & Hurrell. Hoo-Hoo.

NEWARK, N. J.—Charles Scudder, formerly in the florists' business in this city, died in an ambulance while on his way to the City Hospital March 16.

TUSCALOOSA, ALA.—Miss M. Ryan has opened a downtown establishment in Mrs. Rabitte's store. The new venture ought to be a successful one, as Miss Ryan is an experienced florist and the location is favorable.

Bedding plants will soon be in demand. Send for price list.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Weather conditions were somewhat unfavorable last week, being cold, without much sunshine. Easter stock is coming on in good condition, cut flowers promising to be plentiful. Japanese Iris are on the market, and these, as well as bulb stock, violets and sweet peas, meet an equal demand with roses and carnations. White carnations continue scarce. Easter lilies promise to be about equal to the demand this year.

Various Notes.

O. S. Swanson finds stock excellent and business good. A number of luncheons furnish a good demand.

Miss Whitted had a couple of good reception decorations.

Rice Bros. are booking Easter orders for cut flowers, out-of-town business promising to be good.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is busy packing plant orders for the "early bird." There are some fine Beauties in stock here.

Visitors: Frank Kindler, St. Cloud, Minn.; E. M. Sherman, Charles City, Iowa; R. D. Hoskins, Bismarck, N. Dak.; H. E. Philpott, Winnipeg, Man.

State of Business.

Last week's business differed but little from that of the week previous. Stock of all kinds was plentiful, and while the demand did not entirely consume the supply, at the same time business held up in a manner that was satisfactory to all in the trade.

The retail florists are bothered a great deal each year by the market and truck gardeners, who dabble in the florists' business as a side issue, and each year, as the weather warms up, they bring their products to town and place them on the market. The street market of March 27 was well loaded. The florists would find no reason to complain were it not that these truckers sell their plants at an unreasonably low price. A few of our retailers have to endure the unpleasantness of such a stand in front of their doors.

Business, in general, throughout the last month, has run far ahead of the business of March, 1909. The effects of Lent were not nearly so noticeable this season as in previous years.

Roses are becoming more plentiful each day, and could not be better in color, size and length of stem. The same is true of carnations and other stock.

Typical March weather has prevailed throughout the month. It came in like a lamb, and the old proverb still holds true, for it went out like a lion. We have had plenty of rain, some snow, an abundance of high winds, and a little sunshine, too.

Various Notes.

Many of our local florists and those in surrounding towns are at present having to cut the lilies which they had intended for Easter. All indications point to a scarcity of the best grades of stock, but it is expected that there will be plenty of the cheaper kind, and those who are well supplied with the right goods are looking forward to a fine Easter trade.

A. H. Hendrichs, of New York, visited at the home of George Bartholomew last week.

H. H. Ritter reports a satisfactory business for last week.

Visitors of last week were J. F. Pogue, of Coulthard & Pogue, Cincinnati, O., and Elston Helwig, of Marion, O.

DETROIT.

The Market.

"Something doing every minute" are the glad tidings from Detroit this week. In fact, business has been lively for some time. Funerals have created most of the demand, but there have been some weddings and social events to help matters. There has also been a steady call for plants.

Considerable stock of all kinds is arriving daily, but it is usually cleaned up before evening. About the only stock hanging fire is perhaps some varieties of bulbous stuff. Tulips, especially, do not move any too rapidly.

There is every indication that lilies will be a scarce article this Easter. Warm weather would, of course, help considerably, but the main reason for the scarcity is the heavy losses some growers have experienced through diseased plants.

No doubt there will be plenty of bulbous stock of all kinds for Easter.

Various Notes.

The two Bobs, Klagge and Rahaley, took a flying trip to Canada last week. At the Dale estate, Brampton, the visitors were especially interested in the construction of the greenhouses. The Jennings plant was also visited. Here the carnations and violets were far above the average. In Toronto some of the retail stores were seen, and a stop was made at Dunlop's, where the stock looked tiptop.

What are perhaps the finest Richmond ever produced in this vicinity, comparing favorably with any ever grown, are being shipped in by Robert Klagge.

An observing person can learn much by studying show windows, especially in the florists' business. The clever window decorator is continually showing new ways of using flowers or plants. Or, perhaps you will see what would otherwise be an ordinary plant, so touched up as to tempt many a purse. Not always the largest stores have the best "silent salesmen," either. In our city the window of E. C. Fetters is one of the smallest, but much about the art of arranging flowers can be learned here.

When heard from Monday, March 29, Mrs. J. F. Sullivan was still seriously ill, but the critical stage is past, and the future looks bright again for J. F.

A special meeting of the club was held Monday evening, March 29, for the purpose of further discussion of the fall show question. H. S.

GREENWICH, CONN.—McMillan & Co., florists, have attached the $18,000 automobile of James Everard, of this place, who has disputed a bill of that firm.

NEW GERANIUMS

If you are interested in Geraniums we would call your special attention to the collection of 1907-1908 novelties we have to offer this season, fully described on pages 8-17 of our 1909 Geranium Catalogue, as nearly as possible with the introducers' description. We have made a specialty of importing new varieties for several years, and fully believe that this represents the best collection we have ever offered, or, in fact, the best collection ever gotten together in this country: embracing a range of diversified coloring with combinations of marking almost endless; every color and shade in Geraniums is among them.

Special Offer for Immediate Acceptance

OUR SELECTION OF KINDS

For $10.00 we will send one each of 100 kinds made up from the 1907 and 1908 novelties.

PREPARE FOR EASTER

FROM WHOM WILL WE PURCHASE OUR EASTER SUPPLY?

From our old friend, Godfrey Aschmann, of Philadelphia, of course. He was our man of the past and he shall be our man this Easter, and, as long as he ships us good plants, he shall be our man in the future. He always treated us right before and we can rely upon him. What he advertises is true and is no bluff.

If you would know the fairest sight your eyes can ever see,
Where the most perfect plants are grown, to Aschmann's come with me.
Why! Ne'er since flowers began to bloom was such a glorious show
Of all the best that florists need found in one place to grow.
The lilies are the very best yet seen on Easter day,
Azaleas are whole sheets of flowers, perfect in every way.
The Araucarias matchless are, so are the ferns all green,
With bulbs, and plumed Spiræa, the best you've ever seen.
And Aschmann gives a challenge, let every florist hear,
For flowers or prices, either, no rival does he fear.
If you wish to gather dollars like violets in the spring,
Then send your largest order, his plants the cash will bring.

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week, or earlier, if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come yourself or mail your order direct to headquarters.

Our reputation in growing Easter plants for the wholesale market, to which we ship all over the entire country, Canada and Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans, for many years past, is sufficient guarantee to prove our ability.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have three houses full of the choicest. Only best, well-known American varieties are imported, and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Van der Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tip-top condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade. 6 to 7-in. pots, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Deutsche Perle. This is the best pure double white, 6-in. pots, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50. Outside the Deutsche Perle we have no white to offer in small sizes, because the other varieties, Niobe and Bernard Andrea alba, of which we had a large stock, during transportation across the sea and during winter lost all their buds and have to be carried over for another year. This first variety the year imported does not do well, but makes fine plants the next year. All the varieties, except these two whites, are in fine condition, full of buds and flowers and A-1 stock.

Bernard Andrea alba (white). We have mostly big plants, $1.50, $2.00, $3.00 to $3.50 each; a few smaller sizes, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. Niobe, also white, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Vervaeneana, De Schryveriana (double variegated), 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Dr. Moore and Memoire de L. Van Houtte (double pink), $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Professeur Wolters, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Empress of India, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Apollo (red), 50c, 60c, 75c to $1.00. Other good varieties, such as John Llewellyn, Empereur du Bresil, Talisman, Helene Thelemann, etc., 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Easter Lilies, Lilium Multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily, directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10-in. bulbs, and therefore he ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our greenhouses you must all admit they are "crackerjacks." We sell them cheap, too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-in. pots. An order for a reasonable quantity of other stock must accompany the one for lilies. An order for lilies only will not be filled.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5 good leaves, 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c and 75c; 4-in. 35c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25, 30, 40 to 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 20 to 25 in. high, 50c to 60c.

ARAUCARIAS

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds, same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, 7 to 8-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 3, 4 and 5 tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 20, 25, 30 and 35 in. high, an Elephant for only 75c; a Jumbo for $1.00 and a Holy Terror for $1.25 to $1.50.

Tournesol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14.00 per 100.

Begonia, new, improved Erfordii, 5-in. pots, $2.50 per dozen. Flambeau, 5-in., $2.00 per dozen.

Primula obconica, 5-in., $2.00 to $2.50 dozen.

Yellow and White Daisies, 5-in. pots, $2.00 dozen.

Cineraria hybrida grandiflora. Henry F. Michell Co.'s new improved strain. Our plants and flowers of this strain are twice the size of those of other years, with perfect green foliage, almost as big as a bushel basket, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Spiraea Gladstone. This variety, owing to the dry summer in Holland last year, will be very scarce this Easter, but we, fortunately, secured enough to fill one house full, and they are now in fine condition, full of buds, 6-in. to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each. Spiraea Floribunda, Compacta, Japonica and Superba, 6-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c each.

Hybrid roses, grafted, such as John Laing, Brunner, and Magna Charta, 6-in. pots, 30c; 3 ft. high, 50c, 75c to $1.00. Hermosa, 5-in., 30c to 35c. Rambler Dorothy Perkins, 6-in., 50c to 75c.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c.

Daffodil Von Sion, double-nosed bulbs. This is the best double yellow narcissus in existence, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3 bulbs in one pot, $2.50 to $3.00 per dozen pots.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in. pots, 3 plants in a pot, 25c.

Ficus Elastica (rubbers), 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c.

SOME GOOD DAHLIAS.

G. D. Black, Independence, Ia., gives the following notes on dahlias that have done well in the great corn state:

About the first of May we take the dry roots from the cellar and divide them with a sharp knife, so as to have only one eye or sprout to each piece of root. They form better plants and flowers if only one stalk is allowed to grow. We plant them so that the point from which the sprout starts is from four to six inches below the surface after the earth has been leveled. We cover them only about one-half inch deep at the time of planting, and fill in two or three weeks later, after the plant has formed a strong, hard, woody base. This deep planting has several advantages. It gives the plant a firm anchorage against the winds. It is not so easily affected by the drought, and the new roots are not injured by early freezes in the fall.

The dahlia cannot do its best unless it has plenty of room and good cultivation until the middle of summer. In field culture we make the rows about eight feet apart and cultivate often enough to keep the surface covered with a dust mulch. Dealers in their catalogue descriptions usually extol the beauty of the flower, but fail to mention the height and habit of growth of the plant, and we have frequently been annoyed because those of a dwarf growth in our test bed were completely overshadowed and hidden by others.

These notes would be incomplete without a short description of a few of the varieties that have been more or less satisfactory with us. For convenience we will divide them into a few general classes: Show dahlias have round, regular double flowers, with the petals curving toward the center.

Penelope grows three feet high. We place this at the head of the list, as it is probably the most beautiful dahlia grown. In taking eighty-two orders at the county fair, forty-four customers selected this as their first choice. It is a pure white, tinged lavender.

Gem—Two feet; large, red.

A. D. Livoni—Three feet; pink; an early and profuse bloomer.

Snow—Three feet; pure white.

Uden—Four feet; purple.

Sunrise—Five feet; yellow, tinged red.

Cuban Giant—Six feet, very large; dark purple maroon, long stems.

Magnificent—The plant grows about the shape and size of an inverted bushel basket and makes a magnificent bedder. Large, yellow, sometimes tinged scarlet.

Verdiflora—Two feet; has perfectly double green flowers, formed by a multiplicity of bracts instead of petals.

Decorative dahlias are those which usually have long, loose, flat petals.

Wm. Agnew—Three feet; large; bright scarlet. This is conceded to be the best of its color and class.

Mrs. Winters—Three feet; large; pure white; beautiful form, with rather short stems.

Nymphæa—Four feet; pink, with white center.

Apple Blossom—Two feet; has the color and various shades of apple blossoms. Is very pretty, but has short stems.

Silvia—Three feet; large; pink, long stems.

Zulu—Two feet. This is called the black dahlia, but fades to a dark maroon. Has short stems.

Salmon Queen—Four feet; large; salmon color.

Yellow Queen—Four feet; always loaded with fine yellow flowers.

Client—Five feet; has fern-like foliage and bright red flowers.

Blue Oban—Four feet; large lavender-colored flowers.

Eureka—Three feet; pure rose color; fine.

Pompon dahlias have small flowers, from one to two inches in diameter, and are usually very full of blossoms.

Snowclad—Two feet; pure white.

Catherine—Four feet; yellow.

Sunshine—Four feet; dark red.

Kleine Domatia—Two feet; orange.

Elegante—Two feet; bright pink.

Cactus dahlias have their petals curved back and sometimes twisted to a point.

Galliard—Two feet; bright red.

The Queen—Three feet; pure white.

Countess of Lonsdale—Three feet; salmon buff; has long stems and is probably the most profuse bloomer among the cactus varieties.

Kriemhilde—Four feet. The outer pink petals are curled and twisted, while the center of the flower is composed of broad white petals. We should consider this the best dahlia in the list, especially for a cut flower, if it were only more productive of blossoms, with longer stems.

In single dahlias we have found nothing better than Twentieth Century and its seedlings.

Pres. Viger is called the collarette dahlia, because it is composed of eight broad, flat, dark red petals, with a row of short white petals just inside them and surrounding the large yellow center of stamens and pistils.

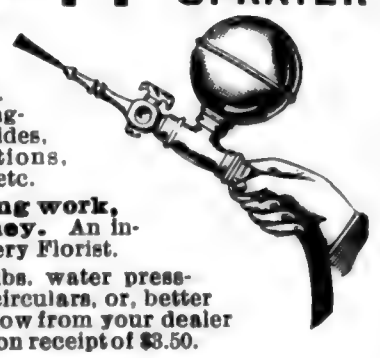
The Market.

Trade has been fairly good the last two weeks, mostly funeral work. Pot plants are selling well at this time. Stock has been fine and arriving in good quantity, but has been cleaned up fairly well at all times. Bulbous stock has been quite plentiful, but there is no surplus to speak of.

Everybody is looking forward to a big Easter trade, and it looks as if all stock will be plentiful except Easter lilies, which have been going to the bad lately. What there are will be mostly very short.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held a meeting at C. A. Roth's greenhouses March 23. There was a large attendance, and the members were served with lunch, cigars, etc., and everyone spent a pleasant evening.



Robert Buehler has been on the sick list, but at last reports was getting along nicely.

James McKellar is back on duty again after his illness, and getting stronger right along.

Wm. Graff was off several days on account of sickness. J. M.

ARE YOU WASTING MONEY?

As truly stated by Prof. A. C. Beal, late of the Illinois Experiment Station:

"The point to keep in mind is that the value of these insecticides (nicotine-solutions) depends on the amount of nicotine in them, and the price should be governed accordingly."

(Prof. Beal's article on "Insecticides for Thrips," in "THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW," Oct. 29, 1908.)

In short, Prof. Beal's article fully substantiates our claim that our "Nico-Fume" products are furnishing the purchaser much more nicotine per dollar invested than is offered by other preparations.

For example:

"Nico-Fume" Liquid, guaranteed to contain not less than 40% nicotine, sells at $10.50 per gallon in single-gallon lots. Yet, through lack of information, some florists are paying $15.00 per gallon for competing preparations, of which the highest claim by any is 45% nicotine.

Don't you see how these florists are wasting money?

For, if 40% nicotine-solution can be bought for $10.50 per gallon, it is folly to pay $15.00 per gallon for only 45% nicotine-solution, because, as 45% is only ⅛ more than 40%, there is consequently only ⅛ more nicotine in a gallon of 45% nicotine-solution than in a gallon of 40% solution; therefore, the price of the 45% preparation should not be more than ⅛ greater—namely, not more than $11.81 per gallon in single-gallon lots, instead of $15.00 per gallon.

Likewise, as to smaller packages: If you can buy a pint of "Nico-Fume" Liquid (40% nicotine) for $1.50, is it wise to pay the same price for an article containing only 30% nicotine, or to pay $2.00 to $2.50 per pint for other preparations when the most nicotine claimed for any of these latter is only ⅛ more than is in a pint of "Nico-Fume" Liquid? For ⅛ more than $1.50 is $1.69, and not $2.00 and $2.50.

QUANTITY DISCOUNTS. We have arranged to allow florists special discounts on quantity orders for "Nico-Fume" Products, our complete schedule of prices being as follows, net cash, f. o. b. Louisville, Ky.:

"NICO-FUME" LIQUID

¼ Pint.....	$ 0.50	5 Gallons.....	$ 47.25—(a saving of 10%)
1 Pint.....	1.50	10 Gallons.....	89.25—(a saving of 15%)
½ Gallon....	5.50	20 Gallons.....	168.00—(a saving of 20%)
1 Gallon....	10.50	40 Gallons.....	315.00—(a saving of 25%)

All quantities in excess of ½ gallon are packed in One-Gallon Cans—and not in kegs or barrels—but without increased charge for the cans; the cans being much easier to handle in greenhouse work than kegs or barrels, besides affording less tendency to waste through accident or carelessness.

PURITY. As the question of purity is one of great importance to florists, we guarantee that "Nico-Fume" Liquid contains only nicotine and water, blended in the proportion we deem best for general florist usage, namely, a 40% nicotine-solution.

"NICO-FUME" TOBACCO PAPER

This product, having been put upon the market some time before we offered "Nico-Fume" Liquid, is so well known to florists and horticulturists throughout the country that detailed comment is doubtless unnecessary, our claim being that "Nico-Fume" Paper is the "strongest, best-packed and easiest-applied" tobacco paper on the market—the sheets being folded and punched, ready for use; thus saving labor and loss of strength through evaporation while handling.

Our complete schedule of prices for "Nico-Fume" Paper is as follows, net cash, f. o. b. Louisville, Ky.:

Can containing 24 sheets,	$0.75	6 Cans, 288 sheets each,	$ 35.10—(a saving of 10%)
Can containing 144 sheets,	3.50	12 Cans, 288 sheets each,	66.30—(a saving of 15%)

GRASSHOPPERS IN ASTER FIELD

In a recent issue of the Review a correspondent writes as follows, over the signature "H. C. S.": "I am intending to grow a field of asters this season and wish to know how to prevent grasshoppers (if they can be prevented) from ruining the crop. Last year they literally destroyed everything, ate up my gladioli bodily, and everything in sight. I sprayed with tobacco solutions and Paris green without effect, but perhaps did not take them in hand soon enough. If you can give any suggestions they will be appreciated."

H. C. S. can find relief by spraying the borders of the field with coal tar, one pint to thirty gallons of water, keeping the mixture thoroughly agitated. This is dirty stuff to use, but it does the business. John Banks.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

The meeting of the Florists' Club, at the office of the Krueger Bros. Co., was not well attended. The weather was rough and the snow drifting made everybody afraid to go out. Only seven members were present. The next meeting will be held at the Mills greenhouse on Starr avenue, East Toledo. Mrs. Mills promises doughnuts and coffee, such as always draw a crowd.

John Barrow bought some lots next his home and has moved a house onto the ones that he bought from the new baseball park location.

Business is reported good from nearly all in the trade. E. A. K.

GRASSHOPPERS IN ASTER FIELD

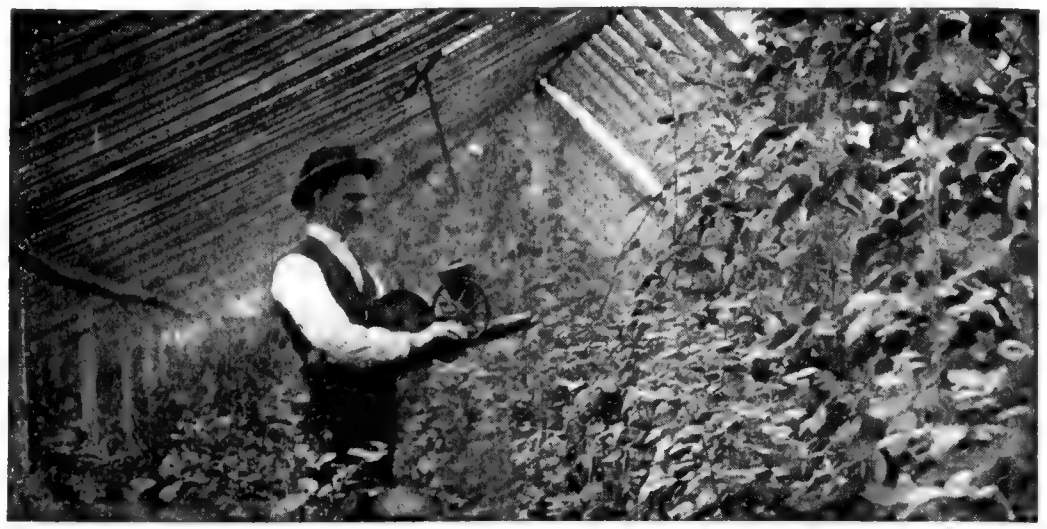
In a recent issue of the Review a correspondent writes as follows, over the signature "H. C. S.": "I am intending to grow a field of asters this season and wish to know how to prevent grasshoppers (if they can be prevented) from ruining the crop. Last year they literally destroyed everything, ate up my gladioli bodily, and everything in sight. I sprayed with tobacco solutions and Paris green without effect, but perhaps did not take them in hand soon enough. If you can give any suggestions they will be appreciated."

H. C. S. can find relief by spraying the borders of the field with coal tar, one pint to thirty gallons of water, keeping the mixture thoroughly agitated. This is dirty stuff to use, but it does the business. John Banks.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

The meeting of the Florists' Club, at the office of the Krueger Bros. Co., was not well attended. The weather was rough and the snow drifting made everybody afraid to go out. Only seven members were present. The next meeting will be held at the Mills greenhouse on Starr avenue, East Toledo. Mrs. Mills promises doughnuts and coffee, such as always draw a crowd.

John Barrow bought some lots next his home and has moved a house onto the ones that he bought from the new baseball park location.



Business is reported good from nearly all in the trade. E. A. K.

GREENHOUSE BUILDING.

On all sides there are the evidences of an active season of greenhouse building. E. F. Kurowski says that the low price of glass and pipe has done a great deal to stimulate the business this year. Not in a number of years has it been possible to build greenhouses so cheaply as this season. The price of glass is lower than it has been in years, and those who are in a position to know say greenhouse sizes can be bought today at practically the cost of production. There was a brief flurry a few weeks ago, with a temporary sharp advance, but prices are again down to about the lowest point touched since the depression came on. Pipe is not quite so cheap, proportionately, as glass, but it is to be had much below last year's prices. Lumber also is off, except the best grade of cypress, but competition keeps the price of mill work at a level where the greenhouse owner has no cause for complaint.

BLACK ANTS.

Will you kindly tell me why my greenhouse is so full of black ants and what to do to get rid of them? C. M. T.

I cannot say what causes the black ants to come into your greenhouses, but they are certainly an annoying pest, and sometimes destructive. You can poison many by mixing a little cyanide of potassium with sugar and laying it about their haunts. Break the cyanide up finely. It is a deadly poison; therefore, use care in handling it. Also do not swallow any more of the fumes than is absolutely necessary. Carbon bisulphide poured in small quantities into their holes will smother many and drive others away. Boiling water, where it can be used with safety to the plants, can be applied with good effect. Good tobacco dust dusted about their haunts is also distasteful.

Keep moisture off the cyanide mixture and do not leave it where there is any possibility of children picking it up.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The Child-Walk Floral Co. has dissolved partnership. The business will be continued by J. F. Walk.

Fall River, Mass.—The greenhouse men at Oak Grove cemetery, working under the direction of Superintendent of Parks Lothrop and Superintendent Lawton of the cemetery, are putting the stock of plants into the new park greenhouses. The plants from the old houses are being removed. Large additions to the stock are to be made.

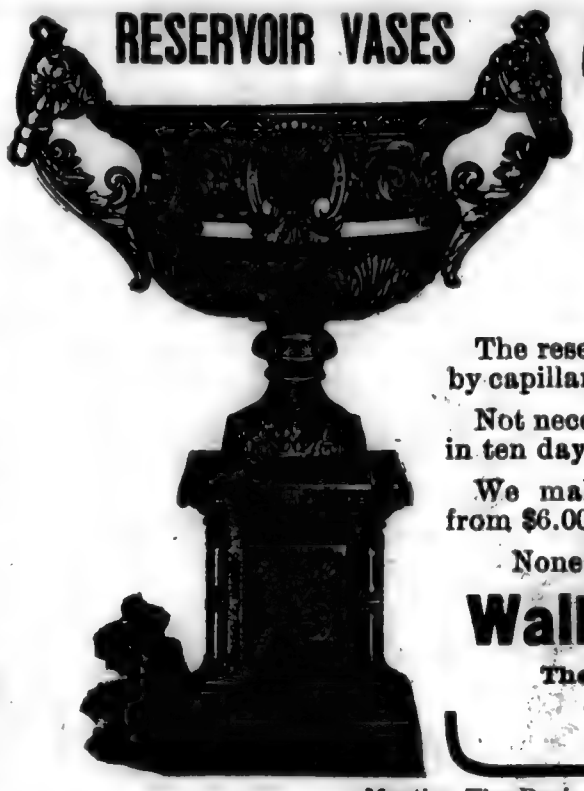
PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

The Florists' Scrap Book is a souvenir publication issued by the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, to signalize its fortieth year in business. The Scrap Book contains 256 neatly printed pages. Its contents consists of clippings from the Review and other publications, closely indexed so that the reader can quickly find the paragraphs relating to any subject of special interest at the moment. In the preface it is said: "For a long time previous to the publication of this book florists everywhere have clipped and saved interesting bits of information from papers here and there, but except in a few cases they have not had time to put them in shape for easy reference. Much of the value of these clippings has been lost, owing to the lack of time for recording them in book form, and hence the publication of this modest little book." The Moninger Co. asserts the book contains over 2,500 useful hints and pointers, and about 700 remedies for various diseases of greenhouse stock.

The Moninger Co. designed the book for free distribution to florists, and it is understood it will be so sent to anyone who sends a business card or writes on a printed letter-head.



CHOOSING THE SHRUBS.

Shrubs are planted around the borders of the lawn, or used to screen the foundation of the house, or to fill in corners.

The shrubbery frame for the yard or garden should be formed on the same principle as a picture frame, the border of a rug, etc. It should harmonize with the picture it encloses, and each shrub in the border should harmonize with its companions. Too often no attention is paid to this kind of harmony, and the shrubbery border becomes a thing of shreds and patches, made up of showy bushes, perhaps beautiful plants in themselves, but arranged without regard to the effect of the shape, color and general appearance of one upon the whole.

In choosing shrubs to grow side by side, consider the foliage and flowers as carefully as you consider the size and shape of the bush. Do not put large masses of light green foliage next to masses of dark, or you will have a patchy effect. By care in selection as regards flowering season, you may be sure of having one or more plants in the border in blossom at all times during the summer. Two shrubs that blossom the same time should not be placed together if the colors clash.

Cincinnati, O.—Leo Fern, the decorator, will add a flower business, having leased a store at 336 West Fourth street.

Greenhouse Heating.

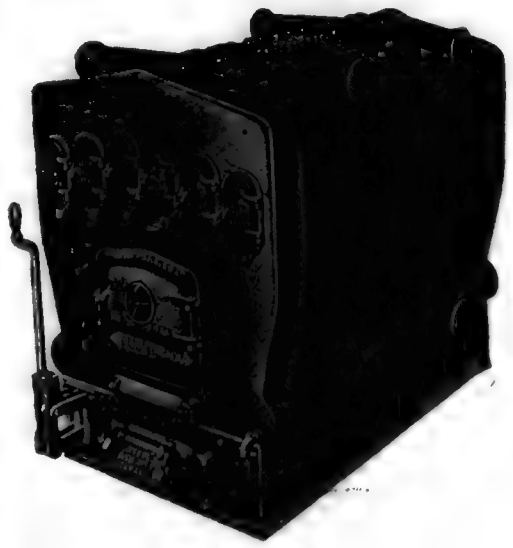
AN UNDERGROUND STEAM PIPE.

We ran a 1½-inch steam pipe underground from the greenhouse to the residence, a distance of two rods. We laid the pipe in a bed of cement and sand, four inches in thickness around the pipe, but a lot of heat escapes through the cement and ground. What would have been the best way to do the job, so as to confine all the heat in the pipe?

V. W. G.

You really did one of the worst things you could have done. A much better plan would be to coat the pipe with asphaltum varnish, then wrap it in asbestos paper and pack it in a box filled with dry ashes; or, better still, to string 8-inch sewer pipe on the pipe and pack the sewer pipe full of mineral wool, having the heating pipe in the middle of the sewer pipe.

L. C. C.



DIAMETER OF SMOKESTACK.

We have a tubular, return boiler, fourteen feet long, with twenty-five 4-inch tubes, fourteen feet long. Our grate is four feet wide and five feet long. The dust chamber at the back is four feet wide, three feet six inches high and two feet deep. We burn a good quality of West Virginia soft coal, but fail to make the steam we require for a good circulation. Our brick stack is nineteen inches square, inside, and is twenty feet high from the top of the boiler. It is but ten feet high above the roof of the boiler-shed. Before building it higher, we should like to know if nineteen inches square is large enough to give us proper draft. We have four houses 20x100, one 15x100 and a shed 12x70. We have a high pressure steam gauge, and when the main valve is open we cannot make steam enough to register. There are no buildings or trees near to mar the draft. Please give us the proper dimensions of stack for the boiler we have.

R. S.

The area of the chimney is almost exactly right for the grate area. If the height of the chimney can be increased without decreasing its internal diameter, the draft will probably be greatly benefited. Sometimes a metal extension of fifteen or twenty feet can be used at small cost and to good advantage when the chimney itself would not permit the extension to this height if brick were used.

ground. The steam has to be carried across the end of our present range, which is 120 feet wide. These pipes are inside, of course, and our present heating plant is for hot water. We wish to heat to 60 degrees at 15 degrees below zero. What should be the capacity of the boiler, to amply heat this house in this Illinois climate? W. C. H.

In this case the boiler should have a rated capacity for at least 1,000 square feet of radiation. The house can be heated by carrying a 2½-inch flow pipe from the boiler to the house and then to the far end under the ridge, where it should divide to supply sixteen carefully graded 1¼-inch returns, which can be carried back to the boiler by using a single 1¼-inch pipe as a main return after all the drips from the manifolds have been gathered into it. L. C. C.

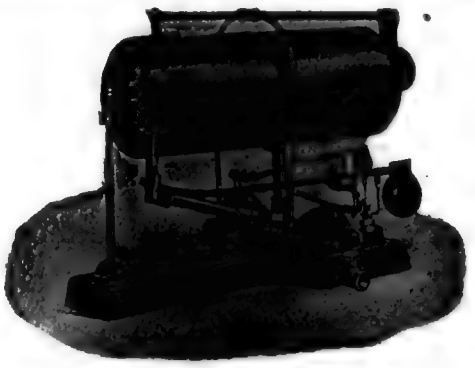
CAPACITY OF BOILER.

Some time ago I asked you whether my boiler was large enough to heat a range containing the following houses, located in Wisconsin: Three houses, each twenty-one feet eight inches wide by 120 feet long; one house 10x120 feet; another house 28x60, and a sixth house 20x36, besides an office 20x20. You replied that you could not answer my question because I had not given sufficient data with regard to the boiler.



The boiler is eleven feet long and five and one-half feet deep; round shell, with water space all around. It contains twenty-four 4½-inch flues, six feet long, and forty-eight 3-inch return flues, six feet long. The outlet is 7-inch and the inlet 5-inch, which I think is not large enough for the outlet. Which is the best way to pipe these houses, for hot water? I have enough 2-inch pipes for returns for one house; the rest of the return pipes are 1¼-inch. I have to buy pipes for two houses. Which do you think is the better, 2-inch or 1¼-inch? L. O.

Your boiler should be ample for the proposed plant, but it will not carry any additions.

I should not use pipe as small as 1¼-inch for hot water, except in short houses. In houses over sixty feet, use 1½-inch pipe, and in houses from ninety to 120 feet, use 2-inch; 1½-inch pipe is about the smallest size it is advisable to use for hot water heating. L. C. C.

PIPING FOR AN EXTENSION.

I have a greenhouse 17½x50, running north and south. On the east side of this is another house, 10x31, with a 10x31 lean-to built against it. The south end of the houses forms a straight line. The boiler-room is at the north end of the short house, and is low enough so that the feed pipes can run under the benches in the main house. Now, I wish to extend the main house about thirty feet north, and would like to make the center bed a solid bed and the two side beds raised. Can I do so and heat from the sides under the beds, or will I have to place some pipes overhead? I wish to use the center bed and the west bed for carnations.

The houses are built on terraces, and the west terrace almost reaches the glass, twenty inches below the plates. I am using a No. 30 Wilks boiler, and hot water. I am located in southeastern Missouri. O. F.

I see no reason to prevent your carrying out the plan proposed, except that the piping will be excessive under the side benches. It will, I believe, prove more satisfactory to place normal piping under the side benches and to supply the necessary additional radiation by installing two coils, one on each side of the middle bench, on the purlin posts. Probably six 1½-inch pipes so placed will be ample, and while they will cut out a little light, they will be less objectionable in this position than under the side benches. L. C. C.

PECKY CYPRESS.

In the last few years there has been a tremendous increase in the use of pecky cypress for greenhouse bench material. John Schillo, of the Adam Schillo Lumber Co., Chicago, who was as largely responsible as any other person for bringing this lumber to the attention of florists, says pecky cypress this year is costing the trade about ten per cent less than in previous seasons, largely due to conditions in the general lumber market, but Mr. Schillo adds that since pecky has come into such universal use for benches, the competition which has sprung up is a safeguard against the price ever going up unreasonably. He says pecky cypress is being sold closer than any other lumber he knows of, although it would be no more than justice to the dealers to allow them a good margin of profit, because pecky cypress lasts at least four times as long as hemlock, and the lumberman gets only one chance in four to make a sale, as compared to the days when hemlock was used.

NEPHROLEPIS WHITMANI.

One of the horticultural trades' publications in England says:

"One cannot write enough in praise of Nephrolepis Whitmani, for it is one of the best ferns, and its uses in decoration are many and various. As affording a material for use in jardinieres, it cannot be excelled, and as large specimens for the decoration of apartments its value cannot be gainsaid; it is enduring as such, and the plant finds ready sale among town dwellers. Moreover, the light green fronds form valuable material for florists' work, and it is easy of culture and extraordinary in regard to its rapidity of growth. Other species of nephrolepis have to be raised, in the majority of cases, from spores, but in that of N. Whitmani the propagation is quicker if offsets, of which a strong plant affords great numbers, are taken off and potted, a method that cannot be followed with such varieties as N. Todeaoides, N. Amerpohlii or N. Bostoniensis Piersoni, and N. Whitmani pays the wholesale cultivator the best of all. It is likewise the hardiest of those named."

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.

Eighteen tons of glass, a whole carload, has arrived in this city to the order of Byron H. Ives, who is preparing to make improvements in his greenhouse plant in the southern part of the city, which will cost when completed over $10,000. Mr. Ives is one of the old time florists, having been in the business here twenty-five years, and believes in keeping a trifle ahead of the times. He will increase his plant to 33,000 feet of glass, which he says will equal the total glass area of all other greenhouses in New Mexico, built or projected. Mr. Ives will install a new eighty-five horse-power boiler, making the total horse-power of his outfit 135. A wholesale department will be added to the retail business, and Mr. Ives declares he is preparing to meet any and all competition.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

GALAX AND SWEET PEAS.

The wreath of galax leaves and sweet peas illustrated in this issue is an especially pretty arrangement where it is desired that the flowers denote youth. The wreath was made by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. Mr. Fox's treatment of the design brings out the idea admirably. The galax, tastefully arranged, makes an excellent background for the sweet peas, Lovely, a soft pink variety, being used. Especial care must be taken in this arrangement that the flowers do not crowd each other.

PHIL.

THE YALE SCENE.

March 19 the graduates of Yale gave a dinner to President Taft at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, New York city, and the event afforded Siebrecht & Son the opportunity for putting up the most elaborate decoration in their many years of business experience. The illustration on page 7 gives only an inadequate idea of the decoration, there being in the scene too many gentlemen in evening clothes. From the REVIEW'S point of view the picture would have been vastly improved if the camera man had pressed the button before the diners came.

The idea is the reproduction of the Yale yard, with its famous old elm trees. The buildings at the left and back of the speakers' table are mural paintings reproducing the college buildings of Old Eli. The flowers used on the tables were Killarney roses, 10,000 of them, and seventy cases of wild smilax were used in improvising the grapevines on the walls and ceiling. The President is quoted as saying that it was the most novel and attractively decorated banquet room in which he ever had sat.

PUBLICITY.

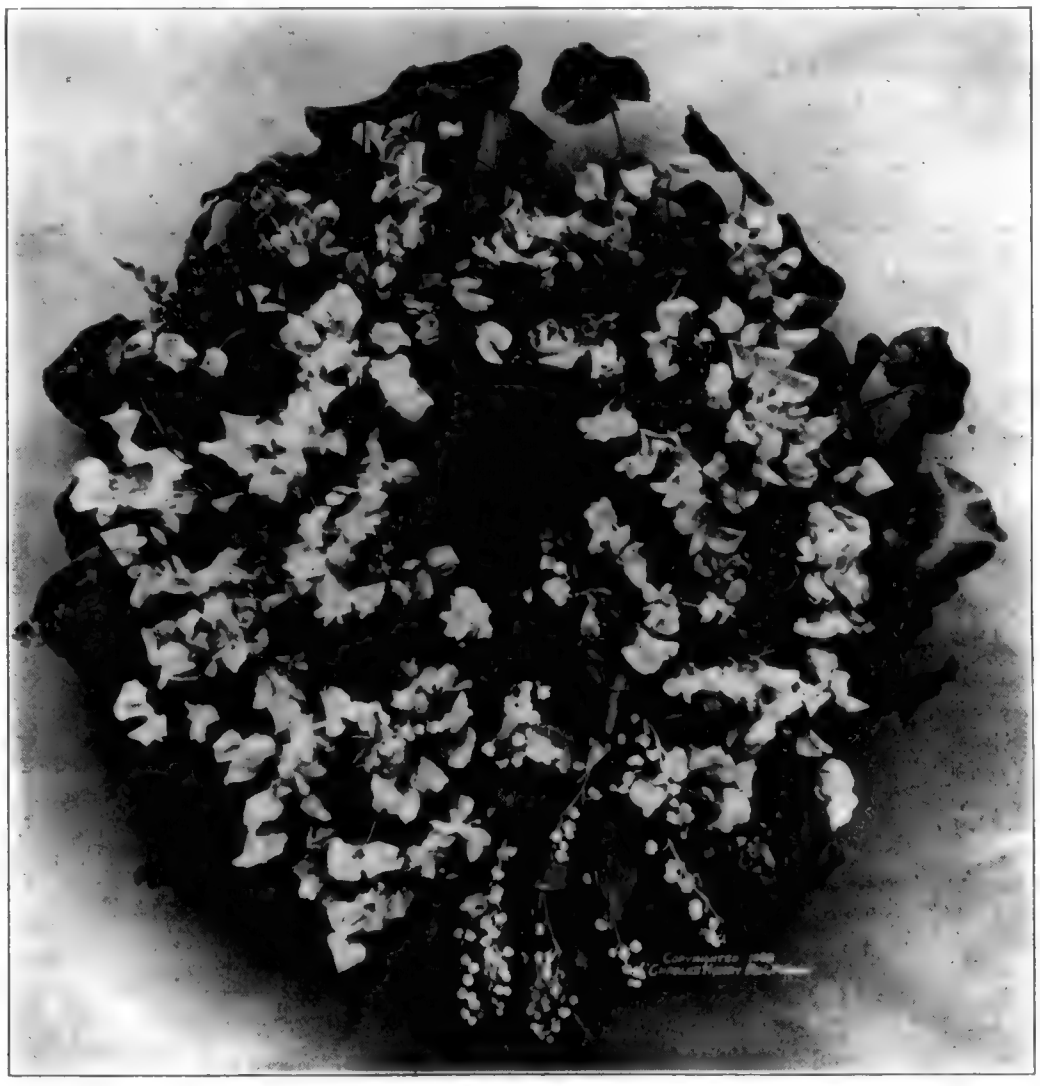
Every retail florist should advertise in his local papers. In a big city, where a retailer naturally draws his patronage chiefly from one section of the town, so that a large part of the circulation of a big daily is outside his territory, the problem is not always the easiest to solve, but Charles A. Samuelson finds that such an advertisement as the one reproduced on page 6, printed in a paper of wide circulation, extends his trade far outside that section of Chicago in which he is located. This advertisement, occupying about seventy lines of agate at 45 cents per line in the Sunday Tribune, brings him orders both by telephone and by mail. Many mail orders come from outside the city, from people who wish to remember Chicago friends at holiday time.

Such advertising is not only a profitable matter for the florist who does the advertising, but it makes business for all florists, and the more there is of it the better. As a result of the advertising done in the daily newspapers, many persons order flowers who would not have done so except for the suggestion given by the advertisement. Of course, the advertiser expects them to order of him, as a certain proportion of them always will do, but every florist's advertisement helps every other florist. The more flowers are seen, talked about or advertised to the general public, the better it is for everyone in the trade.

CAMELLIA JAPONICA.

I take the liberty of sending the enclosed Camellia Japonica buds and will appreciate it if you will let me know if there is anything that can be done to remedy the weakness of this tree. It seldom has a full, open flower on it. It is possible these buds are frost-bitten, but they are a good sample of the hundred or more buds on the tree. There are the same results with protection. While I have five other trees in the yard that mature perfect flowers, I can not understand why this one has this trouble. I see other trees in our city that have this same fault. T. W. B.

The same dropping of the buds you speak of occurs on certain varieties of camellias when grown under glass. The usual causes for this dropping are too high a temperature, dryness at the root and improper soil conditions. The red varieties seem to be even more susceptible than the white and variegated ones to this trouble.



Is your plant where it can obtain a sufficient supply of water? I hardly think that frost can be the reason for the buds falling, or other sorts would be affected also. Keep the plant well soaked with water another year during February and March, when the buds are opening. If this fails to make the flowers develop properly, there would seem to be some inherent weakness in the plant. C. W.

AN INDEPENDENT GLASS TRUST.

At a meeting at Columbus, O., April 1, of representatives of leading independent window glass factories, agreement was reached by which they will concentrate their efforts in the Imperial Window Glass Co. Over ninety-five per cent of the independent manufacturers of the country are said to have signed the preliminary agreement. A committee of seven was appointed to arrange details of incorporation, such as capitalization, the method of stock issue and the nomination of officers.

The new company will be a holding corporation for the present plants as well as a general sales agency. The general offices will be at Pittsburg.

The successful conclusion of the meeting was the result of months of negotiation toward consolidation. The present price lists and discounts were reaffirmed and the reports made showed that the demand for window glass was steadily increasing with the opening of the building season. The present prices will hold until the organization of the new company, when there is but little doubt that increases will take effect.

HOW TO MAKE GOOD LAWNS

SOD AND SODDING.

For Lawns and Parking.

There are few florists who do not at some time encounter the need of producing or renewing sod. In my own state (Iowa), blue grass is so universally used for this purpose that the whole question resolves itself into one of growing blue grass successfully.

The very fact that the practice is so common may make it appear a waste of time to discuss it. Everyone knows that all that you need to do is to put a piece of sod or a bit of grass seed in contact with the fertile soil of Iowa, and of course the grass will grow!

Yet there are many who do not understand the proper treatment of grass, and even those who have repeatedly tried the process may find something of interest in this brief paper. The discussion here presented is restricted to the consideration of sod for lawns and parking, though the fundamental principles involved are applicable to blue grass pastures as well.

Developing a Strong Root System.

Blue grass is usually grown for the purpose of developing a dense, permanent sod. For this purpose it is essential that a vigorous root system be developed, which will not only sustain a rich carpet of green during the growing season, but will maintain the life of the plants during the winter and the dry summer.

It is a fact well known to students of plants that as the surface features become harsher and the supply of food and water becomes less constant or less certain, the plants growing upon such surfaces produce relatively larger root systems and smaller tops, and are thus able to withstand dry conditions, during both winter and summer, which would prove fatal to plants with roots lying nearer the surface.

In view of this well-established principle, it would appear to be advantageous to somewhat abuse blue grass, a plant quite adaptable to a variety of conditions, in order that the root system may be enlarged, and the perpetuity of the sod be thus insured. Experience has shown that this is really true, for blue grass forms a finer and more lasting sod upon poorer soils than upon the richest loam, and it is a significant fact that blue grass and trees, the two greatest and most common beautifiers of our surroundings, may be grown upon soils which are inferior, or almost worthless, for other purposes.

The Soil is Often Too Rich.

Yet most persons who sow blue grass seed for sod consider it desirable to spread rich soil, or a large amount of fertilizer, upon the surface before sowing. Indeed, the writer has known of cases in which property owners removed the poorer surface soil and replaced it with rich soil at considerable expense, and to the detriment of their sod. This practice is apparently sustained by the fact that in rich soil blue grass quickly sends up vigorous blades and culms, but the roots do not penetrate to greater depths, and the first snowless winter or dry summer will cause many of the plants to perish. The blue grass will also be more easily crowded out by weeds. In several cases which have come to the writer's attention, one of them in his own experience, a part of the filling of a lot was made with rich soil, and a part with poorer subsoil, and in every instance the rich soil produced more vigorous looking grass at first, but an inferior sod in the end.

The principal subsoils of Iowa are loess, the yellow clay which covers most of the western, northern and eastern portions of the state; the drift, consisting of joint clays with more or less sand, pebbles and boulders, and appearing at the surface chiefly in the north central part of the state; and alluvium, a combination of the materials of the two preceding, with an admixture of organic matter, found along our streams and lake borders.

Good Sod on Poor Clay Soil.

On the uplands loess and drift, which are chemically practically the same, everywhere form the subsoil, and when this comes to the surface it is regarded as a poor soil. Yet upon these very clays, particularly that known as loess, blue grass will form a sod unequaled elsewhere.

The writer has had excellent success in developing sod on loess clay in response to the following treatment: The surface of the clay is graded to insure good drainage, as blue grass does not thrive on poorly drained areas. If the grounds have been graded so that undisturbed clay is at the surface, it should be plowed or spaded. On recently filled surfaces this is not necessary. The surface material is then reduced to as fine a condition as possible with an ordinary garden rake, and upon it pure blue grass seed is sown. A thin sprinkling of fine, well decayed fertilizer will help the young plants, but coarse and comparatively fresh manure should be avoided. The surface is then reworked with the rake until the seed is just covered.

Treatment of the Young Grass.

If this is done very early in the spring of an ordinary year, no further treatment is necessary for some time, as the natural rainfall and slowness of evaporation at that season of the year will provide sufficiently for the seedlings. During dry seasons or periods, and especially if the effort is made rather late in the season, artificial watering will at first be necessary, but an excess of water should be avoided, as the plants are forced to rapid growth, and become tender. The writer has succeeded in this way in getting good sod from seed sown late in June.

Ordinarily, pure blue grass seed should be used. This gives a more uniform, denser stand, which adds much to the beauty of a lawn. When other seed, such as barley, oats, and so forth, is mixed with the blue grass, the latter is likely to be more or less crowded by the more rapidly growing grains. If such seed is added as a protection to the blue grass seedlings, it should be in relatively small quantities. Clover, with its tendency to mat, also crowds out the blue grass, at least for a time.

Mowing and Watering.

Frequently a crop of weeds will at first overtop the blue grass, and these will serve as nurses for a time. They should, however, be checked before they are too tall to cut with a lawn mower. The first cutting will serve this purpose, and will usually leave a fairly pure stand of blue grass. Cutting should be repeated frequently enough to prevent the blue grass from getting too tall for the lawn mower. This will give a denser and more uniform sod.

The subsequent care of the lawn calls for but little comment. It should not be watered frequently, for the reasons already stated. It should not be cropped too closely, especially during dry seasons. However, a reasonable amount of cutting keeps it denser and more uniform. In places from which the snow is readily swept, or during snowless winters, a dry mulch, to be removed early the following season, will be of advantage. All this may be troublesome, but is practicable on small tracts.

Objections to Sodding.

The laying of sod is a practice not to be encouraged, except in rare cases where the slopes are so steep that seeding is not practicable. The cutting of sod results in the removal of the deeper seated roots, and in our climate this is quite as objectionable as in the transplanting of large trees. The roots form denser clusters near the surface, and are much more exposed to both dry winters and dry summers.

It is also objectionable because it is difficult to join the strips perfectly, and unless done by an expert the work is often unsightly.

Finally, sodding is expensive, an item which even the citizens of Iowa must take into account. The writer knows of a case where a board of supervisors in his state ordered the sodding of a square of public property at an expense of about $2,800, when a better sod could have been secured by sowing seed at a total cost of not more than $150. In this case the sodding was undertaken upon the advice of an "expert" who wanted the job—and secured it.

In another case a man paid $50 for sodding a part of his lot. A neighbor at the same time secured a better sod, seamless, dense and lasting, on an equal amount of ground, for an expense of $3.50 in cash, for seed, and a little labor.

These illustrations show that the expense item is worthy of attention.

For these reasons the practice of laying sod should, in the vast majority of cases, be condemned. B. Shimek.

ANGLEWORMS.

What can we do for our carnation soil? The compost is full of angleworms. The plants are in good shape. G. H. R.

The presence of angleworms in the soil is never desirable, and if in large numbers their presence is most objectionable. I cannot say just what they feed on. They do not, however, feed on the roots of the plants, like grubworms and such. The damage they do is in changing the texture of the soil into a flat, sticky mass, which is unfit for plants to grow in. The best thing to get rid of them with is lime, which can be applied either in dry or liquid form. Sprinkle a handful of dry-slaked lime between each row of plants and water it into the soil. If the liquid is preferred, put a peck of fresh lime into a 50-gallon barrel of water. The next day take the liquid and water the beds with it. The angleworms will soon make themselves scarce.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Hydrangeas.

Memorial day always calls for a big lot of hydrangeas. Owing to the pressure on greenhouse space of Easter stock, it has been impossible to give these an adequate amount of room. They can now be spread out, and, if backward, give the laggards a somewhat warmer house. Hydrangeas require an abundant water supply, and when the flower heads show, liquid manure should be afforded twice a week. Give any showing pale foliage a dose of soot or nitrate of soda water. Stake up any plants which have been crowded and on which some of the shoots will probably lack substance. There are seven weeks between Easter and Memorial day, a longer period than we had in 1908.

Bedding Plants.

Cannas are now making roots freely on the bench, where they were laid after being divided, and must be potted as soon as possible. Four-inch pots are a suitable size for these. They require more warmth than geraniums for two or three weeks yet.

Geraniums can now get more space if other plants have sold, as we hope they have, for Easter. If you have well built,

HOW TO MAKE GOOD LAWNS

SOD AND SODDING.

For Lawns and Parking.

There are few florists who do not at some time encounter the need of producing or renewing sod. In my own state (Iowa), blue grass is so universally used for this purpose that the whole question resolves itself into one of growing blue grass successfully.

The very fact that the practice is so common may make it appear a waste of time to discuss it. Everyone knows that all that you need to do is to put a piece of sod or a bit of grass seed in contact with the fertile soil of Iowa, and of course the grass will grow!

Yet there are many who do not understand the proper treatment of grass, and even those who have repeatedly tried the process may find something of interest in this brief paper. The discussion here presented is restricted to the consideration of sod for lawns and parking, though the fundamental principles involved are applicable to blue grass pastures as well.

Developing a Strong Root System.

Blue grass is usually grown for the purpose of developing a dense, permanent sod. For this purpose it is essential that a vigorous root system be developed, which will not only sustain a rich carpet of green during the growing season, but will maintain the life of the plants during the winter and the dry summer.

It is a fact well known to students of plants that as the surface features become harsher and the supply of food and water becomes less constant or less certain, the plants growing upon such surfaces produce relatively larger root systems and smaller tops, and are thus able to withstand dry conditions, during both winter and summer, which would prove fatal to plants with roots lying nearer the surface.

In view of this well-established principle, it would appear to be advantageous to somewhat abuse blue grass, a plant quite adaptable to a variety of conditions, in order that the root system may be enlarged, and the perpetuity of the sod be thus insured. Experience has shown that this is really true, for blue grass forms a finer and more lasting sod upon poorer soils than upon the richest loam, and it is a significant fact that blue grass and trees, the two greatest and most common beautifiers of our surroundings, may be grown upon soils which are inferior, or almost worthless, for other purposes.

The Soil is Often Too Rich.

Yet most persons who sow blue grass seed for sod consider it desirable to spread rich soil, or a large amount of fertilizer, upon the surface before sowing. Indeed, the writer has known of cases in which property owners removed the poorer surface soil and replaced it with rich soil at considerable expense, and to the detriment of their sod. This practice is apparently sustained by the fact that in rich soil blue grass quickly sends up vigorous blades and culms, but the roots do not penetrate to greater depths, and the first snowless winter or dry summer will cause many of the plants to perish. The blue grass will also be more easily crowded out by weeds. In several cases which have come to the writer's attention, one of them in his own experience, a part of the filling of a lot was made with rich soil, and a part with poorer subsoil, and in every instance the rich soil produced more vigorous looking grass at first, but an inferior sod in the end.

The principal subsoils of Iowa are loess, the yellow clay which covers most of the western, northern and eastern portions of the state; the drift, consisting of joint clays with more or less sand, pebbles and boulders, and appearing at the surface chiefly in the north central part of the state; and alluvium, a combination of the materials of the two preceding, with an admixture of organic matter, found along our streams and lake borders.

close frames, they will now do well in them, provided a layer of warm manure is first trampled in and coated with coal ashes, in which the pots can be partly plunged. The manure gives a slight warmth, which prevents the change from steam or hot water heat proving too sudden.

There is still time to propagate and get nice plants of coleus, heliotrope, alternanthera and other quick rooting and growing bedding plants. Give these, when potted off, a warm house, not less than 60 degrees at night. Petunias, ageratums, verbenas, Salvia splendens and other stock, whether seedlings or cuttings, should be potted off before the seedlings become crowded or the cuttings hard. Be sure to use cheese-cloth for shade over newly potted bedding stock for a few days.

There is still time to sow seeds of quick growing subjects, like Salvia splendens, zinnias, castor oil plants and Cobæa scandens. Put in a successional sowing of asters and stocks and gradually harden off the earliest sowing, which will now succeed well in a frame. Balsams, celosias, marigolds, annual coreopsis and salpiglossis are all annuals which can also be sown now.

Brief Reminders.

Rake over lawns, scratch over mossy spots, apply some fresh loam and reseed. A dressing of a special lawn chemical fertilizer, pulverized sheep manure or a preparation of fine bone and wood ashes, if not already applied, should be given. Use a heavy roller when the condition of the ground will permit, to make the turf as firm as possible.

Do not throw away any left-over azaleas. Pick off the flowers and seed pods. Keep in a cool house and plant outdoors at the end of May. These will make excellent stock for another year, especially if you place them where they can be hosed over.

Keep left-over spiræas in a frame and plant outdoors after danger of frost has gone. Grow for two years, and they will make grand clumps. Cut large clumps in pieces before planting. These will make much finer clumps than any you can import.

Start tuberoses in flats containing moss and sand, or in small pots. It is too early to plant these outdoors yet.

Make a first planting of gladioli outdoors at once; successional plantings may be made until June.

Place some additional shading over palms and tender ferns, such as adiantums.

Biennials and perennials wintered in coldframes should have sashes removed. All this stock will be better planted as soon as possible.

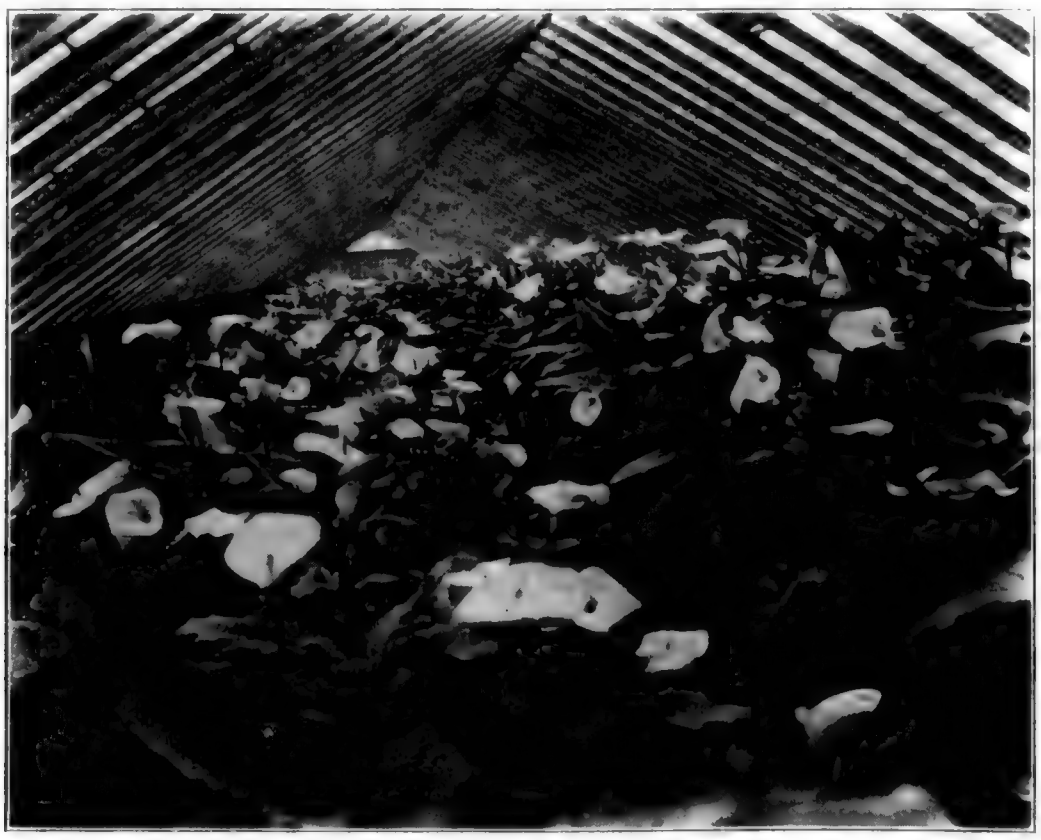
Plant a batch of lily of the valley in a close frame. This will give as fine spikes and better foliage than when grown in a warm greenhouse.

Start achimines, gesneras, tydæas and tuberous-rooted begonias in flats containing finely chopped sphagnum and sand.

Be sure you take off an ample supply of violet runners before discarding your clumps of single violets.

Do not grow dahlias in a close, stuffy house. They want light and plenty of air to make them stocky. Continue to insert cuttings rubbed off with a heel, of varieties you are anxious to increase the stock of.

Vegetable plants, such as cabbage, cauliflower, lettuce and tomato, will do much better in frames than greenhouses. Sowings of celery, tomato, eggplant and peppers are still timely. As a rule, all these vegetables sell best in small flats containing one or two dozen plants each.



A HOUSE OF CALLAS.

Joseph A. Martin, manager for Mrs. J. L. Miller, in Newark, O., has given practical demonstration, he thinks, that it is not necessary to be a specialist in callas in order to grow them successfully. He started, he says, with fifty bulbs, and as these multiplied he gradually gave them more space, until he had filled the house, 12x100 feet, which is shown in the illustration. Besides stocking this house with 640 plants, he has sold about 400 bulbs.

The calla house contains two 4-foot benches, with a 30-inch walk through the center and about fifteen inches of space between the benches and the walls. The benches are raised about six inches. The plants are placed twelve by eighteen inches apart, in six inches of soil. The average temperature of the house is 45 degrees at night and 60 degrees in the daytime.

Mr. Martin says that after Decoration day he quits watering the plants for a period of ten to twelve weeks, and then replants or mulches the beds, as the case may be. The replanting is done once in two years, about September 1, after the benches have been repaired. In the alternate years a mulch is applied, consisting of equal parts of soil and manure.

Last year Mr. Martin cut about 3,500 lilies, or an average of about five blooms and a half per plant. The blooms, he says, have been quite satisfactory in size and quality, and readily brought the average local price, which is about 20 cents apiece at retail. The returns from the crop have therefore been about 90 cents for each square foot of bench space.

HOW OLD IS ANN?

August Poehlmann, head of the Rose Society and secretary and treasurer of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, is 40, born at Milwaukee, October 21, 1869. He is president of the village of Morton Grove, where this firm's cut flower factory is the town's principal industry.

Philip Breitmeyer, His Honor, the Mayor, is 45. Born in Detroit, May 13. (It is supposed to have been Friday.) He married a girl from Philadelphia, which brought him good luck.

Fred Burki, president of the Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co., is 56. Born in Switzerland, he is a quiet man, but at Indianapolis in January he talked so much they told him to "go hire a hall" —he's looking for the biggest one in Pittsburg—to hold the next carnation show in.

Adolphus Gude, of Washington, vice-president of the Gude Bros. Co., manager of a brick yard and director of an orphan asylum, is almost 46. He was born at Knoxville, Tenn., April 20. If there's anything in Masonry in the District he hasn't had or been, call his attention and he'll doubtless go back and get it.

Philip J. Foley, president of the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago, is 42. He weighs only 350 pounds and eight ounces with his overcoat off.

William J. Vesey, director of the S. A. F., lawyer, bank director and ex-judge at Fort Wayne, Ind., will be 52 April 19. His house account at the Columbia Club, Indianapolis, gets an awful boost once every seven years.

George Wittbold is 77. He was born in Hanover, Germany, but started his greenhouses on the present site when it was all open prairie for over a mile toward the city. Now he's the oldest florist in Chicago and the town goes miles beyond.

Joseph Heacock, of Wyncote, Pa., is 63. Because of his Quaker training, even though you act like the teufel, he'll give thee thy due.

Albert F. Amling, president of the company that bears his name, at Maywood, Ill., is 43. He was born in the town and has lived there all his life, but in spite of that they made him vice-president of their one bank—that's now his hobby.

GREENHOUSE FOUNDATIONS.

We are planning to build anew after our fire, and the walls of the new houses, we think, will be either cement or stone. In case of using either, how far is it necessary to go below the surface of the ground with the wall? In this Wisconsin climate, of course, in some winters the frost goes down deep, and if it is necessary to get below that line, it would be pretty expensive. Is it necessary?

Z. K. J.

Modern greenhouses are seldom built with solid walls, because of the fact that the intensity of frost during hard winters has a tendency to heave the foundations. The usual method is to use iron posts to support the roof and walls. These are set in concrete and can be placed deep enough to be beyond the influence of frost at little expense. Foundations for solid walls should be beyond the depth of frost, to be secure.

Any of the horticultural builders who advertise in the REVIEW will gladly mail you literature covering this and many other points which will certainly be of great interest to you. RIBES.

WANTED—IMPROVED ZINNIAS.

Universal gratitude, from the small country retailer, is awaiting the man who produces a pure white and a baby pink zinnia. We get good asters, but their season is limited. The zinnia blooms all the time and is most useful for funeral work, only the colors are not good. I have tried seed from the best seedsmen all over the country, with the same poor results. J. A. W.

Geraniums

DISEASED GERANIUMS.

Enclosed you will find some diseased geranium leaves. I would be pleased to know what the trouble is, its cause and cure or prevention. The plants are in a lettuce house where the night temperature carried is about 45 degrees.

S. A. C.

The leaves forwarded have a disease not uncommon on plants grown both outdoors and under glass. In the open air the trouble usually comes on during spells of hot, steamy weather, when there is little sunshine, and invariably affects plants grown in the full sun more than those grown in partial shade. Under glass it appears to make little difference whether plants get full sun or are somewhat shaded, but I have noticed that plants grown for some time in shade and removed to a sunny location are more susceptible to this leaf disease than others differently treated. At first I concluded that it was a case of sunburn, owing to the leaves being rather soft and tender, but the same trouble has occurred on plants always in the sunniest possible spot, which upsets that theory.

Geraniums, at least those grown for bedding out, are better never shaded at all. The hardier they can be grown, the less the liability to disease. It is better to avoid using barnyard manure in the soil, unless it is old and well decayed. Bone meal is safer to use. It also promotes floriferousness, as against leaf growth. Plants should never be kept constantly wet. A good drying out once or twice a week hardens them, and the tougher the leaves the less the chances are of disease striking them. Decaying foliage should be carefully removed, and not thrown under the bench, to help keep the plants healthy. Cleanliness is of paramount importance in plant culture. A night temperature now of 45 degrees should be all right. I prefer 48 to 50 degrees during the winter.

I have probably not given any direct answer to your question as to the cause of and cure or prevention for geranium disease. I believe it is usually due to improper soil, a too wet root condition, a neglect to keep the plants properly spaced and cleaned, too much moisture on the foliage and growing the plants in a shaded house. A dry atmosphere is to be preferred to a moist one. One or two of the state experimental stations have taken up this subject, but so far as can be learned have been unable to throw any new light on it. C. W.

ORNAMENTAL CRAB APPLES.

Their Increasing Popularity.

The pyrus, or crab apples, are among the most beautiful of our low growing trees. Their flowering period immediately precedes that of the lilacs, and, while their blooms are a little more fleeting, they have the advantage of carrying profuse crops of ornamental little fruits, which hang in some cases until Thanksgiving. The various crab apples usually flower from the beginning until the middle of May in southeastern Massachusetts, with the exception of Bechtel's double-flowered variety, which persists until early June.

There would seem to be a fine field for the extended culture of these beautiful and in every way satisfactory flowering trees. Many nurserymen have too much neglected them, and are just waking up to the fact that they must increase their stock of them, owing to the growing demand. Many commercial florists do a considerable business in trees and shrubs, yet how seldom do we find them planting any of the pyrus! Let them secure a few trees and plant one on their own lawn, and once their customers have seen its beauty, they will have no trouble in selling all they can raise.

Must Have Ample Room.

Spring is the best time to plant the ornamental crab apples, although they can be successfully moved in fall also.

August Poehlmann, head of the Rose Society and secretary and treasurer of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, is 40, born at Milwaukee, October 21, 1869. He is president of the village of Morton Grove, where this firm's cut flower factory is the town's principal industry.

Philip Breitmeyer, His Honor, the Mayor, is 45. Born in Detroit, May 13. (It is supposed to have been Friday.) He married a girl from Philadelphia, which brought him good luck.

Fred Burki, president of the Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co., is 56. Born in Switzerland, he is a quiet man, but at Indianapolis in January he talked so much they told him to "go hire a hall" he's looking for the biggest one in Pittsburg to hold the next carnation show in.

Adolphus Gude, of Washington, vice president of the Gude Bros. Co., manager of a brick yard and director of an orphan asylum, is almost 46. He was born at Knoxville, Tenn., April 20. If there's anything in Masonry in the District he hasn't had or been, call his attention and he'll doubtless go back and get it.

Philip J. Foley, president of the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago, is 42. He weighs only 350 pounds and eight ounces with his overcoat off.

William J. Vesey, director of the S. F., lawyer, bank director and ex-judge Fort Wayne, Ind., will be 52 April 19. His house account at the Columbia Club, Indianapolis, gets an awful boost on every seven years.

George Wittbold is 77. He was born in Hanover, Germany, but started greenhouses on the present site when it was all open prairie for over a mile westward the city. Now he's the old florist in Chicago and the town goes miles beyond.

Joseph Heacock, of Wyncote, Pa., is 63. Because of his Quaker training, even though you act like the teufel, he'll give thee thy due.

Albert F. Amling, president of the company that bears his name, at Maywood, Ill., is 43. He was born in the town and has lived there all his life. But in spite of that they made him vice president of their one bank—that's now his hobby.

GREENHOUSE FOUNDATIONS.

We are planning to build anew after ... fire, and the walls of the new houses, ... think, will be either cement or stone. In case of using either, how far is it ...essary to go below the surface of the ground with the wall? In this Wisconsin climate, of course, in some winters the frost goes down deep, and if it is necessary to get below that line, it would be pretty expensive. Is it necessary?

Z. K. J.

Modern greenhouses are seldom built with solid walls, because of the fact that the intensity of frost during hard winters has a tendency to heave the foundations. The usual method is to use iron posts to support the roof and walls. These are set in concrete and can be placed deep enough to be beyond the influence of frost at little expense. Foundations for solid walls should be beyond the depth of frost, to be secure.

Any of the horticultural builders who advertise in the Review will gladly mail you literature covering this and many other points which will certainly be of great interest to you. Ribes.

WANTED—IMPROVED ZINNIAS.

Universal gratitude, from the small country retailer, is awaiting the man who produces a pure white and a baby pink zinnia. We get good asters, but their season is limited. The zinnia blooms all the time and is most useful for funeral work, only the colors are not good. I have tried seed from the best seedsmen all over the country, with the same poor results. J. A. W.

Geraniums

DISEASED GERANIUMS.

Inclosed you will find some diseased ...anium leaves. I would be pleased to ...w what the trouble is, its cause and ... or prevention. The plants are in a ...ce house where the night temperature carried is about 45 degrees.

S. A. C.

... leaves forwarded have a disease uncommon on plants grown both out- ... and under glass. In the open air ...rouble usually comes on during spells ...ot, steamy weather, when there is ... sunshine, and invariably affects ... grown in the full sun more than ... grown in partial shade. Under ... it appears to make little difference ...er plants get full sun or are some ... shaded, but I have noticed that ... grown for some time in shade and ...d to a sunny location are more susceptible to this leaf disease than others differently treated. At first I concluded that it was a case of sunburn, owing to the leaves being rather soft and tender, but the same trouble has occurred on plants always in the sunniest possible spot, which upsets that theory.

Geraniums, at least those grown for bedding out, are better never shaded at all. The hardier they can be grown, the less the liability to disease. It is better to avoid using barnyard manure in the soil, unless it is old and well decayed. Bone meal is safer to use. It also promotes floriferousness, as against leaf growth. Plants should never be kept constantly wet. A good drying out once or twice a week hardens them, and the tougher the leaves the less the chances are of disease striking them. Decaying foliage should be carefully removed, and not thrown under the bench, to help keep the plants healthy. Cleanliness is of paramount importance in plant culture. A night temperature now of 45 degrees should be all right. I prefer 48 to 50 degrees during the winter.

I have probably not given any direct answer to your question as to the cause of and cure or prevention for geranium disease. I believe it is usually due to improper soil, a too wet root condition, a neglect to keep the plants properly spaced and cleaned, too much moisture on the foliage and growing the plants in a shaded house. A dry atmosphere is to be preferred to a moist one. One or two of the state experimental stations have taken up this subject, but so far as can be learned have been unable to throw any new light on it. C. W.

ORNAMENTAL CRAB APPLES.

Their Increasing Popularity.

The pyrus, or crab apples, are among the most beautiful of our low growing trees. Their flowering period immediately precedes that of the lilacs, and, while their blooms are a little more fleeting, they have the advantage of carrying profuse crops of ornamental little fruits, which hang in some cases until Thanksgiving. The various crab apples usually flower from the beginning until the middle of May in southeastern Massachusetts, with the exception of Bechtel's double-flowered variety, which persists until early June.

There would seem to be a fine field for the extended culture of these beautiful and in every way satisfactory flowering trees. Many nurserymen have too much neglected them, and are just waking up to the fact that they must increase their stock of them, owing to the growing demand. Many commercial florists do a considerable business in trees and shrubs, yet how seldom do we find them planting any of the pyrus! Let them secure a few trees and plant one on their own lawn, and once their customers have seen its beauty, they will have no trouble in selling all they can raise.

Must Have Ample Room.

Spring is the best time to plant the ornamental crab apples, although they can be successfully moved in fall also.

As they are low growing trees, with a considerable spread, they must not be crowded up in a shrubbery. If planted there, plan to gradually cut out less important subjects to give them a good chance to grow. As individual lawn specimens there can be nothing finer. Dotted along a hillside or in groups, they are very telling. Be sure to give them ample room to spread, as the majority will make plants fifteen to twenty feet in diameter when well developed.

Prepare a liberal hole for each tree and it will grow with astonishing rapidity. Some varieties are, when young, rather ungainly in shape, but become more symmetrical as they increase in size. The pyrus do not flower profusely one year and scantily the next, as lilacs sometimes do, but are always smothered with bloom each spring. As regards insect attacks, they are peculiarly free. Occasionally aphis troubles them, but whale oil soap controls it. San Jose scale will attack them and borers at times trouble them, but not to any considerable extent.

Some Choice Varieties.

A few of the best varieties of pyrus are: P. Malus floribunda, one of the finest sorts; flowers red or rosy red, very showy; fruit size of large peas, reddish in color, disappearing with frost. P. Malus Toringo, which was found by Prof. Sargent growing several thousand feet above the sea in Japan; flowers vary from pure white to rosy red, the variety atrosanguinea being very deep; the fruits of this pyrus are much prized by the Japanese for preserving. P. baccata, Siberian crab, a small, compact, spreading tree, pure white flowers, fruit yellow and red; this pyrus is a native of Siberia and Manchuria; it rather closely resembles P. floribunda. P. Malus Halliana grows eight to fifteen feet in height; it has an open crown, rose colored flowers and brownish red fruit, with large seeds; this is also known as P. Malus Parkmani and is a semi-double form of P. Malus floribunda. P. Malus Scheideckeri was sent out in 1896, has flowers pink in color, flushed with rose, and is free blooming; it is one of the finest of the genus and is being quite largely planted. Pyrus Malus Ioensis, the western crab apple, is a popular and well known form; the double variety, P. Malus Ioensis flore pleno, is the finest of the whole crab apple family; the individual flowers are as large as Soupert roses and deliciously scented; this variety is more erect and robust in habit than the majority of the pyrus; also catalogued as P. angustifolia; no one can go wrong in planting this magnificent sort.

The ordinary crab apples are worthy of a place on any ornamental grounds. What can be finer than specimens of Hyslop or Transcendent, which are veritable sheets of snowy whiteness each season, and make the air for hundreds of feet away redolent with their delicious odor?

The foregoing are merely a few of the best pyrus, or malus, as the botanists now prefer to call them. There are quite a number of other varieties of merit. Their ease of culture, hardiness, beauty, both in flower and fruit, and early blooming should commend them to many florists and gardeners for landscape effects.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION SHOW IN LONDON.

The sixth show of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society was held in London, England, March 24. Beyond doubt it was a most successful show, but in several classes there was a slight falling off in the number of entries. This was accounted for by the severe wintry weather of March, which for frosts and low temperatures generally has not been equaled for many years. Hayward Mathias, the honorary secretary of the society, was the only competitor in Class 1, for group of carnations 3x10 feet, and was awarded first prize and the society's gold medal.

Considerable interest centered around Class 2, as the first prize was the challenge cup presented by the American Carnation Society, and this is the first occasion the cup has been competed for. Bell & Sheldon proved the winners. The class is for three vases of American varieties, introduced in or since 1906. Bell & Sheldon put up Afterglow, Aristocrat and Winsor; second, A. F. Dutton, Ivor, with Rose-pink Enchantress, Victory and Winsor; third, C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden, with Afterglow, Victory and White Enchantress. Bell & Sheldon were also awarded the society's silver gilt medal for the best vase in the show, Britannia securing them this honor with magnificent, fresh blooms of grand size and color.

For thirty-six blooms of any variety, white, W. H. Lancashire, Guernsey, was first with White Perfection.

For thirty-six blooms, blush, all the prizes went to Enchantress, in the following order: W. H. Lancashire, W. H. Page, of Hampton, and Bell & Sheldon.

For thirty-six blooms, light pink, rose or salmon, Bell & Sheldon, first with Winsor; W. H. Lancashire, second with Mrs. Burnett.

Thirty-six deep pink or cerise, Lancashire, first with Lawson; Engelmann, second with Afterglow.

Thirty-six crimson, C. Engelmann, first with Carola, a seedling of his own, not yet in commerce; Lancashire, second with President.

Thirty-six scarlet, Newport Nurseries, first with Victory; Lancashire, second with Robert Craig.

For thirty-six any other color, Engelmann came in first with Jessica, and for thirty-six of any variety not in commerce the same competitor again scored, with Carola.

In the classes for eighteen blooms in a vase, the principal prizes were awarded as follows: White, Bell & Sheldon, first with Lady Bountiful; C. Engelmann, second with White Perfection. Blush, C. Engelmann, first with Enchantress; D. M. Collins, Swanley, second with the same variety. Light pink, rose or salmon, A. F. Dutton, first with Rose-pink Enchantress; C. Engelmann, second with Welcome. Deep pink or cerise, Bell & Sheldon, first with Afterglow; A. F. Dutton, second with Pink Imperial. For crimsons, Bell & Sheldon led with President, A. F. Dutton following with Harlowarden. For scarlets the prizes went to Bell & Sheldon and D. M. Collins, both showing Britannia.

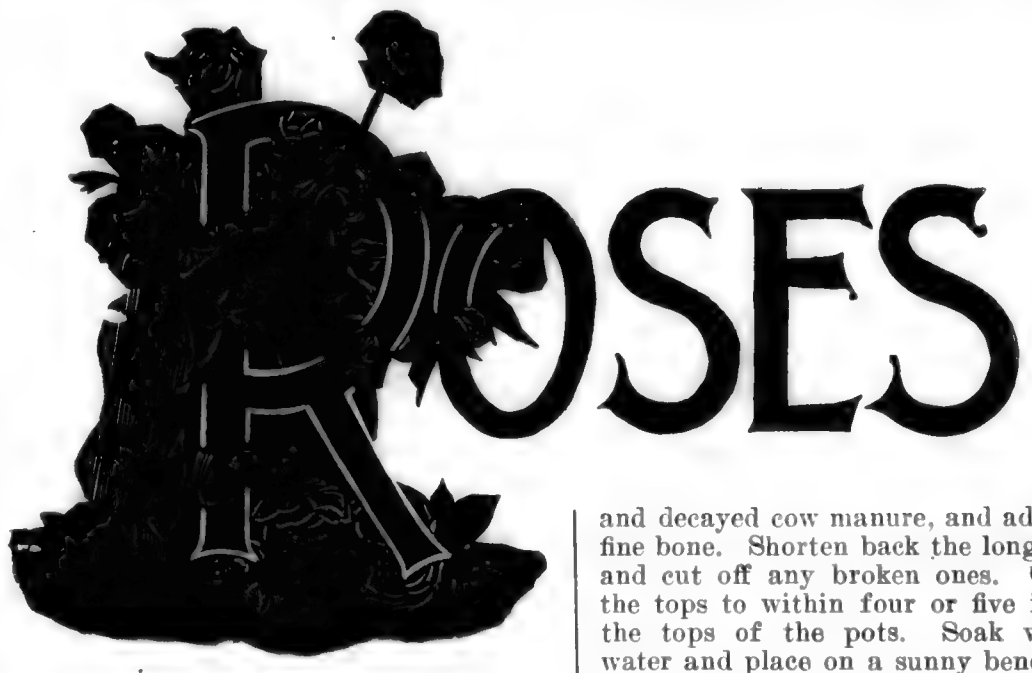
The best decorative vase of carnations was arranged by Bell & Sheldon, a vase of Mrs. Burnett; second, D. M. Collins; third, A. F. Dutton. For bouquet of carnations, R. F. Felton, London, proved the winner with Mrs. Burnett.

Dinner-table decorations with carnations were a pretty feature of the show. In these James Agate, Havant, was first, with a nice arrangement of Fair Maid. Fair Maid was the variety used on the second prize table also, and Enchantress on the third.

The president's challenge cup for the best group of carnations in pots was won by A. Grubb, gardener to C. F. Raphael, and in the remaining classes, open to gardeners and amateurs only (those in the trade excluded), there were some spirited contests.



Non-competitive exhibits from a number of growers greatly enhanced the appearance of the show. Specially fine were the exhibits from C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden, who never exhibited a finer group; a gold medal was awarded. In this class H. Burnett, Guernsey, received a gold medal also.

Silver gilt medals were awarded to Hugh Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, and W. H. Page, Hampton, and silver medals to J. Peed & Son, W. Cutbush & Son and W. H. Lancashire, the last mentioned for a fine exhibit of Rose Dore.

On this occasion the floral committee had little to do, there being only one seedling before their notice, namely, Black Chief, from Hugh Low & Co., a variety of great freedom of growth and floriferousness. The committee, however, did not adjudicate upon it, but expressed a desire to have it placed before them at some future date.

Members and friends dined together in the Hotel Windsor at the close of the show, with J. S. Brunton in the chair. The toast list included "The Donors of Special Prizes," and in proposing it the chairman referred in appreciative terms to the friendly and gracious manner in which the American Carnation Society had presented a challenge cup. He also congratulated Bell & Sheldon upon being the first to have their names engraved upon it. The toast was most enthusiastically received and regret was expressed that no member of the American Carnation Society was present to respond. Others who took part in the proceedings, either on the toast list or in the animated discussion on carnations which followed, included S. Mortimer, vice-chairman; H. Mathias, honorary secretary; L. J. Cook, honorary treasurer; E. F. Hawes, exhibition superintendent; R. F. Felton, London; G. W. Walshaw, Scarborough; W. Wallace, Dunstable; C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden; J. Robson, Manchester, and W. H. Page, H. F. Mason and W. A. Sherwood, all of Hampton, one of the leading districts for the cultivation of carnations for Covent Garden market.

BEE.

RAMBLER ROSES.

The present is a suitable time to purchase and pot up a batch of the various ramblers for flowering at Easter, 1910. Of course, it is possible that some florists are propagating and growing on their own stock, but the majority prefer to purchase plants from some reliable nursery. Get strong field-grown stock on its own roots. These can be had at moderate prices. We have never found any advantage in budded over own-root ramblers for forcing purposes. Until you have time to pot them, heel outside, being sure that you work plenty of moist earth around the roots and tramp firmly.

Pots from six to eight inches in diameter will hold any of the field-grown plants. Use a compost of fibrous loam and decayed cow manure, and add a little fine bone. Shorten back the longest roots and cut off any broken ones. Cut back the tops to within four or five inches of the tops of the pots. Soak well with water and place on a sunny bench, where they will soon start into growth. Numerous growths will start from the bottom. Allow three to five to grow, rubbing off the others. Keep the shoots tied up as they grow, and give them indoor culture until the end of June. Then plunge outdoors in rows. Make a fence by stringing one or two strands of galvanized wires from posts and tie the shoots to them. Stock treated thus will give plants far superior to such as you may pot in the fall, and will give you financial returns to amply compensate for the additional labor involved.

Of the various ramblers now in common use, a great decline is noted in the popularity of the old Crimson Rambler. The double pinks, like Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins and Farquhar; singles, like Hiawatha and Delight, and novelties, like the new German variety, Tausendschon, will all pay to grow. The last named seems destined to become extremely popular, and is proving a first-class seller this week at the better class stores.

HARDY ROSES.

While late fall is preferable to spring as a planting time for hybrid perpetual roses, the overwhelming majority of growers do their planting in April. The sooner this work is done, the better. Be sure roots are not exposed to the air any longer than is necessary. If budded stock is used, plant deeply, so as to cover three or four inches over the buds; and you cannot tramp the ground too firmly. Of course, generous preparation of the soil will insure the best results, but do not bring the manure used in direct contact with the roots. Do not prune back newly planted hybrid perpetuals for ten days or a fortnight.

In the case of hardy roses which have wintered outdoors, any pruning should be completed without delay. Cut out all weak, old and dead wood entirely, leaving the strong, clean, vigorous shoots. Pruning of these will depend on the vigor of the varieties. As a general rule, twelve to fifteen inches will do to leave on the most vigorous growths, and five to eight inches on weaker ones. Do not be afraid to prune hard. It will mean stronger growths and finer flowers in June.

Hybrid teas are gaining wonderfully in popularity, and deservedly so. Their persistent flowering qualities are great points in their favor. In only the more favored locations are these reliably hardy. Many growers lift and bury their plants each fall. This stock should be planted as soon as possible. Hybrid teas must be pruned lightly. Remove dead wood and weak shoots, shortening the vigorous ones only a few inches. For hybrid teas select ground which is lighter than what hybrid perpetuals succeed in. They do well in sandy soil, if well manured and mulched in summer.

Ramblers never came through the winter in better condition than they are now in. If you forgot to cut out last year's flowering wood, remove it now. You probably have sufficient young bottom canes of last year's growth to cover the posts, or trellises. Pruning of the strong canes will merely consist of removing dead or weak tips. Cut out any dead or weak canes. The latter will give no flowers, as a rule. Prune Persian Yellow, Austrian Copper and Harrison's Yellow lightly.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Easter is now in the air and everyone is anticipating splendid business. Certainly advance sales, if they are any criterion, would seem to indicate a much heavier volume of trade than a year ago. There are no striking advances in prices, but all good material seems likely to be sold without trouble. In roses, Beauties are none too abundant, but there is a good supply of Richmonds and Killarneys, the latter being fine. The old Brides and Bridesmaids are still to be reckoned with and are of exceptional excellence at present. Prices had not shown much advance early in the week. Carnations continue to move well, and while trade seems a little quiet now, they will clean out at a lively gait at the end of the week.

Lilies are selling at $10 per hundred cut and an average of $12.50 in pots. A few are selling below these prices, but there is a strong probability of an advance late in the week, for it looks as though there would be barely enough lilies for the demand. As a rule, plants are well flowered, but remarkably dwarf. Callas are in fair supply. Violets are abundant, but are creeping up in price. Good singles will bring $1 per hundred later in the week. Sweet peas are superb. I doubt if any other market in America can show a finer lot. Bulbous stock moves quite well. There has been no glut in it, as a year ago. Marguerites, both yellow and white, are plentiful, as are English primroses. Some nice Gladiolus The Bride, Spanish iris, ranunculus, anemones, ixias and other popular spring flowers are seen.

Pot plant trade is brisk, particularly in the case of lilies. The next best sellers are rambler roses and azaleas. A bigger proportion of the ramblers than ever are pink, attesting the popularity of that color. There is a good trade being done on southern smilax, galax leaves and hardy ferns.

Club Field Day.

The weather was the reverse of favorable for the field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at Waverley, April 3, a cold rain falling most of the afternoon. Arriving first at the establishment of the W. W. Edgar Co., the party, some forty in number, was taken in hand by H. H. Bartsch, the capable manager, and conducted over the various houses to see the Easter stock, which was all in fine shape; lilies were remarkably good, azaleas splendid and Baby Ramblers unusually well done. Lilacs, genistas,

HERMAN D. SCHILLING.

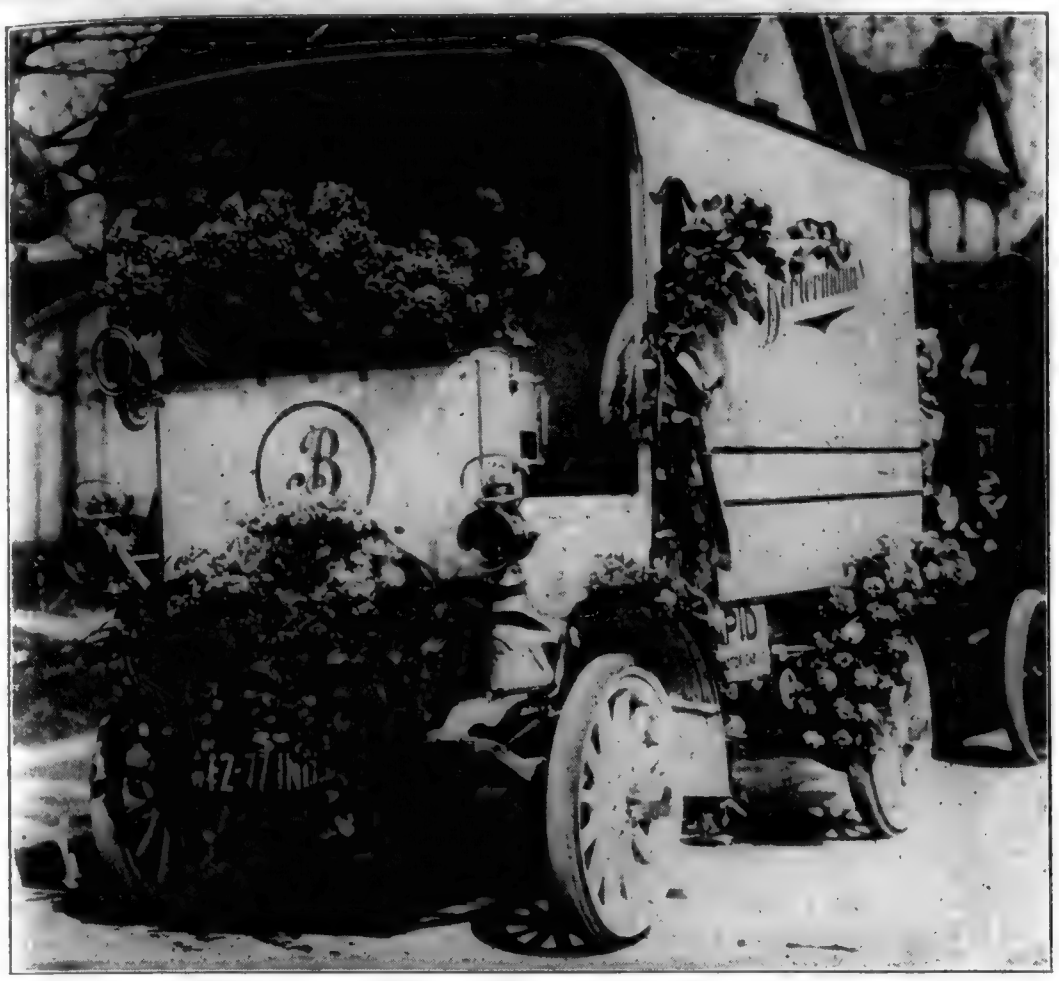
Herman D. Schilling was born in 1877, near Bremen, Germany. He attended the public schools until he was 14 years of age and then served an apprenticeship of four years at the carpenter trade. At the age of 18 he came to America and worked at the carpenter trade in Indianapolis until he was 26 years old. This was six years ago. Then he began his career as a florist by renting a small greenhouse outside of the city, but at the end of six months he discontinued business there and bought the present place of 7,500 feet of glass at 1828 Shelby street, Indianapolis. This may seem like rapid progress for a beginner, but he had a natural aptitude for the trade and had previously read all the books that he could get hold of, besides gaining practical knowledge by visiting the greenhouses in the city whenever he had an opportunity. So the business was not exactly new to him.

He has worked up a good retail trade. Like other people in all lines of business, he found the last year to be a rather dull one, but now trade is becoming active again. He grows a general line of stock, such as bedding plants, carnations, etc., and has a good trade in funeral designs. He sells all his output in a store connected with the greenhouses. It is safe to say that he produces stock of as high a quality as do many who have been in business a long time.

OBITUARY.

William Hagemann.

William Hagemann, of New York, widely known in the trade as an importer of bulbs and plants, died of apoplexy Monday, April 5, and was buried at his home at Bloomfield, N. J., April 7.



Mr. Hagemann was a man in middle life and had spent many years in the trade. He was known to the leading dealers throughout the United States through the periodical business calls made upon them, and his connections included many of the best known European houses, for the firm of Hagemann & Co. did both an import and export business. For some years Mr. Hagemann was in partnership with Charles F. Meyer, the firm name being Hagemann & Meyer. Upon the termination of the partnership, in 1903, Mr. Meyer continued in the business under his own name at 99 Warren street, and Mr. Hagemann carried on the operations at 55 Dey street. He was a man of modest, quiet disposition and sterling character, and wherever men grew to know him it was to give him respect and friendship.

William Freytag.

William Freytag, a well-known florist at Milwaukee, Wis., took his own life on the morning of Wednesday, April 7, by inhaling illuminating gas. He was 43 years of age and had become despondent through continued ill health. He is survived by a wife and one son. The funeral will be held on Saturday, April 10, at 2 p. m., from his residence at 793 Twelfth avenue, where he had a range of some 15,000 square feet of glass, growing a general stock.

J. B. Boland.

J. B. Boland, one of the best known florists in San Francisco, died at his home in that city March 23, aged 52 years. He was a native of California and had been in the retail trade from boyhood. For many years he was associated in partnership with John H. Sievers. After the fire the firm dissolved, and Mr. Boland located on Geary street, below Grant avenue. Here again he was burned out, over a year ago, and he then removed to Kearney street, near Post. Mr. Boland was very successful from a business standpoint, and as a designer and artistic arranger of flowers he had no superior in San Francisco. He leaves a widow and a host of friends to mourn his loss.

W. G. Palmanteer.

W. G. Palmanteer died in Los Angeles, Cal., March 29, aged 59 years. Mr. Palmanteer was one of the owners of the California Nursery Co., at Niles, Cal., and also president of the Central Bank, of Oakland, Cal. He had not been actively engaged in business for several months before his death. He leaves a widow and three daughters, residing in Oakland, Cal.

Charles Read.

Charles Read died March 30, at his home, 20 Chapel street, Orange, N. J., of Bright's disease, after a short illness. Born at Brighton, England, in 1822, Mr. Read came to this country in 1860 and established himself during that year in Orange as a florist. He was a member of the Methodist church. He leaves a widow, three sons, former Alderman Charles Read, of Orange; William W. Read, of Coscob, Conn., and Herbert Spencer Read, of Chesterfield, Mass., and one daughter, Mrs. William Dickerson, of Philadelphia.

Henry Eberhardt.

Henry Eberhardt, of Catonsville, Baltimore, Md., died March 30, at the home of his son, August Eberhardt, on West Baltimore street, at the age of 78 years. The deceased was one of the charter members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore, and many of the members attended his funeral, in the Western cemetery.

Horace C. Smith.

Horace C. Smith, 73 years of age and for many years a well-known florist and market gardener at Springfield, Mass., died April 2 at his home, 16 Grove street. He was born in Suffield, Conn., in 1835, the son of Cicero and Mary (Austin) Smith, and passed his early life in that place. At the age of 18 years he went into the nursery business there with his uncle, T. C. Austin, which business he continued for a number of years. He removed to Springfield in 1878, and had been a market gardener and florist ever since. For eight years he was foreman of N. J. Herrick's greenhouses on Osgood street, now the property of Mark Aitken. He was a man who was devoted to his profession and was esteemed by all who knew him.

Mr. Smith was married twice, his first wife being Emily Austin, whom he married in 1868, and by whom he had two children, Charles H. and Ellen, the latter dying in infancy. His second wife was Adelia E. Sawtell, whom he married in 1873. Besides a widow, he leaves four sons, Frank S., of Suffield; Edwin S., of Holyoke; Herbert E. and Harold P., of Springfield, and one sister, Frances C., also of Springfield. The funeral was held April 4, the remains being taken to Suffield for burial.

William H. Derby.

William H. Derby, of Revere, Mass., recently a member of the vegetable committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society under the chairmanship of the late W. W. Rawson, died March 30. The deceased gentleman was one of the best known market gardeners around Boston and had been for some years a prominent member of the Boston Market Gardeners' Association and the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. He was also an ex-selectman of Revere. He had the finest pear orchard in Massachusetts and was a large grower of vegetable truck.

The funeral services were held at his late home, April 2. Fifty members of the Boston Market Gardeners' Association attended, J. B. Shurtleff and Joseph Wellington being two of the pall-bearers, others representing the town of Revere, the Chelsea Masonic body and War Veterans' Union. Interment was in Woodlawn cemetery, Revere.

FLORISTS' AUTOMOBILES.

There was an automobile parade in Indianapolis March 26, in which those florists fortunate enough to possess motor vehicles were represented. In each case the florists went to considerable pains to decorate their vehicles to the best advantage and the accompanying illustrations show the results obtained. The Wiegand machine is for pleasure, while the Bertermann outfit is purely utilitarian. Carnations were used by each decorator and in considerable quantity. The florists had the most attractive turn-outs in the parade.

the new German variety, Tausendschon, will all pay to grow. The last named seems destined to become extremely popular, and is proving a first-class seller this week at the better class stores.

HARDY ROSES.

While late fall is preferable to spring as a planting time for hybrid perpetual roses, the overwhelming majority of growers do their planting in April. The sooner this work is done, the better. Be sure roots are not exposed to the air any longer than is necessary. If budded stock is used, plant deeply, so as to cover three or four inches over the buds; and you cannot tramp the ground too firmly. Of course, generous preparation of the soil will insure the best results, but do not bring the manure used in direct contact with the roots. Do not prune back newly planted hybrid perpetuals for ten days or a fortnight.

In the case of hardy roses which have wintered outdoors, any pruning should be completed without delay. Cut out all weak, old and dead wood entirely, leaving the strong, clean, vigorous shoots. Pruning of these will depend on the vigor of the varieties. As a general rule, twelve to fifteen inches will do to leave on the most vigorous growths, and five to eight inches on weaker ones. Do not be afraid to prune hard. It will mean stronger growths and finer flowers in June.

Hybrid teas are gaining wonderfully in popularity, and deservedly so. Their persistent flowering qualities are great points in their favor. In only the more favored locations are these reliably hardy. Many growers lift and bury their plants each fall. This stock should be planted as soon as possible. Hybrid teas must be pruned lightly. Remove dead wood and weak shoots, shortening the vigorous ones only a few inches. For hybrid teas select ground which is lighter than what hybrid perpetuals succeed in. They do well in sandy soil, if well manured and mulched in summer.

Ramblers never came through the winter in better condition than they are now in. If you forgot to cut out last year's flowering wood, remove it now. You probably have sufficient young bottom canes of last year's growth to cover the posts, or trellises. Pruning of the strong canes will merely consist of removing dead or weak tips. Cut out any dead or weak canes. The latter will give no flowers, as a rule. Prune Persian Yellow, Austrian Copper and Harrison's Yellow lightly.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Easter is now in the air and everyone is anticipating splendid business. Certainly advance sales, if they are any criterion, would seem to indicate a much heavier volume of trade than a year ago. There are no striking advances in prices, but all good material seems likely to be sold without trouble. In roses, Beauties are none too abundant, but there is a good supply of Richmonds and Killarneys, the latter being fine. The old Brides and Bridesmaids are still to be reckoned with and are of exceptional excellence at present. Prices had not shown much advance early in the week. Carnations continue to move well, and while trade seems a little quiet now, they will clean out at a lively gait at the end of the week.

Lilies are selling at $10 per hundred cut and an average of $12.50 in pots. A few are selling below these prices, but there is a strong probability of an advance late in the week, for it looks as though there would be barely enough lilies for the demand. As a rule, plants are well flowered, but remarkably dwarf. Callas are in fair supply. Violets are abundant, but are creeping up in price. Good singles will bring $1 per hundred later in the week. Sweet peas are superb. I doubt if any other market in America can show a finer lot. Bulbous stock moves quite well. There has been no glut in it, as a year ago. Marguerites, both yellow and white, are plentiful, as are English primroses. Some nice Gladiolus The Bride, Spanish iris, ranunculus, anemones, ixias and other popular spring flowers are seen.

Pot plant trade is brisk, particularly in the case of lilies. The next best sellers are rambler roses and azaleas. A bigger proportion of the ramblers than ever are pink, attesting the popularity of that color. There is a good trade being done on southern smilax, galax leaves and hardy ferns.

Club Field Day.

The weather was the reverse of favorable for the field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at Waverley, April 3, a cold rain falling most of the afternoon. Arriving first at the establishment of the W. W. Edgar Co., the party, some forty in number, was taken in hand by H. H. Bartsch, the capable manager, and conducted over the various houses to see the Easter stock, which was all in fine shape; lilies were remarkably good, azaleas splendid and Baby Ramblers unusually well done. Lilacs, genistas,

HERMAN D. SCHILLING.

Herman D. Schilling was born in 1877, near Bremen, Germany. He attended the public schools until he was 14 years of age and then served an apprenticeship of four years at the carpenter trade. At the age of 18 he came to America and worked at the carpenter trade in Indianapolis until he was 26 years old. This was six years ago. Then he began his career as a florist by renting a small greenhouse outside of the city, but at the end of months he discontinued business th and bought the present place of 7 feet of glass at 1828 Shelby street, dianapolis. This may seem like ra progress for a beginner, but he ha natural aptitude for the trade and previously read all the books that could get hold of, besides gaining pract knowledge by visiting the greenhouses the city whenever he had an opportun So the business was not exactly new him.

He has worked up a good retail tr Like other people in all lines of busin he found the last year to be a rather d one, but now trade is becoming act again. RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

AN observer says: "Bits of everything is something of nothing to sell, but a good staple crop always pays its way."

SEND in a report of Easter trade in your town, but do it so it will reach the REVIEW not later than Wednesday morning, April 14.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3 or occasionally $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

IF G. G. F., Batavia, Ill., who is not a subscriber, sees this and will send his full name and address, the REVIEW will take pleasure in replying to his questions of April 4. Anonymous communications never can receive attention.

THE New England Dahlia Society has issued the schedule of premiums for its second annual exhibition, to be held at Boston September 10 to 12. Copies may be had by addressing the secretary, Maurice Fuld, 5 Union street, Boston.

THE proceedings of the eighteenth annual meeting of the American Carnation Society, held at Indianapolis, January 27 and 28, have been issued by the secretary. It is a pamphlet of 108 pages and contains, in addition to the report of the meeting, chronicled in the REVIEW at the time, a list of the carnations registered during 1908 and a list of the members of the society.

CORRESPONDENTS.

The REVIEW has openings for correspondents in Toronto, in Washington, Louisville, Nashville, Memphis, Omaha and other cities not now represented regularly in these columns. A pleasant connection for those having interest in newspaper work.

SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

Those who in this country devote any considerable amount of attention to sweet peas have for a long time felt the desirability of a special organization of those interested in that flower. The movement to organize has now taken definite form, Harry A. Bunyard, with Arthur T. Boddington, New York, taking the initiative in sending out a call as per the subjoined letter, which has been addressed to something over 100 persons.

The primary object is to increase the love for sweet peas in a general way, to make them more popular with the amateur, to classify the varieties in their colors and to eliminate the too-much-alike varieties; also to straighten out some of the kinks in the nomenclature. Mr. Bunyard's call for organization June 14 is as follows:

Acquiescing in the desire to start a National Sweet Pea Association, on the lines of other kindred societies, I write to ask you for your support in an effort to stimulate a general acceptance of the idea, and to give impetus to the good seed that has fallen, so that it may bring forth a hundred fold and blossom into a live and useful organization.

The sweet pea is the poor man's orchid, easy of culture and loved by all, is becoming more popular every year and can be seen in flower practically all the year around, thanks to the so-called Christmas varieties.

Harry Turner, president of the New York Florists' Club, will lend his influence to the project, insomuch that the June meeting (with the consent of the club) will be set aside for a sweet pea exhibition; on this date, June 14, it is proposed to organize the National Sweet Pea Association and to arrange a program for future action.

The exhibition will be a modest first effort. W. Atlee Burpee writes that "he would be pleased indeed to offer a cup and contribute towards the expenses of establishing such a society." Arthur T. Boddington also promises a cup and any necessary contribution.

Won't you help the cause along either by your good wishes and moral support or other manifestations of good will and interest? It is going to be a success—it must be a success.

HARRY A. BUNYARD, Sec'y Pro Tem.

THE SUBSCRIBERS' VIEW.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time. And the results are in direct proportion to the position a publication has earned with its readers.

I wish your valued paper every success it merits, as it is the most instructive trade publication printed today, and I would wish that you were compelled to use ten tons of paper, instead of nearly three, as I truly believe every florist would be instructed that would read it. But then, again, you might become bankrupt, as you surely give lots of reading for the money. Frank M. Baker.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There was pronounced improvement in the market the latter part of last week, and conditions at the close of the week were in marked contrast to the state of affairs at the beginning. Carnations stiffened in price much more than any other item, but roses also came to the front April 2 and 3, bringing decidedly better prices than they had two or three days before. This week starts off with a pleasingly active market, an activity which is expected to increase day by day until April 8 and April 9 are expected to make a new record for volume of business in this market.

The consensus of opinion is that there will be an abundance of stock in all lines, except possibly of carnations, and of these latter no special shortage is expected. As early as Monday, April 5, sales of carnations were made at 6 cents, but it is not fair to assume that this was a market price, as it only applied to special stock or under special circumstances. There will be enough carnations so everyone can get some at reasonable prices, although fancy white is likely to be considerably short in demand, and will be held at fancy figures.

Of roses there is an immense supply. Beauties are in only fair crop, but the Beauty is not an Easter flower, and the supply is likely to equal the demand.

Hurry—Wire

RUSH ORDERS

We have a tremendous supply of high-grade stock—much the largest and best ever available at Easter. Don't miss sales. We expect to fill all orders, right up to Sunday noon.

Splendid Lilies

THIS is the same stock we have handled each Easter for the last six years—from the same grower and handled in the same way (packed at the greenhouses, 100 in a box). This stock is sure to give perfect satisfaction. Special (April 7). Latest indications point to the fact that lilies will be scarce after advance orders are filled. All orders now will be filled at market rates.

Roses--Beauties

Our Beauties are in crop just in time. No order too large for us to fill—with the best Beauties on this market. Maid, Killarney, Richmond and Bride are extra fine. Fancy long stock, and good heads on the shorter stems.

Carnations

We have the largest lot of strictly first-class Carnations on this market. Order by the hundred or the thousand—you get what you want.

Sweet Peas

Can supply splendid, long-stemmed Pink, Lavender and White, in any quantity for Easter. Nothing in the market to compare with our fancy grade.

Violets

All season long we have handled the cream of the Violets, both double and single, coming to this market.

Bulb Stock

We can supply first-class flowers of anything wanted in Bulb Stock.

Fancy Ferns

We have the best Ferns in this market. Try them and confirm what other buyers say. Headquarters for all green goods.

All other varieties are in excellent crop with most of the growers. April 5 the temperature shot up to 74 degrees in the shade for a couple of days, and it brought along the stock at a rapid pace. Roses in general are of better quality than usual at Easter, and the same may be said of carnations. The Easter season never saw better quality in the two great staples of the business.

From all directions there comes the report that lilies will be on the short side; there has been a great deal of disease, and many of the growers say they will not have near all their crop ready. But at the same time the market has been easy on lilies. Fancy, long stock has held up fairly well, but every buyer has been fixed out one way or another. A large part of the supply is decidedly short in stem, but usually with good flowers. A large part of the short stock is being sold in pots.

The violet situation gives some concern. The buyers fear the quality will not be as good as their trade demands, and are not placing orders as freely as they should. Sweet peas, if of the better grades, are selling exceptionally well, but the short peas are not moving.

All bulbous flowers are in good supply, and there is an immense number of southern narcissi on the market, so that there is no prospect of high prices, and every buyer can find something with which to do business at Easter.

Business in March.

Since the March sales have been figured up, there is a general expression of satisfaction. In a majority of the wholesale houses, the sales considerably exceeded last year, and where they did not make a favorable record, the cause was easily found in the supply of stock; the demand was all right, except for a day or two in the third week in the month.

Credits Again.

Interested wholesalers have received letters from a firm of attorneys at Des Moines, Ia., with regard to the financial condition of Loziers, Incorporated, a concern which has been a large buyer in this market and elsewhere. Every time a buyer gets beyond his depth, it revives the discussion of credits in this market, and occasions a temporary stiffening of backbones. The trouble lies in the periodical oversupply, when it is either a case of billing out stock at good prices to someone who doesn't care much what he "pays," or selling at exceedingly cheap prices to a Greek who has his roll in his pocket. Under such conditions, a good many men will "take a chance."

In every department of the flower business credits are too lax and too long. It should be a matter of serious consideration that those who have established reputations for refusing to sell where there is any doubt about getting the money are apparently making just as great profits as anyone else, and certainly saving considerable worry.

Mr. Frey Retires.

Alois P. Frey, who for several years has been head gardener at Lincoln park, resigned his position April 3 to devote his time to the management of the range of greenhouses at Crown Point, Ind., in which he is interested, doing business as the Roselawn Nurseries. Mr. Frey's successor has not yet been appointed.

The Season's Novelty.

George Wienhoeber, at Fleischman's Jackson boulevard store, has the season's leading novelty in a violet or orchid hamper of his own designing. Inspired by the pronounced shape of women's hats this spring, and the great amount of talk these "inverted waste baskets" are creating, he procured a number of the straw shapes of various colors and turned them right side up again. This his box-maker did for him by sewing a bottom over the opening, cutting out the crown and hinging it on again as a cover. Then, to make them easily filled with flowers, a box was put inside. Mr. Wienhoeber trims the outside of these hat-hampers with ribbon and flowers before filling, so that no two are alike. They constitute by all odds the most distinct of the Easter novelties.

The Weather in March.

March was a single degree warmer than the average, but 5 degrees colder than last year, and 7 degrees colder than March of 1907. The rainfall was only 1.63 inches, as against 2.57 inches as normal. The wind movement was 10,828 miles, against 11,719 in 1908. But what affects cut flower production was that there was just a trifle less than forty per cent of the possible duration of sunshine, not much more than three-quarters what there was in March, 1908. This year March had only six clear days, eight partly cloudy and seventeen cloudy.

Club Doings.

The Florists' Club appears to have entered upon a period of unusual activity, for last week it established a record with three "doings" in two nights. The regular meeting was held at the Union April 1, with an attendance of some thirty members. Albert T. Hey presented the constitution and by-laws as revised by him and they were ordered printed for the consideration of the balance of the club. There were four more proposals for membership, and the following were duly elected: S. W. Baker, La Grange, Ill.; John Bell, Glencoe, Ill.; M. Matchen, Chicago; W. Adams, Chicago; George Pieser, Chicago; R. E. Kurowski, Chicago; P. Olsem, Joliet; W. T. Scofield, Chicago; Max Ringier, Chicago; M. Fink, Chicago.

April 2 the club held a card party at the Grand Pacific hotel, with an attendance of nearly fifty. The affair was under the management of Ed Enders, Frank Pasternick and A. F. Longren, and the ladies voted it a complete success. The ladies' prizes were won at cinch in the following order: Mrs. George Asmus first, Mrs. Leonard Kill second, Miss Ludwig third, Miss Benthey fourth. The men's trophies were won by O. W. Johnson, who got an umbrella and it rained on the way home, John Kruchten and Joseph Kohout. Refreshments were served.

The bowlers met as usual April 2, in spite of the conflicting date with the card party. Four teams were chosen, making the following scores, in addition to which the same scores counted in a handicap match, in which E. Johnson was first, winning a match safe; Barnett second, winning a pipe, and W. Graff third, winning a knife. The full score was as follows:

Various Notes.

At Winterson's Seed Store the counter trade is beginning in earnest, and it is expected that for a month or six weeks everyone will be kept on the jump.

It is reported that John Thorpe has been quite ill for several days.

George Reinberg had a big batch of lilies in pots for Easter this year.

John Thompson, formerly rose grower for John Welsh Young, Philadelphia, is now with the Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove.

John Zech went on strike this week. For years they have impressed him as judge of election, whenever there was balloting in his precinct, but in the last few months elections have been too frequent, and Mr. Zech refused to serve longer.

O. J. Friedman has removed this week to his new store on Michigan avenue, where he hopes to be fully settled before the Easter rush begins.

Carl Thomas came back from Pennsylvania Monday morning, to help the A. L. Randall Co. through the Easter rush.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says F. Stielow, Jr., was in town Sunday and reported that Enchantress is in good crop with most of the growers in his neighborhood, but that other sorts mostly are off crop.

H. R. Hughes is ill at an inopportune time.

J. E. Jensen says Jensen & Dekema have had much the best season on record in the sale of carnation cuttings.

Joseph Brooks, carnation grower, of Morton Grove, has recovered from a week's illness.

Venerable George Wittbold has been ill for several days. He finds his greatest pleasure at the potting bench, and recently overtaxed his strength in shifting some large Bostons.

There are any number of plants this Easter, but little that is out of the ordinary.

At the depot flower stands and many other places in the city large signs advise the use of "Randall's Velvet Lawn Grass Seed," and there always is a pile of neat cartons of seed ready at hand.

Robert Northam is again on deck.

Leonard Kill says that Peter Reinberg's cut flower sales in March increased an average of over $125 a day straight through the month, and this with only the addition of three small carnation houses to the glass area. This season is proving one of the most successful Mr. Reinberg has had.

James Ronan, 60 years old, and for many years gardener for Julius Rosenwald, was found dead April 2, seated in a chair in his employer's greenhouse.

Members of the trade have received invitations to be present at the opening of the new Columbia theater, Milwaukee, Saturday evening, April 10, and there would be a good delegation, except that it is the night before Easter. The house is owned and managed by Lubliner & Trinz, and has a seating capacity of 1,800.

Wietor Bros. say that they received 2,500 White Killarney from F. R. Pierson Co. in February, fine plants that are now ready to go on the benches and will be planted right after Easter. They also are ready to plant several houses with young Beauties. This season Wietor Bros. will plant 15,000 Mrs. Jardine, and will drop Chatenay and one or two others, to make room.

The store at 52 and 54 Wabash avenue is undergoing extensive alterations and improvements, the street floor to be occupied by a tobacco concern and the basement by Vaughan & Sperry after May 1.

George Hartung, at 11816 Michigan avenue, Kensington, reports good prospects for Easter, with several large decorations to put on later in the month.

E. C. Amling says Easter orders did not come in early this year, but that beginning Monday morning they came heavier than ever before, many by wire several days in advance of shipment.

Bassett & Washburn say March made a new record with them.

C. W. McKellar has received consignments of cut blooms of Oncidium splendidum from J. A. Newsham, New Orleans.

The Blameuser Floral Co., at Niles, has been incorporated, with $25,000 authorized capital stock, by Edward H. Blameuser, Mary Blameuser and Emil C. Blameuser.

Visitors this week included: W. Logan Kring, Fairbury, Ill.; C. L. Snyder, of the El Paso Carnation Co., El Paso, Ill.; C. G. Dwight, Janesville, Wis.; A. Siegel, St. Louis; J. H. Shelton, Rochester, Ind.; M. Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co., en route home from the Pacific coast.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

With plenty of stock, business all last week was good. The weather has been quite favorable up to now, and the prospects are that there will be plenty of stock for the Easter holidays, with the exception of carnations, which will not be so plentiful and cheap as they have been the last few years. Every grower seemed to have a heavy cut of these just about the time Lent began, and it is a little too soon for another such crop. There are plenty of fine blooming plants in this market, which undoubtedly will be cleaned out, as the orders are coming in fast. With the advanced price in some cut flowers, a good many buyers are holding out, in the hope of getting the benefit. All in all, everything points to a grand Easter business.

Most of the florists, especially those on the outskirts of the city, enjoyed a good run on cut flowers in small quantities, these being used by the children who were confirmed on Palm Sunday. Yellow roses were mostly in demand.

Various Notes.

The weather being favorable, several have begun greenhouse building. The Mueller & Schroeder Co. has gutters and posts up for two carnation houses, each 26x150. Fred Schmeling, Blue Mound Cars to Stop at Pollworth's Office.

A decision in favor of the C. C. Pollworth Co., compelling the T. M. E. R. & L. Co. to stop cars at Fifty-fifth street, was recently given by the state railroad commission in Madison.

According to the decision, the West Allis and Soldiers' Home cars must stop at this point, which is just south of the greenhouses of the Pollworth Co. Fifty-fifth street is half-way between Fifty-ninth street and the Hawley road, the present stops made by the cars.

The agitation for the stop was started about six months ago by the officials of the Pollworth Co., who were much annoyed by the fact that their patrons and visitors from Milwaukee were carried by the cars a distance of nearly half a mile beyond the greenhouses. The new stopping place is close to the office.

Manhattan Flower Market

46 West 28th Street

NEW YORK, April 3, 1909.

ON or about May 1, it is proposed to open the above store as a market for the sale of cut flowers at Wholesale.

It will be used in the early morning at six o'clock as a "Growers' Market" for those desiring to sell their own flowers, etc., and after that as a regular wholesale market by anyone who secures space for that privilege, thus dividing expenses about one-half.

The store, together with a large, light basement, is one of the largest and best, most accessible and convenient locations for this purpose in the business.

To parties who will become interested, very favorable propositions will be made.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The atmosphere in the wholesale cut flower market Saturday, April 3, was certainly charged with optimism. Prices had not advanced materially from the average of the week, but there was a completely cleaned-up condition that augured well for the present week, and especially for the great holiday trade of Easter. The week opened with almost summer temperature.

The quotations of this week in the cut flower market are those of its early days. There should be a gradual advance till Saturday, when Easter prices, now problematical, will prevail. According to veterans of the street, the prospect is 40 cents top for Beauties, 10 to 12 cents for Bride and Maid, 12 to 20 cents for Killarney, Richmond, My Maryland, Chatenay, and even more for White Killarney; 2 to 6 cents for carnations, with 8 cents for special stock; 75 cents for violets, and a corresponding uplift for all else, including orchids and gardenias, of course, the flowers society has set the seal of approval on emphatically this winter. Everything betokens a splendid Easter. There is an abundance of everything.

Lilies seem to hold firm for Easter at 12 cents. Few ask more, and this may fairly be quoted top, with the smaller and inferior stock at 10 cents. Most of the supply this year is excellent in quality, and the demand is insistent, as usual. Spring bulbous stock of all kinds is enormous, and the southern daffodils have been arriving, 100,000 in a day. Lilac, too, is here from the sunny clime. The plant growers' display everywhere this year is a delightful inspiration, and the universal salutation is "Sold out," and that is practically true. About every plant suitable for the Easter trade is now disposed of, and some for over a week have not had a perfect plant to offer. The early bookings were far in advance of any previous season. Many of the outside buyers who delayed their selections until this week have been obliged to go home with their wants unsatisfied.

Various Notes.

The fraternity lost another of its sterling characters without warning April 5, when William Hagemann died of apoplexy. Further details will be found in the obituary column.

Monday, April 12, the New York Florists' Club holds its monthly meeting in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building. This will be plant night, and exhibits may be sent to Secretary Young, 51 Twenty-eighth street, for care and staging. Echoes of the Cincinnati executive committee meeting of the S. A. F., and of the rose convention at Buffalo, will be heard, and the evening should prove one of great interest. Several important committees will report, and arrangements for the club's annual outing will be completed. This it is planned to make the most elaborate event in the club's history. The souvenir book will contain portraits of all the club members.

The auctions are in full blast and drawing crowds. Prices are good, quite up to regular wholesale figures, and as the temperature rises the demand grows. It looks like a record spring for the mellow-voiced auctioneers, all of them.

J. J. Fellouris is handling the first southern lilac and arbutus of the season. There will be an abundance of southern stock for Easter with all the green goods merchants.

Kessler Bros. have a grand display of Easter plants, some especially handsome dwarfed bougainvillea and standard daisies among them.

Twenty-eighth street is a flower garden this week. Almost every wholesaler has handsome plants in his window.

has four retail establishments in New York that cover the city from Harlem way down to the Battery.

A. Herrmann says this is far ahead of any season in his experience, and that the daily cash trade exceeds all expectations. The florists' supply men all have a similar story to tell. If this department of the florists' business may be taken as an index, no Easter has ever equaled it.

A. Hanig has opened another branch store at Fulton street, Brooklyn.

James McManus has a grand stock of Cattleya Mossiæ, gigas, Gaskelliana and Mendellii for Easter, and says orders are coming from all the big cities and many of the little ones.

An important meeting of the Growers' Cut Flower Co. was held Saturday, April 3. There are over twenty stockholders in this company, and J. J. Coan, the manager, says a permanent success seems assured.

Charles Millang handled great quantities of southern daffodils last week.

H. E. Froment is receiving grand Beauties and other roses from L. B. Coddington, and will, he says, have a big stock of everything for Easter.

Hugo Jahn, of Brooklyn, had a funeral order last week that used for the pall alone over 18,000 violets.

Brooklyn wholesalers are anticipating a great Easter, and are ready for it, the only trouble, apparently, with all of them being lack of room to handle the rapidly growing trade.

Alexander Dallas, of Waterbury, Conn., was in the city last week, also Joseph Heacock and "the medicine men from Madison," Totty, Duckham and Herrington, also known as the "Big Three."

The evening was one of jollity, good fellowship and good bowling, and with lunch and song it lasted until the wee sma' hours. The prize winners were given in last week's issue. The cup of silver presented by Phil Kessler to the winner was an exceedingly handsome one. During the repast, A. Bleckwenn, of Astoria, read the following "poem":

Fair Flatbush, prettiest village of the flats,
Where sweetest flowers bloom and black hands cut you in the slats;
'Tis said that they've a funny house and funniest bowlers, too,

Who've come up here to share our beer
And fill us with the best of cheer.

We welcome you with hearts o'erflowing
Just as your sewers do at winter season's closing,
And hope that in this welcome you will see
Only the spirit of fun, frolic and frivolity.

Judge Holt presiding. The brewing company had leased the building at Forty-second street and Broadway, later known as "Pabst's," from Thorley, and conducted a rathskeller. In May, 1902, the subway contractors demolished it in the course of construction. The Pabsts maintained that Thorley had guaranteed them peaceable possession. Judge Holt ruled that the taking of the vaulted space beneath the sidewalk by the city constituted a violation of the peaceable possession clause of the lease. It was shown that the Pabsts had spent a large sum decorating and furnishing the rathskeller. The jury assessed the value of the lease at $45,000; the permanent improvements at $18,000, and the balance, $25,830, was interest on the $63,000 since May 1, 1902. Former Judge Cohen, counsel for Thorley, immediately served notice of an appeal. The Pabst company was represented by Julius M. Mayer.

Lilies From Bermuda.

The arrivals of cut lilies from Bermuda have been heavier than in recent years. The Prince George landed a big consignment, said to be 2,000 boxes of fifty each, April 6. Few of these are handled by the trade, the bulk of such shipments being consigned to a firm of brokers that has circularized churches, etc., as far west as Iowa.

Registration of Begonia.

Public notice is hereby given that J. A. Peterson, of Westwood, Cincinnati, O., offers for registration the plant described below. Any person objecting to the registration of this plant or to the use of the proposed name is requested to communicate with the undersigned at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Name—President Taft. Description—A sport from Begonia Agatha; it originated in our greenhouse about two years ago. In growth it is much stronger and sturdier than Agatha or Gloire de Lorraine, to which class it belongs. In color a beautiful shade of soft, rosy pink, deeper and richer than Agatha or Gloire de Lorraine. The flowers more than cover a silver dollar. It is a free and continuous bloomer from November to April. Height, about fifteen to eighteen inches. Foliage, large, shining, dark green.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

There were many funerals last week and trade was good. The Lenten season has not been as oppressive as usual. Stock for Easter could not be in better condition. Lilies, which are looked upon as essentials for every proper Easter celebration, are abundantly provided for. Bulbous stock is looking fine. Nothing seems to be left undone to make this a splendid season for the local florists.

Various Notes.

The florists' employees will give a carnation dance at Assembly hall Wednesday evening, April 28. This is to be an annual affair and promises to be very enjoyable.

The city officials held a banquet Monday, April 5. The floral decorations were elaborate.

Much attention is given to the planning of church decorations for Easter. Harrisii lilies, palms and blooming plants are in great demand.

Wm. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, N. Y., was in the city last week, looking over his stock at the houses of the Erie Floral Co.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

It is always particularly difficult to accurately describe market conditions just before a great holiday. We are approaching the greatest church and floral holiday of the year. The demand fell off a little last week, but was sufficient to absorb most of the good stock at fair prices. The present week opened much more actively, both in and out of town. The mild, springlike weather is bringing in increased shipments. Where the quality is maintained, the stock is not accumulating.

The features of the market today are the advance in the price of Cattleya Schrœderæ, made necessary by the combination of decreased supply and active demand, and the stringency in lilies. The consensus of opinion on the street today is that good lilies are worth $15 per hundred, with the probability that there will not be sufficient to meet requirements.

While Beauties are becoming more plentiful, they are not abundant. Indications point to their being scarcer this Easter than for many years past. White carnations have again become favorites over the colored varieties, the best whites bringing advanced prices. Sweet peas are coming in from growers who have specially prepared them for Easter. The stock is fine, strengthening the market nicely. Daffodils are not plentiful; the southern stock is arriving in limited quantity. In fact, it looks as though the Virginia growers were passing this city by.

The Meeting of Councils.

The first Monday in April is well known to every florist in this city as the day when City Councils first meet in City hall. It is the beginning of the new councilmanic year. For several years past flowers have taken a back seat at these gatherings. The desks, especially of the new members, once made gay with floral offerings from admiring friends, have been bare. This year everything is changed. The old custom has been revived so generally as to be quite surprising. City hall was almost surrounded by the wagons of our leading florists and decorators from every ward in this great city just before Councils assembled last Monday morning. There were horseshoes of good luck, and baskets galore. There were red roses and pink roses, and every kind of flower bright and cheerful. The place of honor must be conceded to the baskets, made up of flowering plants with here and there a touch of green. The florists had a great opportunity. It was the week before Easter, and the advance guard of Easter plants was at its best. Here was a chance to get their hands in at making up, a chance that was eagerly grasped. There were many beautiful combinations seen at City hall that morning, combinations that it is hoped the city fathers appreciated, and it is hoped, too, that they will allow this custom to continue by admitting the tributes to be placed on their desks each year, instead of banishing them to a side room.

Wilson vs. Pericat.

The floral world has been interested from time to time in various suits, I think they were four in number, brought by Mrs. Edna Wilson, wife of George B. Wilson, against Alphonse Pericat. The final suit, civil in its character, has just been concluded in the Delaware County Court, at Media, resulting in a verdict for the defendant. The facts in the case, briefly stated, are as follows: Alphonse Pericat, gardener and orchid grower for George B. Wilson, was instructed by Mrs. Wilson to market some of his products, Mrs. Wilson proposing that he should pay her a certain portion of the receipts and retain the balance. The receipts were quite large, amounting in eighteen months to about $2,800. Mr. Pericat paid Mrs. Wilson the amount agreed upon, but when Mr. Wilson became aware of the arrangement a dispute arose, ending in criminal and civil suits. Mr. Pericat has been successful in all of the suits, clearly proving that his agreement made with Mrs. Wilson had been carried out.

Club Meeting.

Israel Rosnosky presided over a well attended meeting of the Florists' Club April 6, President Hahman being detained by the press of Easter business. John Westcott gave a glowing description of his visit to Cuba and the Isle of Pines. William P. Craig also gave his impressions of this favored clime. He was followed by Messrs. Greub and Coleman, who accompanied him on his flying visit to his father's new plantation.

Christian Eisele's New Place.

The five new greenhouses built by Hitchings & Co. for Christian Eisele last season are as full as can be with flowering and spring flowers. Mr. Eisele spoke with great pride of his new houses; they were rather expensive, he said, but a row of heating pipe maintained 10 degrees higher temperature with far greater ease. You can always find varieties of plants there that you can find nowhere else. On this particular occasion Phil fell in love with the variegated funkia; its beautiful green and white foliage was scarcely enhanced by the soft lilac of the flowers. Mr. Eisele thinks this hardy plant worthy a place in every border. The neat appearance of the cutting bench, with its varieties of carefully labeled cuttings, marks the past master in the art of propagation.

The Logan Nurseries.

REVIEW readers who have followed this column with proper diligence are aware that Logan was dismantled when the banners of the Grahams were marched away. They also know that later A. P. Irwin came into possession of Logan, and that under his leadership John Hobson was placed in charge, with instructions to spare no effort to regain for Logan its prestige. But REVIEW readers do not know how hard Mr. Irwin and Mr. Hobson have worked to achieve this end. Logan has once more returned to take its place in the floral ranks. The trained eye would notice but a few changes—the absence of the large decorative plants, for instance—but the trained eye could not fail to note with pleasure the uniform excellence of the stock among the Easter plants.

The Crimson Ramblers were a beautiful sight, the best that Logan has ever produced. There were lots of lilies and azaleas, some nice hydrangeas, any quantity of bulbs and a really fine stock of spiræa. Large pans of Spiræa superba were a feature. Ferns of the Boston type and the hardy pterises for ferneries were well done. The young palms in small and medium sizes filled several houses. The cut flower houses were devoted to Kaiserins, carnations and sweet peas.

An immense house, formerly devoted to decorative stock, but planted this season in Zvolanek winter blooming varieties of peas, had given heavy crops from November 10 until the middle of March.

Various Notes.

The consensus of opinion among the growers in the rising eastern market is that this will be the greatest Easter the plant market has ever seen.

Godfrey Aschmann has secured a number of stands in various parts of the city, intending to clear up any odds and ends of plants not required in his large shipping business.

Among the visitors who have called to look over stock of plants in this city recently were Miss Matilda Held, Baltimore; George Black, of Black Bros., Baltimore; C. W. Dudley, Parkersburg, W. Va.; William Feast, of Samuel Feast & Sons, Baltimore, and Fred Smith, of Smith & Fetters, Cleveland.

Israel Rosnosky has just returned from a southern trip in the interests of Henry F. Michell Co. Mr. Rosnosky wants his friends to know that the Pullman Palace Car Co. voluntarily sent him a handsome check to defray the loss occasioned by

Art Baskets

We have a sterling novelty this season to offer you for your Easter weddings, something you have never seen before and that will appeal to your most critical customers.

OUR ART BASKETS, so-called, are simply staple styles of baskets, finished with bronze and other effects. This finish adds a richness quite out of proportion to the very moderate increase in price and will give you something that your stylish customer will "go crazy" over, as they express it. We especially recommend these ART BASKETS in elegant residences, where it is desired that they harmonize with the handsome tapestries and furniture.

We are headquarters for novel and staple BASKETS in all colors. Fancy POT COVERS—you name the size and we do the rest. CREPE PAPER, pleated and waterproof, moss green effects. Everything in supplies. Send for our Illustrated Catalogue.

one of their employees placing him in the wrong train.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., has just returned from the west. Mr. Eschner reports a phenomenal demand for baskets.

Henry Weiss & Son, of Hatboro, Pa., are sending the Leo Niessen Co. sweet peas from their sowing late in the winter.

William Berger, of Germantown, sent a handsome wagonload of specimen plants and baskets of made up flowering plants to City hall for the successful candidates in the Twenty-second ward election.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. report a heavy Easter demand, with many visitors from other cities.

Robert A. Craig stated five days before Easter that his company was nearly sold out of the immense stock of blooming plants.

W. E. McKissick & Bros. have a pleasing novelty in the shape of orange blossoms.

Hope you will have a splendid Easter!

The Market.

Last week found the market active, with plenty of good stock in everything. This week we are all looking for a busy time, especially so in the plant line, and from the looks of some of the show houses in the west end, they are expecting a big rush in blooming plants. From reports of wholesalers, there will be plenty of cut stock of everything in season, and about the only scarcity looked for will be in carnations; these have not been overplentiful for the last ten days. Light colors sell up clean.

From the looks of the supply of roses last week, there will be more than enough, as consignments have been quite heavy from all points. It looks now as though there will be enough violets, the cool days having held them back, and the chances are that there will be plenty of them. Sweet peas are in their prime, all the wholesalers having plenty of them in all grades. All light shades have the call. Cut lilies, both Harrisii and callas, will be abundant and the call heavy, as shown by the orders already received. Other bulbous stock, such as Romans, Dutch hyacinths, Paper Whites, valley, freesias and tulips, will be plentiful. Prices will go up a little, but not much.

Various Notes.

Adolph Fehr and Henry Emunds, of Belleville, were visitors last week. Each has a good word for the business, and says the Belleville florists expect a big rush for Easter.

C. Young & Sons' show windows are great attractions these days. Last week they showed the new pink climber, Tausendschon, in one window, and the other was made up of pink and Crimson Ramblers and orchids in full bloom. They report a large sale on these.

The death of J. B. Gazzam last week takes from us a man who was a great lover of flowers. Mr. Gazzam was head of the Bellefontaine cemetery and a member of the St. Louis Florists' Club and St. Louis Horticultural Society, in which every member was his friend.

Sanders Nurseries had a lot of fine lilies for Easter. They are all nice, stocky plants, and about the best in the city. All have been sold to the local trade.

Miss Theresa Badaracco had a busy week furnishing floral designs for spring openings in downtown department stores.

John Chapman, formerly with Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, has taken a position as foreman for Adolph Brix, at his Mead avenue greenhouses.

Pierre Schnider, formerly with S. Erker, at Kirkwood, and who had great success as a carnation grower, is now in the employ of A. C. Canfield, Springfield, Ill.

Robert J. Windler, at Grand and Shenandoah avenue, has his two large Fairground park, formerly known as the old fairground, at Grand avenue and Natural Bridge road, according to Park Commissioner Scanlan, will be open to the public May 1.

The Florists' Bowling Club, Monday night, April 5, spent another one of those pleasant nights when ladies were included.

The affairs of the Schaeffer Floral Co., which closed up recently, are still unsettled. Reports have it that Jule Schaeffer, who was head of the concern, has gone to Europe to settle an estate left by his mother, and will return and start in business again.

The St. Louis Florists' Club, which holds its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, April 8, will have several important features. A new meeting hall will be decided on, an S. A. F. transportation committee will be appointed, and a bowling and shooting team will be organized for the convention. J. J. B.

Clinton, Okla.—F. T. Gannaway says this town, with three railroads in operation, a fourth railroad being built, and the nearest greenhouse at Oklahoma City, 100 miles away, offers an excellent opening for a florist.

Club Exhibition.

The Scranton Florists' Club held a flower show March 25 and 26 at St. Luke's parish hall, which was a great success as far as the exhibits were concerned, as some fine stock and miscellaneous arrangements were shown, which were appreciated by the small number of the public who came to see them. The weather on the first day was so bad that few people attended and it was not much better on the second day. But, though it has proven quite an expense to the Scranton Florists' Club, they feel that they will be fully repaid by the stimulating effect that these shows have upon the buying public. Coming before Easter as it did, the show will unquestionably be a great help to trade. The newspapers printed many columns after the show, which the florists appreciated, but would have appreciated still more had they done it before the show.

Exhibits were made by nearly all the local florists and also by the florists from up and down the Lackawanna valley. There were also a great many exhibits from growers in different sections of the country, all of which combined to make a creditable appearance when arranged in the hall.

The judges were Paul Mader, Stroudsburg, Pa.; George Payne, Dover, N. J., and William Clark, Scranton, Pa. They proved to be very competent and were congratulated by all upon the excellent conclusions at which they arrived.

Wm. MacDonald, Moosic, Pa., displayed his new fern and also named it Scrantoniensis. This fern attracted an immense amount of attention, both from the florists and the visiting public. The fronds looked like a double ostrich plume, and the little 2½-inch plants were as Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24, 1909.

WHOLESALERS all report that it looks like a good clean-up on everything.

GLOBE onion seed has never been in better demand, according to the market gardeners' seedsmen.

THE Reliable Seed Co., Tampa, Fla., has been incorporated to do a general seed and brokerage business.

NEWS of the death of Wm. Hagemann, the well-known New York importer of bulbs, appears in the obituary column this week.

REPORTS indicate that the counter trade seedsman and the retailer of shrubs will now get their chance to put by enough for their next winter's coal.

ONION sets appear to be so well cleaned up that some of the noted operators in the sale of this commodity are now offering bushel lots instead of car lots.

No one, as far as reports go, has any more peas than he needs. It is to be hoped for the integrity of the seedsman that the month of May will not show up surplus lists offering a few lots carried over.

UNSEASONABLE dampness still prevails in California, and it looks as though the trade in general will need California's seed products more than ever after harvest of 1909. These two facts are rather worrisome.

IT is a well understood fact in the seed line that every unseasonable day during the spring season is just the loss of a day's receipts to the counter trade seedsmen. It is to be hoped, therefore, that seasonable weather will prevail from now on.

THE few seasonable days that have brightened the week at Chicago make the onion set growers feel like putting in enough seed to meet the demands of St. Louis as well as the other sections which look this way for their supplies in this line.

OWING to lack of snow during the winter, and to the extreme dryness of last fall, the lawns in the Chicago vicinity show more bareness than for some springs back. The demand for lawn grass is consequently larger than usual and a good lawn fertilizer to go with it is also called for.

IT is reported from London that the market for kentia seeds is at present very unsettled, and a rise in prices is expected.

PRESENT values of wax podded beans, of which there was supposed to be such a surplus, look mighty high to the man who did not purchase when he could have done so a few months back.

THE weather warmed up all over the country early this week and put everybody on the jump. The mail trade is now on the decline, though still heavy, but counter trade is only fairly begun. April has made a big start and, if it does not come spring too abruptly, an exceptionally good month is expected.

IN the island of Guernsey a large number of Calla Elliottiana are now being cut and sent to the London market. A correspondent writes: "This will become an important line ere long. One firm has for four or five years been saving up every bit of seed, not marketing one of the golden blooms, to increase the stock. The blooms have been fetching as much as 36 cents each this year."

TARIFF MATTERS.

It was reported by the Washington correspondents of the daily papers that one of the changes to be made in the Payne bill before it passes the House April 9 is to be an amendment reducing the rate on peas from 40 cents to 25 cents per bushel, but the fact is the rate on green peas only is to be reduced, from 30 cents to 25 cents per bushel.

On Monday, April 5, the House voted to tie itself hand and foot and put the tariff bill through Friday afternoon, April 9, practically without change as introduced, but subject to a number of amendments to be proposed by the Ways and Means committee, none of which affect the seed trade.

It becomes more apparent from day to day that the tariff bill as passed by the House will be practically rewritten in the finance committee of the Senate. Practically the whole country is up in arms against the Payne bill. The Senate is even a more pronouncedly stand-pat aggregation than the House, but if the seedsmen can elbow their way through the press of other interests seeking the attention of Senator Aldrich and his committee, there is yet a possibility of shaping the paragraph covering seeds along lines of specific instead of ad valorem duties.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending March 20 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto ..	38	$ 389	Hemp	260	$ 257

JAPANESE AND FRENCH BULBS.

In regard to crop conditions, advices from Japan indicate a good crop so far and buyers who are willing to pay a fair price for lily bulbs will no doubt get good quality. It must not be forgotten that Yokohama commission men can always pick up stray lots of bulbs, many of which are of doubtful quality, and sell them at much lower prices to importers who do not pay attention to the quality; and for this reason a grower should be careful not to buy such culls just because the price is from twenty to thirty per cent lower as an inducement. Giganteum is the largest seller by far this season. It is hoped the crop will be sufficient to meet the demand. Freight rates have advanced and Yokohama prices have declined to offset the advance, although if the crop proves short they will probably be raised. Good quality still brings a good price and those who take good care of their fields can always sell at a profit.

Freight rates via Suez have likewise advanced and heavy freight, such as bamboo canes, cycas stems, etc., will be much affected. Cargoes are now measured by a sworn measurer, to prevent a possible chance for freight competition through undermeasure. Nursery stock is also much affected by the freight rates and prices are much higher than heretofore, in some instances being as much as 100 per cent of the Yokohama value of the goods.

Of French bulbs, Martial Bremond writes that they will be a trifle higher in price than last year, according to present indications, owing to cold weather in the south of France; but he adds that it is still too early to give any definite prices or to tell if the crop in larger sizes is large enough or not. Commission men in the Ollioules district are offering to buy at various prices, speculating on the market, but not much importance is attached to these offers so early in the season. RALPH M. WARD.

RESOLUTIONS ON FREE SEEDS.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League in New York city, April 1, the following resolutions were adopted and on the next day were mailed to the President of the United States and the Secretary of Agriculture:

RESOLVED, That the board of directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League deplore the constantly increasing tendency to swell the amount expended by the United States Department of Agriculture for the purpose of purchase and distribution of common varieties of garden seeds.

The board respectfully suggests to the President of the United States and the Secretary of Agriculture that a considerable saving or retrenchment in the expenses of the government could be made by the abolishment of such appropriation, without in any way impairing the effectiveness of the Department of Agriculture; and that a further considerable saving to the government could be effected by relieving the Postoffice Department of the expenses incurred in the carrying and distribution of the enormous quantity of franked seeds sent out by the Department of Agriculture.

The board is of the opinion that the free distribution of common varieties of garden seeds and field seeds is of no practical value to the farmers and gardeners of this country, but, on the contrary, is a downright injustice and restraint of trade inflicted upon the seed business.

The board believes that a continuance of this practice certainly does not tend toward the best development of the nation, as it encourages a dependence upon the government, which is entirely foreign to the feelings and patriotism of the American people.

RESOLVED, That while the Wholesale Seedsmen's League as an organization, and its members individually, raise no objection whatever to the fair testing of seeds of grasses, clovers, and other farm seeds, for the purpose of determining if they are adulterated or misbranded, the association and its members do object to the methods of the agents of the Department of Agriculture of the United States in obtaining such samples for test, as being unfair to the seed merchants and growers, in that the merchants and growers have no knowledge that the samples so reported upon actually came from them.

It seems to the Seedsmen's League but fair that the agent obtaining the samples should leave the merchant or grower a portion of that identical sample under governmental seal, as provided in the case of testing milk, fertilizers, etc., under the laws of the state of New York and other states.

FARMERS HOLDING CLOVER SEED.

The following information has been collected by Frank I. King, president of the Toledo Produce Exchange:

Ohio—Small counties—Farmers holding, some holding to cover a year's or two wants, others their entire crop. Think we have more than can be used next year. With good weather in August and September, we look for another good crop. Large counties—Clover in farmers' hands will be held, as fields sown last spring look bad, owing to drouth last fall. Farmers say seed won't pay to let it lie for hay, so they will plow it over and sow corn instead. It froze out badly, only alsike standing the severe cold. If other sections have suffered as we have, higher prices are certain before October. Indiana—Small counties—Crop not very promising. Last year only half usual amount was sown and greater part perished during dry weather. Old clover will all be put in corn. Considerable seed in farmers' hands, but prospect for next crop very poor, hardly any acreage. Prospect poor, due to alternate freezing and thawing. Michigan—Large counties—Considerable seed being sown here. Scarcely any left from last year, as dry weather last fall killed most of it. Farmers holding a great deal, but refuse to sell. Expect large amount to be sown this spring, as very little was saved from last year's sowing. Illinois—Small counties—Farmers still holding for better prices. All the clover in central Illinois sown before the middle of March was killed by cold. Three-fourths of the acreage was sown too early, and will have to be resown. This year there is no top to wheat, so it cannot afford usual protection to seed. Farmers buying to resow. Missouri—Farmers have considerable seed, but quality not very good.

spiræas and other flowering stock were all in first-class shape for Easter. The houses of adiantums and other ferns were never better. An abundance of bedding stock and plants for Memorial day were crying for additional bench room.

The visitors were served with refreshments by Mrs. Edgar, after which President Downs voiced the thanks of the company for the entertainment and regretted unfavorable weather had kept many away. W. J. Stewart replied on behalf of Mrs. Edgar. After a few words from M. H. Norton an adjournment was made to the range of Edgar Bros., where Robert S. and Frank were on hand to show the visitors two big houses of sweet peas in splendid bloom, just in heavy crop for Easter. The varieties grown are Mrs. A. Wallace, Mrs. F. J. Dolansky, Christmas Pink and Florence Denzer.

The last place visited was the big establishment of Peirce Bros., in Waltham. Here E. Allan Peirce took the party in charge. Carnations in several large houses looked well. The leading varieties grown are Lawson, Winsor, Beacon, Enchantress and White Perfection; batches of several seedlings and newer varieties were also noted. One house containing 75,000 young carnations in pots was a fine sight. A propagating house contained about 100,000 cuttings of carnations and mums. Cement benches are a feature in all houses here.

There were 35,000 giganteum lilies in prime condition for Easter. All are sold. It is doubtful if a finer lot can be seen in the country. Azaleas were splendid, many large plants being exceptionally fine. The firm's big auto trucks are now being kept busy delivering loads of plants in many cities and towns.

Boston was reached about 6 o'clock, after a most enjoyable outing.

Horticultural Society.

The spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which closed April 4, far surpassed all previous exhibitions the society has held. The nearest approach to it was in 1872, when a big rhododendron show under canvas on Boston Common attracted a tremendous crowd. There were grave doubts as to how attendances would hold out the second week, but they increased steadily each day, the closing day seeing the halls crowded, and many regrets were expressed that the main features could not be continued a week longer.

The Japanese garden of R. & J. Farquhar & Co. was even in better condition at the close of the exhibition than at the opening. The big banks of forsythias were a mass of golden yellow and the beds of azaleas were just at their best.

Cut Dahlia Flowers Pay

If You Have the Following Varieties

After considerable consideration and observation, and "talks" with the trade, we have decided to offer the following Dahlias to florists this season. Our retail Catalogue, which will be mailed free, contains a larger collection, but few are superior to the following and all are good size, divided clumps that have been field-grown and are strong and healthy.

Price of all the below-named varieties of Dahlias, large divided clumps or roots, except where noted, 10c each, $1 per doz., $7.50 per 100, $70 per 1,000.

Jack Rose. (Decorative type.) The variety Jack Rose is rightly named and is a florist's Dahlia, "from the ground up." The color is similar to the Jacqueminot rose, and is a unique color in the Dahlia, which lights up beautifully at night. The habit of the plant is stocky, very free-flowering. Producing its blooms in great profusion, upon erect, long stiff stems, making it invaluable for cutting. You cannot afford to be without it, if you sell cut-flowers. Price, green plants, ready April 1, 1909, 50c each, $5 per doz., $35 per 100.

Decorative Dahlias

Sylvia. Best described as a Giant Nymphæa, being stronger, larger and deeper colored. Flowers 4 to 6 inches in diameter, of fine form and full to the center, which is white, shaded to soft pink on the outer petals. One of the best cut-flower varieties.
Admiral Dewey. Brilliant imperial purple.
Black Beauty. A beautiful dark velvety maroon.
Blue Oban. A sport of the Decorative Dahlia Oban, and the nearest approach to blue found in Dahlias. 25c each, $2.50 per doz.
Catherine Duer. Strong-growing, free-flowering crimson-scarlet.
Clifford W. Bruton. Best yellow; immense size; perfect form
Frank L. Bassett. Color, bright royal purple, shading to blue.
Grand Duke Alexis. Very large, white, tinted pale lavender.
Henry Patrick. Superb pure white; long stems; fine for cutting.
Lyndhurst. One of the best bright scarlet.
Maid of Kent. Cherry-red, tipped white.
Mrs. Winters. Very large; pure snow-white.
Nymphaea. Color, clear, light shrimp-pink.
Oban. Very large rosy lavender.
Orange King. Rich glowing orange; early and profuse.
Perle (Perle de la tete d' Or). The grandest white Decorative Dahlia to date; very large and of beautiful shape.
William Agnew. Rich, dazzling red; immense size.

Cactus Dahlias

Aegir. Petals are twisted and color bright rich crimson-scarlet.
Countess of Lonsdale. A pleasing blending of amber and salmon.
Dainty. The ground color is lemon-yellow, which shades lighter as the season advances, at which time the color approaches canary-yellow at the base of the petals.
Earl of Pembroke. Bright plum. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Floradora. Color, dark velvety crimson. The best dark crimson for cutting, as the flowers are borne on long, erect stems and keep for a long time. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
General Buller. Color, deep, rich, velvety maroon, tipped white. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Harbor Light. Flowers are of immense size, outer petals extending to 7 inches across; long, slender, twisted and incurved; color, orange-red.
Jealousy. Purest pale canary-yellow.
J. H. Jackson. The largest of the deep, rich velvety maroons.
Keynes White. One of the best white Cactus Dahlias.
Kriemhilde. One of the finest pink Cactus Dahlias.

Cactus Dahlias

Mrs. H. J. Jones. Incurved portion of the petals are deep crimson; the broad stripe of white running through the center of the petals extends almost to the center.
Standard Bearer. Brightest scarlet; profuse bloomer. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Strahlein Krone. Intense cardinal-red.
Victor Von Scheffel. The color is a fresh, delicate pink, shading to deep rose-pink. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Winsome. Flowers white, very large, beautiful Cactus form.

Show and Fancy Dahlias

A. D. Livoni. Beautiful soft pink; early and profuse bloomer.
A. Pefferhorn. Rosy crimson.
Arabella. Pale primrose, tipped and shaded old rose and lavender.
Camelliaflora. A fine large pure white.
Glowing Coal. Brilliant red.
Green's White. One of the best whites for cutting.
Harlequin. Brilliant crimson, striped and tipped white.
Lemon Beauty. A grand yellow.
Menheddy Beauty. Fancy buff, with crimson spots, free, long stems, large bloom. 8c each, 80c per doz., $6 per 100.
Olympia. Color is deep rose-pink, striped and penciled crimson.
Progress. The color is a clear, soft rosy lake, beautifully penciled and spotted glowing crimson. Very valuable as a cut-flower. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Queen Victoria. Deep yellow; fine for cutting.
Red Hussar. Pure cardinal, red flower, very free bloomer, splendid for cutting.
Storm King (Blizzard). A companion for the superb pink Dahlia, A. D. Livoni. Flowers are snow-white; extremely early and a free-bloomer. This is the florist's ideal white. 15c each, $1.25 per doz., $10 per 100.
White Swan. Snow-white, with long stems.

Single Dahlias

THE 20TH CENTURY. Intense rosy crimson, with white tips and white disk around the yellow center.

Dahlias to Color

We can also furnish, without names, in mixture, all colors separate, or all colors mixed, as follows:
Mixed Pinks, Mixed Whites, Mixed Reds, Mixed Yellows. 8c each, 75c per doz., $6 per 100, $55 per 1,000.
Mixed, all colors. 60c per doz., $5 per 100, $45 per 1,000.

ARTHUR T. BODDINGTON, Seedsman, 342 W. 14th Street NEW YORK CITY

Among the new exhibits added during the last week were roses from R. T. McGorum, groups of chorozemas, acacias and Cattleya Schrœderæ from William Thatcher, and many new rambler roses from M. H. Walsh. Outside of the cut flowers and bulbous plants, the majority of the exhibits lasted splendidly.

The immense success attending this show would seem to mark a new era in American horticulture, and future shows to be distinct successes must break away strongly from stereotyped arrangements. The probability is strong that future important shows in Boston will be arranged to run for a full week, with the addition of new features at intervals.

At a meeting of the board of trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, April 3, a special diploma was voted to James F. M. Farquhar for the Japanese garden, which was the star feature of the late spring show. This award has only once previously been made in the society's history, the recipient being the late Marshall P. Wilder, for eminent services as a pomologist. An appropriation of $750 additional for gratuities for the summer shows of 1909 was voted, and an invitation tendered to the New England Dahlia Society to hold its annual show in Horticultural hall, September 10 to 12.

Various Notes.

Everything points to a big attendance at the annual banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club in Horticultural hall, April 14. The reception will be at 6 o'clock, the banquet at 6:30 and dancing will start at 9 o'clock sharp. With Judge C. W. Hoitt as toastmaster, excellent musical selections and songs, a splendid menu and first-class orchestra, everyone attending should enjoy himself. The committee on decorations would like all contributions of plants and flowers to be left at or sent to the hall not later than 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the banquet.

L. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., who will speak on roses at the club meeting April 20, will treat the subject in a different manner to the average lecturer. The comparative values of different varieties will receive consideration.

Welch Bros. are busy this week, and, in addition to their cut flower and sundries trade, are doing a heavy trade in pot plants shipped direct from the greenhouses.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, who are large growers of Easter plants, are having a heavy trade in lilies, azaleas, bulbous stock, rhododendrons, rambler roses and their other specialties.

Thomas Roland is having a phenomenal call for pot plants and early this week was pretty well sold out. Probably nowhere in the east is there a better grown lot of acacias, ramblers, hydrangeas, azaleas and other plants.

Mrs. E. M. Gill, of Medford, who secured second prize for mantel decorations at the spring show and also second for table decorations at the November show in 1908, has exhibited in Boston over a period of forty-five years and since 1865 has been a regular prize winner. Mrs. Gill is in her seventy-fifth year and her many friends are proud of her success and wish her many more years of success.

A. Leuthy & Co., of Roslindale, have had an exceptional run on Easter plants and their immense stock of azaleas is already practically sold out.

April 5, with a shade temperature of 74 degrees, proved the warmest of the year to date, the temperature not having exceeded 60 degrees on any preceding day.

The New England Nurseries are having a heavy spring call for trees and shrubs, far in excess of a year ago. Shipping commenced two or three weeks ago.

Seed stores are all phenomenally busy and report business as showing a striking advance over that of 1908.

W. B. Goodenow has a heavy pick of Campbell violets for Easter. He has a big lot of tomatoes coming along to occupy their places shortly.

The North Shore Horticultural Society has issued a schedule for its exhibitions for the present year. The rose show will be held June 30 and July 1. There are fifty-six classes provided, in addition to twenty-one specials in the way of silver cups, etc. The summer show comes on August 25 and 26. There are 126 regular classes and no less than twenty-seven specials. No chrysanthemum show will be held. J. D. Morrison, Manchester, is secretary, to whom all communications should be sent. W. N. Craig.

Iowa Falls, Ia.—W. H. Hall has rented the Riverside Greenhouses and will take possession July 1, succeeding J. P. Murphy, who has bought a floral plant at Independence.

PACIFIC COAST.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are within ten days of Easter, and signs of considerable trade are in the air. From most of the growers interviewed, it is evident that orders from interior points are quite as numerous as there is stock on hand to fill, and as for potted flowering stuff, there certainly will be a shortage. Azaleas are in demand and none of the growers seems to have much of an assortment on hand that will be just right for Easter Sunday. In most cases the blooms will not be profuse enough to make them good sellers. The same can be said about rhododendrons and almost everything else in the flowering line. Easter lilies, however, I am inclined to think will be in sufficient quantity to go around, both in potted and in cut stock.

Carnations and roses are in fair supply, although there is no surplus at this time. Violets are getting scarcer, and in a couple of weeks they will be practically out of the market. Valley is selling better than at any time this season, and all the growers report heavy orders for Easter. Narcissi of all kinds, with the exception of a few late daffodils, are over for the season. Quite a quantity of tulips are being exhibited in the shops and are proving fair sellers. Lilac is scarce, for some unaccountable reason, and there is a good demand for anything in that line that is offered.

Small pots and pans of flowering stuff, such as primulas, cyclamens and cinerarias, are in good shape, but many more could be sold if the retailers could get them. Freesias are over for another year and they have proven to be among the best sellers handled this season. Fruit blossoms are past their prime and wild flowers fill in nicely. Outside roses, although not in abundant supply, are being used to some extent. In another week they will be quite plentiful and the street hucksters will make inroads on the supply.

Green goods are as usual. Maidenhair fern is more plentiful than it has been at any time this season. Smilax is scarce and, from appearances, will be so until long after Easter.

Various Notes.

A miscreant hurled a stone through the greenhouse of Peter Thiesen, a grower of Emeryville, Cal. The house stands on a line dividing that town from Oakland, Cal. As the party happened to be standing in the latter town when the mischief was done, an Emeryville justice dismissed the case against him, claiming that the crime was committed by a man outside of his jurisdiction, and an Oakland city justice also claimed want of jurisdiction, on the ground that the crime was not committed within his territory.

That a gardener employed by a contractor to beautify grounds cannot hold the owner of the land responsible for his services, was a decision by Judge Geary, of Oakland, March 25. The case in which this opinion was given is the suit of Andrew J. Anderson, a well-known landscape gardener, against Mrs. Mary Zappitini. Anderson was hired by a contractor who had the entire charge of the work, to perform certain specified services. Being unable to collect at the completion of his work from the contractor,

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus
Last year, owing to the almost total failure of the Asparagus Plumosus to seed, I was unable to fill my orders, but this season I am to the front with about 2,000,000 seed.
The plants, after a year's rest, blossomed freely and matured a heavy crop of what I believe will be the strongest seed ever sent out of California. The Asparagus Plumosus grown here needs no introduction to you, however, as you are already fully acquainted with its merits. You can get seed promptly, as they are being harvested now, and can be delivered upon receipt of your order.
Seeds will be sold by count, with the usual guarantee as to germination, and I will again sell at my usual low, cash-with-order prices as per following list:

1,000 seeds	$ 2.00	13,000 seeds	$20.00
6,000 seeds	10.00	25,000 seeds	35.00
50,000 seeds			62.50

I shall be glad to receive your order and know you will be pleased with the results.

New York, April 5.—Beet tops, 50c to 75c box; cucumbers, 60c to $1 doz.; lettuce, $1 to $2 strap; mushrooms, 25c to 55c lb.; mint, 40c to 50c doz. bunches; radishes, $1.50 to $2 per 100 bunches; rhubarb, $2 to $4 per 100 bunches; tomatoes, 6c to 15c lb.

Boston, April 5.—Bunch beets, $1.25 to $1.75 doz.; bunch carrots, 75c to $1 doz.; dandelions, $1.25 to $1.50 box; cucumbers, $4 to $8.50 box; tomatoes, 40c to 60c lb.; parsley, $1.25 to $1.50 box; rhubarb, 6c to 9c lb.; lettuce, 60c to $1 box; romaine, 75c to $1 doz.; escarolle, 50c to $1 doz.; chicory, 50c to $1 doz.

ASPARAGUS AND RHUBARB.

I am considering the investing of some money in asparagus and rhubarb, to grow through the summer for forcing next winter. Will these crops pay better for the time they are in the house than the same space planted in lettuce for the same length of time? L. A. M. K.

It is impossible to state positively which crop would pay better, as different results are obtained each year, depending mostly on the market and the season, whether mild or severe. However, asparagus and rhubarb should be made to pay as well as lettuce if you have a good market for them. Lettuce is sure and safe, as a rule, but the others are more variable in price and uncertain in yield, unless the grower has considerable experience. You might get an excellent yield and high prices and do better than on lettuce, but if you are inexperienced I would suggest trying a smaller area for experimenting. Then, in case of regret, it would not be serious. H. G.

DISEASED TOMATO PLANTS.

Can you tell me the cause and cure of rot, as I call it, on tomato plants? It affects them before they are up, and afterward it seems to eat off the plants. It is worse in early seasons like this. R. G.

The trouble encountered is a fungous disease which travels over the surface of the soil. The best way to handle it is to get some clean, fresh soil from outside, which has been frozen and purified. Do not use soil for seed flats that has been used around the buildings before, as it is more liable to be full of disease. Ventilate the houses each day and do not keep the seed boxes too wet, as that encourages the disease.

Copper solution or Bordeaux mixture sprinkled over the soil will usually stop its spreading, but if fresh soil is used and kept slightly dry, and if the house is ventilated, little or no trouble will be had. H. G.

FERTILIZER FOR TOMATOES.

I should like to know what kind of fertilizers would be the best for tomato culture, where the soil has been pretty well worn out and where stable manure is not obtainable. Please state also the quantity per acre. W. C. S.

Contrary to the general opinion, tomatoes are heavy feeders and need good soil, well fertilized, but not too rich in nitrogen. Too much nitrogen in the fertilizer is inclined to make an excessive growth of foliage, or vines and leaves, at the expense of blooms and fruit. For this reason, fresh manure is not as good as rotted or partly rotted manure for tomatoes, as it has more nitrogen in it when fresh.

Well rotted manure and plenty of it is what I like the best for my tomato fields. Where this cannot be had, choose a commercial fertilizer which has about equal parts of phosphoric acid and potash, but only one-third or one-fourth as much nitrogen as of either of the other two ingredients. For instance, a fertilizer with an analysis of two to four per cent nitrogen, six to eight per cent phosphoric acid and six to eight per cent potash, would be good for your needs.

Bone meal and muriate of potash make an excellent combination for tomatoes, if used in the proportion of about 500 pounds of bone meal and 150 pounds of muriate or sulphate of potash to each acre. These amounts could be increased if the soil is very poor.

Rotted manure has one advantage over commercial fertilizers, in loosening up the soil. H. G.

ENDIVE.

In the Review of March 4 a correspondent was telling how to hold endive or keep it over winter. Can a person keep any amount of it in sand, say three or four tons in one pile, or would it keep better in small lots? What time should it be sown in order to be ready to pack about the last of September or first part of October? What is the right amount of soil to leave on the roots, or is it to be cut the same as you would lettuce? G. & G.

It is better to lay the endive in the smaller lots, rather than three or four tons of sand in a single pile. Lift the plants with a ball as large as two fists doubled. Let them be perfectly dry and, of course, carefully tied up. Lay them in a slanting position, cover with sand, and then lay another layer of plants. The sand is better if perfectly dry.

If seed is sown the first week in July, the plants will be of sufficient size to house early in October. As they have a much wider spread than lettuces, allow in the rows double the space you are in the habit of giving cabbage lettuces.

Chicory, which is much imported from France and sold as endive (see the Review of April 1), should be sown now in rows two feet apart. The roots can be lifted early in November, stored in a frost-proof cellar, packed in earth, and forced in a warm, dark shed or cellar at any time during the winter. W. N. Craig.

CLEANING GREENHOUSE GLASS.

In the Review of April 1, I noted the inquiry of O. J. P. in regard to cleaning greenhouse glass in cases where the dirt is extremely adhesive. The following solution will remove paint or putty and clean the glass thoroughly:

Slake three pounds of quicklime with water and add one pound of American pearlash, making the mixture about the consistency of thick paint. Apply this to the glass and let it remain twenty-four hours. Then remove it with a stiff brush. Emil Wohlert.

If O. J. P. will use muriatic acid for cleaning his old glass, he will get every bit of dirt off and the glass will be as good as new. Mix the acid half and half with water. Put it in some big wooden vessel and put the glass in it for about fifteen minutes, when all dirt will be dissolved and it must then be washed off with a cloth and water. Don't get your hands in the solution. John Braje.

One insertion of the advertisement brought me all the orders I need.—Geo. S. Woodruff, Independence, Ia.

EVERGREEN SEEDLINGS FREE.

It is reported from Washington that among the changes in the tariff bill to be made as amendments by the Ways and Means committee is one placing evergreen seedlings on the free list. It has been decided that, except on a few items, no amendments from the floor shall be permitted, but the Ways and Means committee is given the right to propose as many amendments as it desires, affecting the general schedules. Report has it that some 250 such amendments have been decided on, but only one of these affects the schedule on nursery stock. Under the old law, and also under the Payne bill as originally introduced, evergreen seedlings were dutiable at $1 per thousand and fifteen per cent ad valorem.

ANOTHER HARDY HYDRANGEA.

The introduction to commerce of the handsome native Hydrangea arborescens sterilis, catalogued as Snowball Hydrangea, may be thought almost to mark an epoch in hardy shrub culture, says F. W. Van Fleet in his column in the Rural New Yorker, as it is more graceful and earlier in bloom than the extremely popular Japan Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora, but even before the general dissemination of the native kind there is brought to light another beautiful sterile or snowball-flowered type of hydrangea, this time a variety of H. cinerea or radiata, native of Georgia and the Carolinas west to Missouri. This new snowball hydrangea is said to be distinct and handsome, both in bloom and foliage, the flower heads forming in midsummer two weeks earlier than the sterile form of H. arborescens. The leaves of H. cinerea are usually smaller and covered with grayish down or tomentum beneath. The type is known to be hardy in Philadelphia, and may be so much farther north.

Dreer's Hardy Perennials

Largest assortment of desirable varieties. Plants of proper size to give best immediate results. For complete list of varieties see our current wholesale list.

Many planters not thoroughly familiar with this class of plants have an idea that nothing but a large, field-grown clump will give satisfactory returns for the season. This, as experience has taught us, is in most instances a mistake. A vigorous plant of proper size will, in nearly every case, give quicker and better returns than the best so-called "field clumps" that can be procured. It will be noticed that the majority of the stock offered in this list is described as being 3, 4 or 5-inch pots. This does not necessarily mean that the plants have been altogether pot-grown, but that they have been field-grown and dug and potted up during the fall and early winter months, and such stock can be planted, even late in the spring, with practically no loss, which, in the case of clumps, is often quite serious.

NEW ROSE
WHITE KILLARNEY

Come and see White Killarney growing at our Scarborough houses, and you will say at once, as every one does who has seen it, it is they have ever seen. You need it if you want to be up to the times, and it will pay you better than any other white rose that you can plant. You will regret it if you do not plant it this year, and you will not regret it if you do. Big lots are being booked. Get your order in early. Send us order at once, while you think of it. Get early stock. It will not cost you any more to order today, while you think of it, than it will two months from now. Be the early bird that catches the worm.

Strong young plants, 2¼-inch pots, own root, now ready for delivery, $30 per 100, 250 for $70, 500 for $125, 1000 for $250. Grafted plants, ready now, $35 per 100, 250 for $82.50, 500 for $150, 1000 for $300.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000 body, to fight the "tree butchers" and fraudulent dopers.

The following charter members were enrolled: President, John T. Withers, Jersey City; vice-president, James E. Whitaker, Boston; secretary-treasurer, F. A. Bartlett, Stamford, Conn.; examining committee, H. L. Frost, Boston, and Chester L. Whitaker, New York; also Lewis H. Wise, Jersey City, and G. H. Allen, New York.

A special meeting will be called by the president in the near future to enroll new members. A number of applications have already been received. A convention will be held annually to discuss scientific matters in connection with the profession and to enlighten the public in the care and preservation of trees.

After the meeting a banquet was held in the barn room at Mouquin's. After the president welcomed the guests he introduced H. L. Frost as toastmaster. Dr. George H. Stone, botanist and pathologist of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, was the chief speaker of the evening. Addresses also were made by Leonard Barron, W. E. Maynard, H. L. Jones, George H. Wyckoff, W. B. Pratt, John F. Marion and Addison T. Hastings. Mr. Wyckoff's partner, Mr. Rose, proved a second Mark Twain. Alexander J. Guttman made a complimentary speech and contributed much to the spirit of the occasion by the donation of the table decorations, which consisted of a large plaque of Killarney, Richmond and Bride roses and another of Victory carnations, placed at opposite ends, with ferns, pansies and narcissi artistically arranged on the table and a carnation boutonniere at each plate. Sweet Briar

The good old English variety. 75c for 5, $12 per 100.

Baby Rambler Roses

BABY DOROTHY. The same in habit as Baby Rambler, but the color of the flowers is similar to Dorothy Perkins. This variety has created quite a sensation when exhibited at the English National Rose Society's and other shows. "Baby Dorothy," when planted out, flowers perpetually from spring until autumn. It makes an excellent pot plant for forcing. Price for strong, field-grown plants, $1.50 for 5, $25 per 100.

CATHERINE SEIMETH. A very important novelty. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. White with yellowish center. It has the true rose perfume. $1.25 for 5, $20 per 100.

MRS. WM. H. CUTBUSH. A grand acquisition to the Baby Rambler class. Color intense crimson, and exceptionally free-flowering. $1.25 for 5, $20 per 100.

MME. NORBERT LEVAVASSEUR (Baby Rambler). Strong, field-grown plants, $1.25 for 10, $12 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER. (Grown as a Standard.) The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. 35c each, $3 for 10, $30 per 100.

BABY DOROTHY. (Grown as a Standard.) For description, see above. $1.50 each, $15 for 10.

A Good Polyantha Rose, Perle des Rouges

A polyantha variety of unusual merit. Color velvety crimson, with reflex petals of bright cerise. 75c for 5, $12 per 100.

Ramblers and Other Climbing Roses

CRIMSON RAMBLER. American Grown. The only stock for forcing. Large heavy plants, two years old, mossed and packed in bundles of 10. 2 to 3 feet, $1 for 10, $7.50 per 100; 3 to 5 feet, $1.25 for 10, $10 per 100; 5 to 6 feet, $1.75 for 10, $15 per 100.

PHILADELPHIA RAMBLER. Extra-fine, American-grown stock. 3 to 4 feet, $1.75 for 10, $15 per 100; 4 to 5 feet, $2 for 10, $18 per 100.

DOROTHY PERKINS. Resembles the Crimson Rambler, except in color, which is a lovely shell-pink, holding a long time without fading. $1.25 for 10, $12 per 100.

TAUSENDSCHON. The new Rambler Rose. The name translated means a "thousand beauties." Color, beautiful rose, shading to pink. $2.25 for 10, $20 per 100.

LADY GAY. A seedling from the popular Crimson Rambler, which it resembles in habit and general effect. The flowers are of a delicate cherry-pink color, which fades to soft white. Strong plants, field-grown, 4 to 5 feet, $1.75 for 10, $15 per 100; extra-strong, 6 to 7 feet, $2.25 for 10, $20 per 100.

WEDDING BELLS. A seedling of the Crimson Rambler. The most floriferous Rose yet produced. The color is white with the upper half of the petals soft-pink. Fine for forcing. Perfectly hardy. Extra-strong, 3-year field-grown flowering plants, 4 to 5 feet. $2.25 for 10, $20 per 100.

CLIMBING HERMOSA. A climbing type of this well-known Rose. 35c each, $3.25 for 10, $30 per 100.

Well-known Climbers

Mme. Plantier. White.
Baltimore Belle. Pale blush color.
Prairie Queen. Red, changing to pink.
Seven Sisters. Clear pink.

The Market.

The usual pre-holiday quiet did not prevail last week. Every house had a large share of orders, and not one retailer complained of poor business. The wholesalers, of course, are putting out stock in large quantities, and booking orders every day for delivery the first of Easter week. Stock is plentiful, in variety and cheap. Easter lilies are lower than usual, and give signs of an oversupply. Carnations and roses are plentiful, but Beauties are scarce. Baskets seem to be the thing for Easter and a number of different styles are being received, to be filled for sale next week.

Various Notes.

R. A. Latham has his store well decorated with plants in baskets, and decorative plants of all kinds. Business was good with him last week.

O. C. Swanson has a fine stock of plants and cut flowers for the Easter trade, and he finds business excellent for the season.

Souden & Desmond find their large new store admirably adapted for the handling of plants during the rush, and expect a fine trade.

Miss Whitted has in stock a number of original baskets, in large quantities, and of designs attractive of themselves, without the filling of cut flowers or plants.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is cleaning out its stock every day, and business is excellent. Cut flowers promise to be fairly plentiful, and orders are coming in thick and fast.

Visitors: Miss O. Sullivan, Superior, Wis.; Mr. Clarine, Faribault, Minn.

New Pompon Chrysanthemum

"Baby Margaret"

A sport from "BABY" (Yellow)

This, we think, is the most valuable Pompon to date; is pure white and of as fine form as the famous yellow "Baby." Indispensable for funeral work, brides' bouquets, wedding table decorations and many other purposes.

CONQUEST

A new seedling Carnation to be disseminated next season. This is a variety that florists have been wanting ever since they discarded Prosperity.

CONQUEST is a light flesh-pink, overlaid with a deep rose-pink, the color extending over the petals from the center almost to the edge. It does not fade, making it a most beautiful and attractive flower. Its habit is somewhat on the order of Lawson, although the stem is somewhat longer, and very stiff. The flowers are well filled and nicely formed, which add to its attractiveness. Without a doubt, it will be the most attractive, as well as the most profitable variety to be disseminated the coming season.

Orders booked now for January 1, 1910, delivery. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Trade Conditions.

Business last week was quiet. There was some little funeral work, but no steady trade to speak of. Everything looks favorable for a big Easter, with plenty of flowers to go around, with the exception of Easter lilies. The best pot lilies will bring 15 cents a bloom, while the cut ones will bring 12 cents. Good Beauties will bring $6 per dozen. Roses and carnations are arriving in good quality and quantity, with a little increase in price. There will be some home-grown violets, but most of them will be the Hudson river stock. Orchids will be scarce, but there will be a good supply of valley, peas, lilacs, snapdragons and bulbous stuff.

Various Notes.

B. F. Hensley, of Knightstown, is all smiles. It is a new ten-pound boy. Both mother and son are doing well.

H. W. Rieman is well supplied with hydrangeas, azaleas and spiræas, but will run short on lilies for Easter.

John Heidenreich has a fine lot of azaleas, lilies, spiræas, cinerarias and bulbous stuff. He is always on the spot for Christmas and Easter.

E. A. Nelson has gone to the lake for a week's duck hunting and fishing.

The ladies of the Indianapolis Orphans' Society will have their annual Easter flower sale April 10, in one of the downtown department stores. The committee in charge is composed of about fifty of the leading society ladies of the city, and they are sparing no efforts to make this sale a success. While they receive donations from the different florists and friends, they purchase a great many flowers. Although they hold the prices up, the retailers believe they could get along without this sale.

A. Kampe has an elegant lot of ramblers for Easter.

Alfred Warner has assumed the entire control of the Warner-Coy Co. and the firm will hereafter be known as the A. A. Warner Co.

H. D. Schilling has an elegant lot of Lilium Formosum.

Hartje and Elder are sending in quantities of sweet peas.

Fred Stolte, with A. Wiegand & Son, is back to work again, after a week's illness.

Bertermann Bros. have a big cut of carnations and a fine line of blooming plants for Easter.

George Wiegand is quite an automobile enthusiast. Any of these fine afternoons will find him breaking the speed limit on Capitol avenue. H. L. W.

SANGAMO

Is the new, brilliant, glistening pink carnation shown at Indianapolis and awarded the A. C. S. Certificate of Merit, attracting the attention of every carnation grower on account of its very pleasing color, long, stiff stem, and well formed flowers, measuring 3 to 3½ inches. The calyx is strong, and as a producer, it cannot be excelled.

The Market.

Business is quiet, although since better weather arrived the transient trade seems more active. There is plenty of almost everything coming in and prices rule low. Even Beauty roses are a trifle more plentiful and prices are lower on all grades of roses. Carnations are held firmer, $3 and $4 being the price for most of the specials. Sweet peas are a great favorite and are handled in large quantities at from 25 cents to 50 cents per hundred. Single and double violets are now seen in large quantities, with the best in fair demand. Easter lilies are now seen, the forerunners of the Easter crop, which is almost a total failure here. In hydrangeas there are only a few large plants, and what few are seen are in 5-inch or 6-inch pots.

Tulips, hyacinths and jonquils are arriving in large quantities and move fairly well. Bulbs in pans are in steady demand and, from the present outlook, the Easter trade will be far better than last year. A number of the growers will not be able to get their bulbs in on time. Geraniums are one of the short items. They are not to be had in any such quantities as formerly and are retailing at 15 cents each.

Various Notes.

The death of Henry Eberhardt, which occurred March 30, at the home of his son, August Eberhardt, 2875 West Baltimore street, removes one of the oldest and most respected men in the trade. Mr. Eberhardt was 78 years old and had a florists' establishment on Beaumont avenue, Catonsville. He was one of the charter members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore. A large number of the members attended the funeral, which was in the Western cemetery.

Charles Cook has purchased four acres of land on the old Frederick road, where he has started to erect a fine dwelling. He will offer his present place for sale.

James Glass has some fine azaleas, which are finding a ready sale at his market stand.

Israel Rosnosky, of the H. F. Michell Co., was in Baltimore on Saturday, April 3. Q.

Benton Harbor, Mich.—F. L. Tornquist is making preparations for the building of an addition to his greenhouses. The new space will be used for mums and a general line of plants.

HEADQUARTERS FOR Araucarias

"By Jingo!" was the remark the other day of a bright looking gentleman, as he stepped, with his lady friend, into our Araucaria houses. "If these aren't the best shaped and finest looking specimens of Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa I have ever seen, then I'm a mark. What a sight for this time of the year!"

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds, same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, 7 to 8-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 3, 4 and 5 tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 20, 25, 30 and 35 in. high, an Elephant for only 75c; a Jumbo for $1.00 and a Holy Terror for $1.25 to $1.50.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

WORCESTER, MASS.

The April exhibition of the Worcester County Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural hall, Thursday afternoon, April 1, from 3 to 4:30 o'clock. It was considered an excellent showing of flowers, plants and vegetables for this season of the year.

There was a large attendance and much interest was manifested in the display of plants by H. F. A. Lange, which occupied the center of the floor space.

Two baskets were entered, and these received much praise. Mr. Lange showed one of roses, lilies, carnations, hyacinths and ferns, and Mrs. A. E. Underwood entered one of carnations, callas and ferns.

The showing of cut flowers was good, considering the approach of Easter and the demand that will be made upon the florists for cut flowers. Mr. Lange's display was especially fine, and A. W. Hixon had a nice assortment, callas being the principal feature; Mrs. A. E. Underwood was the other exhibitor of cut flowers.

Narcissi in pots were shown by Mr. Lange and Mrs. Percy G. Forbes, and hyacinths were entered by Edward W. Breed. Tulips were from the Lange and Breed gardens.

The vegetables were interesting and a display of rhubarb made by Herbert R. Kinney was much discussed.

In the florists' division the principal awards were as follows:

Cut flowers, H. F. A. Lange, first; A. W. Hixon, second; Mrs. A. E. Underwood, third.

Narcissi, H. F. A. Lange, first; Mrs. Percy G. Forbes, second.

Hyacinths, Edward W. Breed.

Baskets, H. F. A. Lange, first; Mrs. A. E. Underwood, second.

Tulips, H. F. A. Lange, first; Edward N. Breed, second; Mrs. A. E. Underwood, third.

Gratuity, display of plants, H. F. A. Lange.

The next show will be held May 6.

CINERARIAS FOR CHRISTMAS

If I plant cineraria seed early, will they bloom for Christmas? I am growing them for the first time. Any information about them will be a help for me.
H. W.

Cinerarias do not grow well during warm weather and the seedlings are liable to damp off when a hot wave comes along. I do not think it will pay you to attempt to get your cinerarias for Christmas. They are more seasonable from February to April and are usually in good shape for Easter, unless it comes exceptionally late. I would not advise you to sow before the last of July and remember that cinerarias must at all times be grown cool. They cannot be forced at any stage of their growth.
C. W.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS OUTDOORS.

Will chrysanthemums planted out in spring do well to leave out during the fall for flowering? Are they hardy enough to leave out over winter in Pennsylvania? The varieties are: Golden Glow, Touset, Monrovia, Pacific Supreme and October Frost. E. B.

The varieties named will not amount to anything if left outdoors in your latitude. You might get some flowers in a favorable fall, but the quality would be inferior as compared with flowers grown under glass. None of the sorts named is hardy. I would advise you to plant the mums named in beds or benches. If that is impossible, use boxes six inches deep and grow them outside until the end of August. Indoor culture all the time is, however, to be preferred.
C. W.

BURNS THE WEEDS IN GRASS.

Owing to the great success that has been achieved by the use of calcium cyanamide for killing weeds on lawns and grass plots, it being especially caustic to broad-leaved varieties, I thought readers of this journal would be interested in knowing the proportions to use, and how to make up a good weed-killer and lawn sand for themselves, says a writer in an English trade paper.

Calcium cyanamide is a form of nitrate of lime, and has high value as a nitrogenous manure; it gives both lime and nitrogen. It operates by causing the grass to grow faster, and by absolutely burning the broad leaves of weeds. The reason given is that the compound slips between the grass and rests on the broader surfaces of weeds, missing the one and burning the other.

To use, take a proportion equal to one to one and one-half ounces per square yard, according to one's own judgment as to the amount required for feeding the grass. The rule is to try the smaller quantities and increase if necessary. As it is absolutely essential that the fertilizer should not be put on lumpy, add three to four times its weight in dry sand, and spread in proportion; that is, if using one ounce of calcium cyanamide per square yard, and four times weight in sand, then spread five ounces of mixture over the above-mentioned surface.

TO CLEAN UP THE HOUSES.

The following formula will prove of great advantage in helping to keep the fungoid spores out of a greenhouse during the resting season, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser (English). It is now well known that even when plants have been removed out of the glass houses, millions of spores of disease find harborage in all sorts of crevices in walls, cracks in wood, in sheds, etc. This mixture is designed to kill these spores, and is not recommended in any way to be placed on trees or plants. As a matter of fact, it would badly scorch them. This preparation is to be used in place of plain whitewash and is made as follows: With ten pounds of best sulphur, mix well together, dry, fifteen to twenty pounds of unslaked caustic lime, place in tub, and then add twenty to twenty-five gallons of boiling water.

When all action has ceased, apply by brush or spray in the ordinary way. Many growers now whitewash by means of a sprayer, knapsack or machine, as it is more effective in getting into holes, etc., and takes less labor. It is necessary that care should be taken to use unslaked lime, or the necessary sulphides will not be formed. The cost is small, merely the addition of the sulphur, and its effectiveness is unquestioned. There are no fumes arising from this wash and it therefore cannot possibly harm any plants, however delicate, unless it touches them.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

Everybody says business is good and all stock is bringing fair prices.

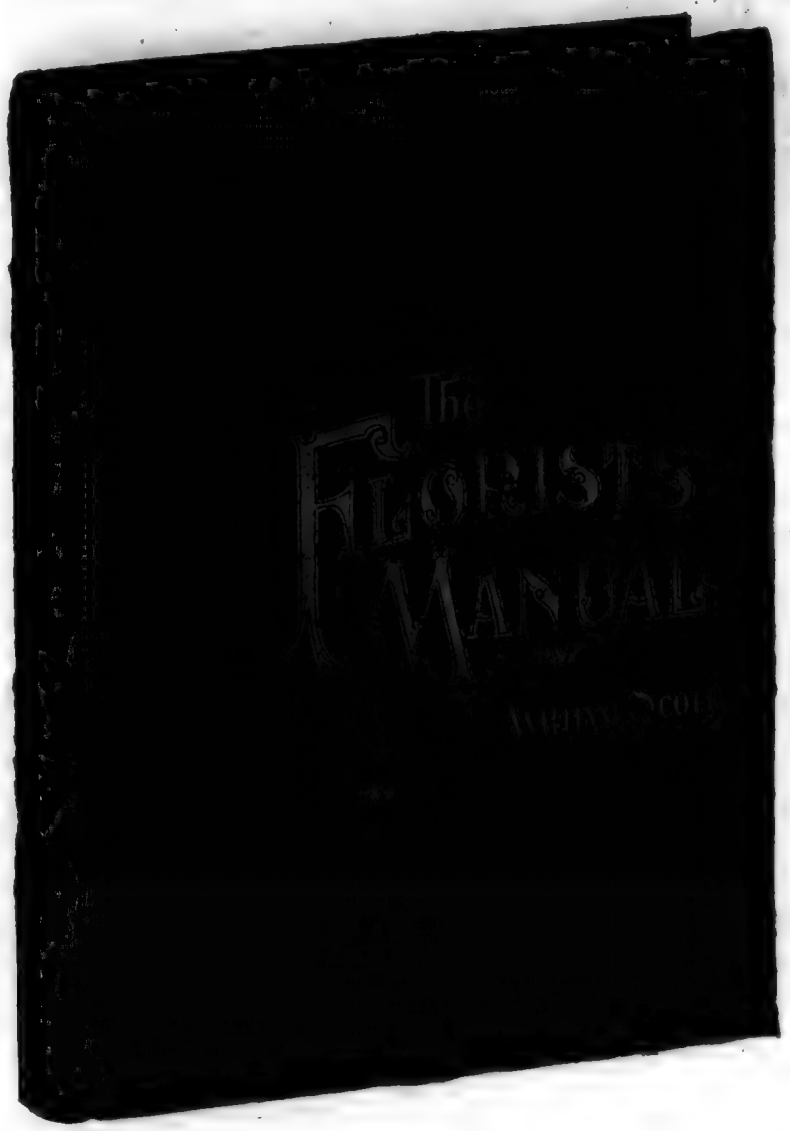
J. L. Schiller has not enough room in his present location and is looking about for a place where he can start a nursery as well as greenhouses.

John Gratopp, after losing his son about eighteen months ago, also lost one of his stepsons last week, by tuberculosis.

Visitors in town included Clifford Pruner, with E. H. Hunt, Chicago.
E. A. K.

I DON'T see how any florist can do business without the REVIEW.—ALFRED RUNNION, Sheldon, Ill.

I FIND the REVIEW to be the best paper for the trade, either in buying or selling.—KARL KUNY, Altoona, Pa.



THE REVIEW is ahead of any other paper for florists and I cannot do without it.—H. W. WRIGHT, Amarillo, Tex.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—W. H. Hizer has leased a part of the lumber yard of Woodruff & Maguire, on South Main street, for the greenhouse which he is to bring to this place.

TWIN LAKE, MICH.—Earl Stearns has received a carload of lumber from Chicago, for a greenhouse that he is building on the farm he bought near the Granell road just outside the Twin Lake limits. Floyd Oliver is busily building a greenhouse on the Granell road near Mr. Stearns and is settling down on the farm that he has purchased of his father, John Oliver.

This is The Florists' Manual

By William Scott

SECOND EDITION

THOROUGHLY REVISED AND BROUGHT UP TO DATE

NO SCIENCE, BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE

"I have several times been consulted by those who would make a beginning in the Florists' business. In each case I have said that the first step is to subscribe for a Trade Paper, and the next to procure a copy of the Florists' Manual." —J. A. VALENTINE, Pres. Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.

"Find enclosed $5 for the Florists' Manual, by William Scott. It is the best book of the age on commercial floriculture and should be in the home of every gardener."—CONRAD FORBACH, Buffalo, N. Y.

No dry-as-dust botanical classifications, but tells you just how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

Greenhouse Heating.

DATA ON HEATING.

The Illinois Malleable Iron Co., Chicago, has just issued a new general catalogue of boilers, pipes and heating specialties, containing 466 pages, several of which are devoted to tables covering the essential data regarding greenhouse heating. It is shown that with steam heating one square foot of radiation will heat to a temperature of:

Degrees.	Sq. Ft. Glass.
40 to 50	5 to 6
50 to 60	4½ to 5½
60 to 70	4 to 5

Degrees.	Sq. Ft. Glass.
40 to 50	3½ to 4½
50 to 60	3 to 4
60 to 70	2½ to 3½

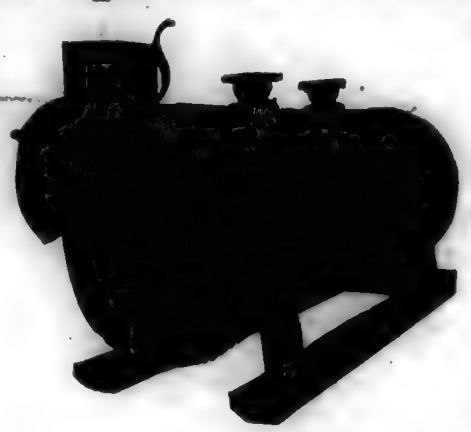
It is shown that a wrought iron pipe 100 feet long will expand as follows, the figures at the left being the temperature of the pipe when filled, and the headings of the columns in the center the degrees of heat in the pipes in operation:

Temperature At start	In Operation 180°	215°	Exp's'n
Zero	1.44	1.72	inches
32	1.18	1.47	inches
64	.93	1.21	inches

Under favorable conditions one square inch of grate surface is sufficient for one square foot of direct radiation in medium sized boilers.

There are a great many other facts in the book which anyone must know to be a thorough heating man.

RADIATING SURFACE OF PIPE.



It is evident, from the nature of many inquiries received by the Review, that a considerable number of florists have no accurate way of estimating the extent of radiating surface in a specified length or quantity of piping. In other words, they have no way of estimating what amount of piping is necessary to supply the required radiation. When they are informed that a certain size of greenhouse requires a certain number of square feet of radiation, they are still in doubt as to how much piping they must install.

The following table shows the amount of radiating surface, expressed in fractions of a square foot, in each lineal foot of pipe of the sizes commonly used:

Size Pipe.	Sq. Ft.	Size Pipe.	Sq. Ft.
1-inch	.344	2½-inch	.753
1¼-inch	.435	3-inch	.916
1½-inch	.497	3½-inch	1.047
2-inch	.622	4-inch	1.178

By means of this table, it is easy, of course, to compute the radiating surface in any stated quantity of piping. In 125 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe, for instance,

The Market.

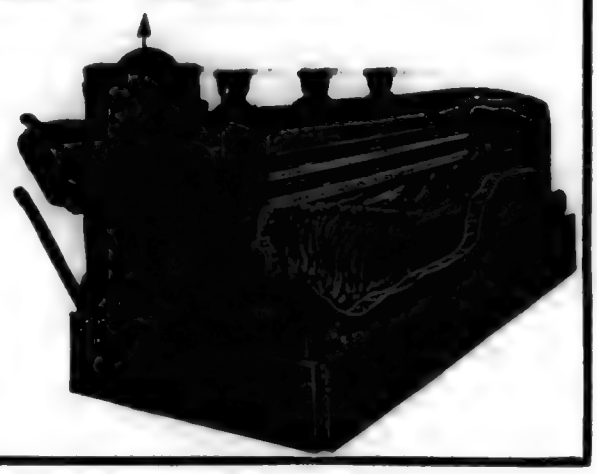
There has not been much doing here, outside of funeral work. The supply of flowers is good, and the usual prices prevail. Violets are still coming in, but the warm weather has played havoc with them. There will not be a big supply for Easter. Bulbous stock is quite plentiful. There will be a good supply of flowering plants and bulbous stock for Easter. Lilies will be none too plentiful.

Various Notes.

Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, will have about 500 plants of lilies, also about 2,000 pots of tulips, daffodils, etc., to sell this week. He is cutting some magnificent spikes of Dutch hyacinths. He has about 5,000 plants of Winsor and other varieties to cut from.

William P. Peirce recently had a good decoration order for a wedding. He used lots of Easter lilies, daffodils, tulips and other pot plants, and bay trees. Julius Rozitsky was the artist. The decoration was tasteful and unique.

E. Y. Peirce is still cutting some nice single violets.



R. H. Woodhouse has a nice batch of bulbous stock for Easter.

William E. Mosher is sending out some fine strong cuttings of mums to the trade.

MONTREAL.

The Market.

Everybody is rushing about getting ready for Easter and we expect a greater business than ever. All kinds of plants and flowers are doing their best to help us out, and many of the stores are now lovely bowers of beauty and brightness.

The weather could be improved upon, as it is yet a little cool, with frost at night. The roads are in bad condition, with mud, slush and snow, which makes the delivery of plants in good shape a difficult matter. In many places the fields and roads are under water and the river is still rising.

Various Notes.

Hall & Robinson are showing some splendid ramblers and azaleas, and though they have had a fine trade all winter they hope to be busier this Easter.

Campbell's are rushing with their numerous large orders, as usual. They have some fine Beauties in pots, besides many pretty designs and novelties, ready for the holidays.

F. C. Smith, gardener to Sir Wm. Van Horne, deserves great praise for the glorious array he has had in his greenhouses the last few weeks.

Miss Murray's store, of course, is always the pink of perfection. We regret that she has been ill lately. She is now able, however, to attend to her duties.

Campbell's popular young lady, Miss Legg, leaves us next week to be married. The best wishes of the trade go with her, as she will be greatly missed by us all.

Mrs. White reports business as good and the outlook bright.

J. Bennett, of Lachine, has his houses filled with all the usual Easter goods, as well as new things. His houses of violets, sweet peas and Beauties are in splendid bloom.

Miss M. Carmichael, an ex-florist of this city, paid us a flying visit last month.

HIGHTSTOWN, N. J.—Tracy H. Norton will build a large violet house during the summer.

ALBION, N. Y.—Julian T. Duquette, whose greenhouses were burned some weeks ago, will rebuild them, using steel and cement in the construction.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Trade for March showed an increase over last year, and last week was quite active.

The weather today, April 5, is bright and balmy, the most springlike this year, and will help to make flowers more plentiful. There seems to be plenty of everything in sight, and plants, especially, are seen in greater quantities and finer than ever before.

It is not likely that there will be any fancy prices, as money seems to be too scarce in this vicinity to risk booming prices. In fact, several of the retailers have advertised "No increase in prices for Easter."

Some of the stores have so many good things in plants, which must be sold, that it is hard for a customer to buy cut flowers, as the salesmen work in plants whenever possible.

The wholesale houses report that stock is selling much cheaper than ever before for Easter. Lilies have been received in such quantities that they have been crowding the market somewhat. Beauties are the only flowers that seem at all short and no one seems to worry much about them. One retailer says the strange part of it is that the people seem willing to take anything you have, if it is cheap enough.

The installation of the new city officials April 5 made a big demand for flowers. The city offices were made to look like a flower exhibit. Hoo-Hoo.

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

The business done last week was satisfactory, both wholesale and retail. Roses and carnations are good and are the best sellers. Quantities of bulbous stock are on the market and the demand is satisfactory. There seems to be plenty of everything for Easter this year, except lilies. Azaleas are good this year. Crimson Ramblers, Dorothy Perkins and other roses are good and plentiful. Genistas, rhododendrons, marguerites, spiræas and hydrangeas are also seen in good quantities.

Some of the florists have good primulas, cinerarias and other plants in fine shape for Easter.

The weather is fine, with plenty of sunshine.

Various Notes.

S. S. Kelley has good geraniums and other spring plants that are fine for Easter and the spring sales. He is also cutting good callas and carnations.

Quantities of Easter and spring plants are to be seen at the J. A. Keller estate, such as azaleas, hydrangeas, spiræas, rhododendrons, roses and bulbous stock in pots and pans. They will also have a good crop of roses and carnations.

Anderson & White have a nice line of Easter and spring plants at their greenhouses on Georgetown street. They are preparing for a big spring business this year. Blue Grass.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business was good last week, especially during the latter part. While there was a fair quantity of flowers coming into this market, there was a lively demand and by Saturday night the wholesale houses were sold out clean. The prices, too, showed a tendency to go up to somewhere near where they ought to be, and so, all in all, there was a very satisfactory business.

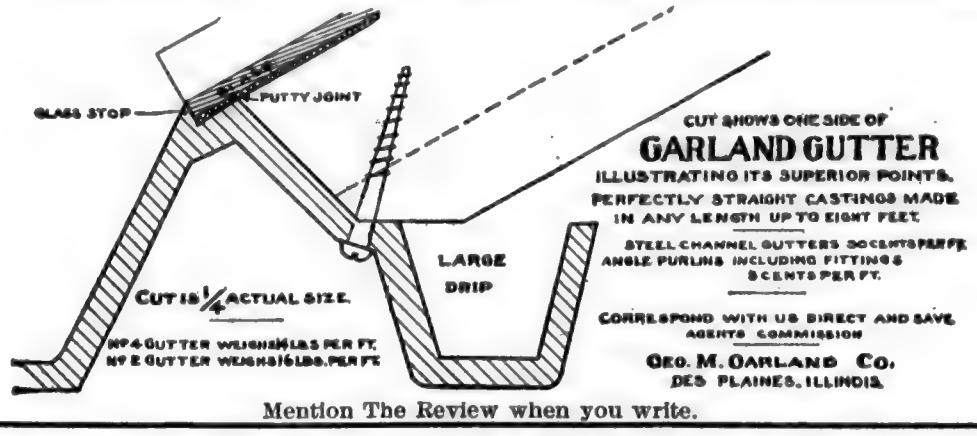
Everything looks promising for Easter, except that there may not be as much stock as could be used to advantage. We are expecting a business that will clean out everything in sight and at good prices. There will not be the surplus in bulbous flowers this year that we had last; that is certain. George & Allan, the largest forcers of bulbous flowers in this locality, will not have anywhere near the quantity of this class of goods that they had last year. What they have will be good and will be sold out clean and at good prices.

Various Notes.

William Murphy has a large quantity of white stocks that ought to be fine property. He is also well supplied with carnations and expects to take good care of all Easter orders.

J. A. Peterson reports a fine sale on all the plants which he grows. He had some extra good lilies in pots and they were sold some time ago.

The growers in the flower market are getting things into shape for the harvest that they always reap at Easter. Last Saturday the market was well filled and a fine business is reported. Saturday of this week will be the time, though, and the market will be a regular flower and plant show.



M. Shattls, of Lion & Co., was a caller.

Our Post Proposition

WE have done a deal of Post experimenting in our time and although a great many growers still favor our Cast Iron Foot Pieces, we are thoroughly convinced that our new One Piece Guaranteed Wrought Iron Post, set in concrete, is the best.

From the Ice-Clearing Plate down, it is in one solid piece, and has an angle post base bolted to the bottom, to give an extra sure hold for the concrete.

The posts are quick to set, cast scarcely any shade, and last. Speaking of their lasting, we dug some up last fall in a house at Scarborough, N. Y., which has been up going on twenty-five years, and those posts were just as good as ever. So that was one of the things that greatly influenced us in getting back to their use again.

Of course, a steel post wouldn't last five years, so we get a guarantee from the mills that every pound of post iron we buy is good, old-fashioned Wrought Iron. They don't cost any more than the wooden posts either, because just half as many are needed, and so it takes only half the time to set them.

When you build, first be sure your posts are right and your eave right, and the rest is not so important.

We will sell you materials complete for your house, or just the Guaranteed Wrought Iron Posts and Ice-Clearing Plate with Sash Bar Clasps attached.

This post and eave is the same one we use in both our Semi-Iron and Sectional Iron Frame House. See Page 4 of the Handy Hand Book.

THE GOOD & REESE CO., The Largest Rose Growers in the World. Springfield, Ohio

Dreer's Hardy Perennials

Largest assortment of desirable varieties. Plants of proper size to give best immediate results. For complete list of varieties see our current wholesale list.

Many planters not thoroughly familiar with this class of plants have an idea that nothing but a large, field-grown clump will give satisfactory returns for the season. This, as experience has taught us, is in most instances a mistake. A vigorous plant of proper size will, in nearly every case, give quicker and better returns than the best so-called "field clumps" that can be procured. It will be noticed that the majority of the stock offered in this list is described as being 3, 4 or 5-inch pots. This does not necessarily mean that the plants have been altogether pot-grown, but that they have been field-grown and dug and potted up during the fall and early winter months, and such stock can be planted, even late in the spring, with practically no loss, which, in the case of clumps, is often quite serious.
